were of the house of Ahab: For they were his counselers after the death of his father, to his destruction. And he walked after their counsel, & went with Jehoram sonne of Ahab kynge of Israell, to fight against Hazaell kynge of Syria, at Ramoth in Gylead: and the Syrians smote Jehoram. And he returned to be healed i Jezrel of the woundes which were geuen him at Rama, when he fought with Hasael kynge of Syria. And Ahaziahu the sonne of Jehoram kynge of Juda, wente downe to see Jehoram the sonne of Ahab at Jezrell, bycause he was diseased. And it came of God, that Ahaziahu shoulde be dispised for his comming to Jehoram: for when he was come, he went out with Jehoram against Jehu the sonne of Nimsi, * whome the LORD had anoynted to destroy the house of Ahab. And so it came to passe that whan Jehu was executynge iustyce vpon the house of Ahab, and had founde the Lordes of Juda and the sonnes of the brethren of Ahaziahu that wayted on Ahaziahu, he slewe them. * And soughte Ahaziahu, & they caughte hym where he was hyd in Samaria, and brought hym to Jehu. And when they had slayne hym, they buryed hym: bycause (said they) he is the sonne of Jehosaphat, which sought the lord with al his heart. And the house of Ahaziahu, had no power to kepe stylle he kyngdome. * But whē Athaliahu the mother of Ahaziahu sawe that her sonne was deade, she arose and destroyed all the kynges seed in the kynred of the house of Juda. And Jehosabeth the doughter of the kynge tooke Joas the sonne of Ahaziahu, and stale hym frome amonge the kynges sonnes that were slayne, and put hym & his nource in a preuye chābre. And so Jehosabeth the doughter of kynge Jehoram the wife of Jehoiada the prieste, and the suster of Ahaziahu hyd hym frome Athaliahu that he was not slayne. And so he was wyth them hyde in the house of God sixe yeare. And Athaliahu raygned ouer the lande.

¶ The. xxiii. Chapter.

AND * in the seuēth yere Jehoiada being bolde, toke the captaynes of hūdredes, Azariahu the son of Jehorā, & Ismael the son of Jehohanam, Azariahu son of Obed, Maaziahu the son Adaiahu, and Elisaphat the sonne of Zichri, and made a bonde with them. And they wente aboute in Juda, and gathered the Leuytes oute of all the cityes of Juda, and the auncient fathers of Israell: and they came to Jerusalem. And all the congregacyon made a bonde with the kynge in the house of God. And he sayde vnto them: beholde, the kynges sonne muste raygne, * as the Lorde hath sayd of the children of Dauid. This is it therefore that ye shall doe: The thirde parte of you shall (on the Sabboth) come to the priestes, Leuites, and kepers of the porches. And another thyrde parte shalbe by the kynges house, and another thirde parte shalbe at the gate of the foundacion, and all the people shall be in the * courtes of the house of the lord. But there shal none come into the house of the Lord, saue the priestes, & they that ministre vnto the Leuites. They shall go in, for they are holye: But all the people shall kepe the watch of the lord, & the Leuites shal cōpas the kige roūde about, & euery mā shal haue his weapon in hys hande: and what other man so euer doeth come into the house of the Lorde, he shall be slayne: and let them be with the kynge, when he cometh in, and when he goeth oute. And the Leuites and all Juda dyd accordynge to all thynges that Jehoiada the prieste had commanded, and tooke euerye man hys men, that came in on the Sabboth, with them that went out on the Sabboth daye: Neyther dyd Jehoiada the prieste lette the companies departe. And Jehoiada the preest deliuered to the captaynes of hundredes, speares, shyldes, and buckelars, that had pertayned to kynge Dauid, and were in the house of God. And he set al the people, euery mā haupynge his weapon in his hand frome the ryghte syde of the temple, to the lefte syde of the tēple, alonge by the aulter and the temple, rounde aboute the kynge. And they brought oute the kynges sonne, and put vpon hym the crowne, and * the testimony, (and they gaue him in his hād, the law that was to be kept) & made hym kynge. And Jehoiada and hys sonnes annoynted him, & sayde: God saue the kyng. When Athaliahu hearde the noyse of the people, runnynge and praysyng the kyng, she came to the people in to the house of the LORDE. And she loked, and beholde, the kynge stoode in hys place, at the entrynge in, and the Lordes and the trompettes were by the kynge, and al the people of the lande reioyced, blowynge wyth trompettes, and dyd playe wyth instrumentes of musycke, and taught to synge & prayse. But Athaliahu rente her clothes, and sayde: treason, treason. And Jehoiada the prieste wente oute to the captaynes of hundredes that were gouernours of the hoste, and sayde vnto them: Haue her oute without the doze of the temple: And whoso foloweth her, lette him be slayne wyth the swearde, For the prieste sayde that they

And Joas dyd that which was right in the sight of the Lorde all the dayes of Jehoiada the preiste. And Jehoiada toke him two wiues, & he begat sonnes and doughters. And it chaunsed after this that Joas was mynded, to renewe the house of the Lorde, and he gathered together the preistes and the Leuytes, and sayde to them: go oute vnto the cityes of Jude, and gather of all Israell money, to repayre the house of youre GOD from yere to yere, and se that ye haste the thige: howbeit the Lewites were slacke. And whē they saw that ther was much money, the kynges scrybe (and one appoynted by the hye preiste) came, and emptied the chest and tokē it, & caried it to his place againe: thus they dyd daye by daye, and gathered much money. And so the workmē wrought, and the worcke mended thorowe their handes and they made the house of GOD as it ought to be, and strengthed it. And when they had finished it, they brought the reste of the money before the kynge and Jehoiada, and therwith wer made vessels for the house of the Lord: euen vessels to ministre with all, and to serue for burntofferinges chargers and spones, vessels of golde and syluer. And they offered burntofferinges in the house of the Lorde continually all the dayes of Jehoiada. But Jehoiada waxed olde, and dyed full of dayes. And when the yere was out, it foretumed, that the host of Syria came vp agaynste hym: & they came against Juda and Jerusalem, and destroyed all the lordes of the people from amonge the people, and sent all the spoyle of them vnto the kynge to Damasco, for the Syrians came with a smal company of men, and the Lord deliuered a very great host into their hand, because they had forsaken the Lord God of theyr fathers. And he dyd that whiche is eyghe in the eyghte of the Lorde, but not with a perfecte herte. And as soone as he was setled in the kingdome, he slew hys seruauntes, that had killed the kynge hys father. But he slewe not theyr childzen, because it is written thus in the law and boke of Moses, where the Gen.24.c. And 25 Amaziahu gathered Juda together, and made them captaynes ouer thousandes, and ouer hundredes, accordynge to the houses of theyr fathers, throughoute all Juda and Ben Jamin. And he numbred them frō twentye yeare olde and abone, and founde among them, thre hundred thousande chosen men, able to go to battell, and that couldе handle speare and shylde. He hyred also an hundred thousande stronge fyghtynge men oute of Israell, for an hundred talentes of syluer. And there came a man of God to him, and sayde: O kynge, let not the armye of Israell come with thee: for the Lorde is not with Israell, neyther with all the house of Ephraim. But yf thou wylte nedes be faythlesse, come on, and take the battayle in hande, and God shall make the fall before the enemye. For God hathe power to helpe, and to caste downe. And Amaziahu saide to the man of God: what shall we do then, for the hundred talentes, which I haue geuen for the hoaste of Israell? The manne of God answered: the Lorde is able to geue thee muche more then they be. And Amaziahu seuered theym to the armye that was come to hym oute of Ephraim, to go home agayne. Wherefore they were exceadynge wroth with Juda, and returned home in great angre. And Amaziahu toke hearte, and carped oute hys people, and wente to the salte valley, and 4.re.14.f * smote of the childzen of Seir, tenne thousande. And other tenne thousande did the childzen of Juda take alyue, and carped theym vnto the toppe of a rocke, and caste them downe from the toppe of the rocke that they all to burste: but the soudyers of the armye whiche Amaziahu sent away, that they should not go with his people to battayle, fell vpon the cytyes of Juda, from Samaria vnto Bethoron, and smote thre thousande of them, and toke muche spoyle. D And it chaunced, after that Amaziahu was come from the slaughter of the Edomites, he brought ire the Gods of the childzen of Seir, and set them vp to be hys Gods, and bowed hym selfe before theym: and burned incense vnto theym. Wherefore the Lorde was wroth with Amaziahu, and sente vnto him a prophete: which said vnto hym: why haste thou sought re the Gods of the people, whiche were not able to deliuer their owne people out of thine handes? And it chaūced, 16 that as the prophete talked with hym: the kynge sayde vnto hym: haue men made the of the kynges councell, ceasse, why wylte thou be beaten? And the prophete ceased, and sayde: I am sure that God is mynded to destroye thee, because thou haste done thys, and agreest not vnto my counsell.

And he went to batell agaynſte the Philiſtines, and brake downe the wall of Geth, & the wal of Jabne, and the wal of Aſdod, and built citꝛes about Aſdod, and amonge the Philiſtines. And God holpe hī againſt the Philiſtines, and agaynſt the Arabians that dwelt at Gurbaall, & Hammehunim. And the Ammonites gaue tribute to Vzia, and his name ſpꝛadde abꝛoade euen to the entꝛynge in of Egypte: For he playde the man exceadyngly. Moꝛeouer, Vzia buylte towers in Jeruſalem by the coꝛner gate, & by the valeye gate, and at the turnynge of the walle, and made them ſtronge. And he built towers in the wilderneſs, and digged many welles. For he hadde muche catel in the valleyes and plaines, plowmen & vineꝛeſſers in the mountaynes, and in Charmel. for he loued huſbādꝛie. And Vzia had an hooſte of fyghtinge men that wente to warre in the armye, accoꝛding to the numbꝛe of their office vnder the hande of Jeiell the Scꝛybe, & Maaziahu the ruler, & vnder the hande of Ananiahu, whiche was one of the kynges loꝛdes. But in his ſtrength, his heart aꝛoſe to his deſtꝛuctiō: foꝛ he tranſgꝛeſſed againſt the Lorde hys God, and went into the temple of the Lorde, to burne ſcēſe vpon the aulter of incenſe. And Aſarias the pꝛieſte wente in after hym, and with him foure ſkoꝛe pꝛieſtes of the Lorde, that were baldaunt men. Come therefoꝛe out of the ſactuary, foꝛ thou haſt tꝛeſpaſſed and it is no woꝛſhyp to the beſoꝛe the lord God. And so Vzia slept with his fathers, and they buried hym with hys fathers, in the felde of the buriall whiche was beside the Sepulchres of the kynges. For they sayde: he is a leper. AHaz was *.xx. yere old when he begā to raigne, & raygned .xvi. yere in Jerusalē, & he did not that which is right in the sighte of the Lorde, as did his father Dauid: For he walked in the wayes of the kynges of Israel, & made molten ymages for Baalim. He offered incense in the valleye of the sonne of Hinnom, and *burnt his children in fire, after the abhominations of the heathen, whome the Lorde caste oute before the chyldren of Israell. He offered also, and burnt incense in hyllaulters, and on mountaynes, & vnder euerye grene tree. Wherefore the Lorde hys God delyuered hym into the hande of the kynge of the Sirians: which bet hym, and caryed awaye a greate multytude of his, captiue, and brought them to Damascon. And he was delyuered into the hande of the kynge of Israell, whych smote hym with a greate slaughter. For Pekah the sonne of Remaliahu slue in Juda an hundred and twentye thousande in one daye, whiche were all lyghtynge men: And that because they had forsaken the Lorde God of their fathers. And Zichri a myghtye man of Ephraim, slue Maaziahu the kynges sonne, & Azrica the gouernour of the house and Elcana that was next to the kynge. And the children of Israell toke prisoners of their brethren, two hundred thousande, women, sonnes, and doughters, and caryed awaye muche spoyle of them, and brought the spoyle to Samaria. But there was a prophete of the Lordes (whose name was Obed) and he wente oute before the hoste that came to Samaria, and sayd vnto them: Beholde, because the Lorde God of youre fathers is wroth with Juda, he hath deliuered them into youre hande. And ye haue slayne them with cruelnesse, that reacheth vp to heauē. And nowe ye purpose to kepe vnder the children of Juda, and Jerusalē, and to make them bondmen, & bondwomē. And do ye not lade your selues with sinne, in the sight of the Lorde your God? Nowe heare me therefore, & deliuer the captiues againe, which ye haue taken of youre brethren: for els shall the great wrath of god be vpon you. Wherefore, certayne of the heades of the children of Ephraim, as Azaria the sonne of Jehohanā. Berechiahu the sonne of Meshillemoth, and Jehezkiahu the sonne of Sallum, and Amasa the sonne of Hadlai, stode vp against them that came from the warre, & sayde vnto them: Bringe not in the captiues hither. For wher as we haue offended towarde GOD alreadye, ye entende to adde more to oure sinnes & trespace. For our trespace is great alreadye, & there is a fearce wrathe agaynste Israell. And vpon that, the men of armes lefte the captiues & the spoyle before the lordes & all the cōgregaciō. And the mē that were nowe rehearsed by name, rose vp, & toke the prisoners, & with the spoyle clothed all that were naked among them, and arayed them and shoed them, & gaue them to eate, & to drinke, & annoynted them, & caried al that were feble of thē vpō asses, & brought thē to Jericho (the citye of Palmetrees) to their brethren, & thē they returned to Samaria agayne. * At the same tyme dyd king Ahaz send vnto the kynges of Assur, to haue helpe of them. And the Philistines inuaded the cyties in the low countrey, & toward the south of Juda: & toke Wethsames, and Ialon, and Gederoth, & Socho, with the townes longing therto. and Thimna with the townes of the same: Gimso, and the townes therof, and dwelte there. For the Lorde brought Juda low, because of Ahaz kynge of Juda, whiche made Juda naked & transgressed sore agaynste the Lord. And

For Ahaz toke away a portion out of the house of the Lorde, & out of the kynges house, & ont of the Lordes houses, & gaue vnto the kyng of the Assirians, & yet it helped hī not. And in the very time of his tribulacyō, dyd kyng Ahaz trespace yet more agaynst the Lorde. For he offered vnto the Gods of thē of Damasco, whyche bet him, and he said: because the Goddes of the kynges of Siria helpe theym. therfore will I offer to them. that they may helpe me also. But they were his destructiō, & the vstructiō of all Israell. And Ahaz gathered

The rest of his actes & his workes, first and last: beholde, they are wrytten in the boke of the kynges of Juda & Israel. And Ahaz slept with his fathers, and they buried hym in the cyte of Jerusalem: but broughte him not vnto the sepulchres of the kynges of Israel. And Hezekia his sonne raygned in his stede.

4.kī.18 a HEzekia begame to raygne, when he was. v. and twenty yere olde, & raigned nyne and twentye yere in Jerusalem. And his mothers name was Abia the doughter of zacharias, and he did that which was righte in the sighte of the Lord, in all poyntes as did Dauid his father. He 2.pa.28 b ✶opened the dores of the house of the Lord (in the first yeare, and firste moneth of his raigne) and repaired them. And he broughte in the priestes and the Leuites, and gathered them together into the east stretе: and said vnto theym. Heare me ye Leuites, and nowe be sanctified, and halow the house of the Lorde God of your fathers, bring fylthinesse oute of the holye place. For our fathers haue trespaced, and done euyll in the eyes of the Lorde oure God: and haue
B forsaken him, and turned awaye theyr faces from the habitacion of the Lorde, and turned their backes on it. And beside that, they haue shut vp the dores of the porche, and quenched the lampes, and haue neither burne incense nor offered burntofferynges in the holy place vnto the God of Israell. Wherfore the wrathe of the Lorde fell on Juda, and Jerusalem: & he hathe broughte thēto trouble, to be wondred on, & to be hissed at, euen as ye se with your eyes. For lo, our fathers were ouerthrowen with the swearde, and oure sonnes, our doughters, and oure wyues were caryed awaye captyue for the same cause. And nowe it is in my herte, to make a couenaunte wyth the Lorde God of Israell, that he maye turne awaye hys heuye indignacyon from vs.
2.ch.13.a Now therfore my sonnes, be not negligēt, for the Lorde ✶ hathe chosen you to stande before him, & for to mynistre and serue him, and to burne incense. Then the Leuites C arose: Mahath the sonne of Amasai, and Joel the sonne of Asariahu of the chyldren of the Cahathites. And of the sonnes of Merari, Kis, the sonne of Addi, and Asariahu the sonne of Jehaleleel. And of the sonnes of the Gersonites: Joah the sonne of Semma and Eden, the sonne of Joah, & of the sonnes of Elizaphā, Simri, & Jehiel. And of the sonnes of Asaph, Zechariahu, & Mathaniahu. And of the sonnes of Heman, Jehiel and Simei. And of the sonnes of Jeduthun, Semaia and Uziel. And they gathered their brethren, and purified them selues, and came accordynge to the commaundement of the kynge, and the wordes of the Lord, for to clense the house of the Lorde. And the Priestes went into the inner partes of the house of the Lorde, to clense it, and broughte out all the vncleanesse that they founde in the temple of the Lorde, into the courte of the house of the Lorde. And the Leuites toke it, to cary it oute into the broke Cedron. They began D me the fyrste daye of the fyrst moneth to purifye, and the eyghte daye of the moneth came they to the porche of the Lorde: and purged the house of the Lorde in eyghte dayes, and in the fyftene daye of the fyrste moneth they made an ende. And they went in to Hezekia the kyng, and sayde: we haue clensed all the house of the Lorde, the aulter of burntofferynge, with all his vessels, and the shewbreadtable with all his appurtenell: and all the vessels whiche kynge Ahaz did caste a syde when he raygned, & transgressed, them we haue prepared and sanctified: and beholde, they are before the aulter of the Lorde. And Hezekia the kynge E rose early, and gathered the Lordes of the cyte, and went vp to the house of the Lord. And they brought seuen oxen, seuen rāmes, seuen hye, & seuen hegoates, to be a synne offrynges for the kyngdome, for the sanctuarye, and for Juda. And he commaunded the prestes, the sonnes of Aaron, to offer them on the aulter of the Lorde. And they slue the ores, and the Prestes receaued the bloud, and sprinckled it vpon the alter: like wyse, when they hadde slaine the rammes, they sprinkled the bloude vpon the alter: they slue also the shepe, and they sprynkled the bloude vpon the aulter. And then they brought forth the hegoates for the synneoffrynge, before the kynge and the congregacyon, and put their handes vpon them. And the prestes slewe them, and wyth the bloude of them they clensed the aulter, to make satisfiacyon for all Israell: for the kynge commaunded, that the burntoffryng, and the synneoffryng shoulde be made for all Israell. And set the Lenites in the house of the Lorde wyth symbales, Psalteries & harpes, * accordynge to the commaundemente of Dauid, and of Gad the kynges sear, & Nathā the prophete. For so was the cōmaūdemēt of the Lord. thorowe the hande of his prophetes. And the Leuites stoode, hauynge the instrumentes of Dauid, and the Prestes helde the trompetes. And Hezekia commaunded to offer the burntoffrynge vpon the aulter. And when the burntoffrynge beganne, the songe of the Lorde beganne also, and the trompetes with the instrumētes that were ordeyned by the hande of Dauid kynge of Israel. And al the congregacyon worshipped, syngyng a song, & blowing with the trompetes, & al this cōtinued, vntyl the burntoffrynge was fynyshed. And when they had made an ende of offrynge, the kynge and al that were present with hym, bowed themselues, and worshipped. And Hezekia the kyng, and the Lordes spake to the Leuites to prayse the Lorde with the wordes of Dauid, and of Asaph the sear. And the Leuites sange prayse & with gladnesse, and the other bowed themselues, and worshipped. And Hezekia answered, and sayde: nowe ye haue consecrate youre handes to the Lord: go to therfore, & bynge in the sacrifyces and thanckeoffrynges into the house of the Lorde. And the congregacyon brought in the sacrifyces, and thanckeoffringes, burntofferinges, as many as were of a fre lyberall herte. And the numbre of the burntoffringes whiche the congregacion brought, was. lxx. Oxen, an hundred rammes, and two hundred shepe, whyche were all for the burntoffryng of the Lord. And there were dedycated syxe hundred Oxen, and three thousande shepe. And the Prestes were to fewe, to sley al the burntoffrynges, but their brethren the Lenites dyd helpe the, til they had ended the worke, and vntyl the prestes were sanctified. For the Leuites were purer herted to be sanctified then the Prestes. And thereto the burntoffrynges, were manye, with the fat of the peaceoffrynges and the drynckoffrynges that belonge to the burntoffryng. And so the seruice pertaynyng to the house of the Lord, was fynyshed. And Hezekia reioyced, and all the people, that God hadde made the folck so ready: and that the thyng was so soone done.

AND Hezekia sent to al Israell, and Juda, & wrote letters to Ephraim, and Manasse, that they should come to the house of the Lord at Jerusalē, and offer Passeouer vnto the Lorde God of Israell. And the kynge helde a councell wyth hys lordes, and all the congregacyon of Jerusalem, * to kepe the feaste of Passeouer in the seconde moneth. For they coulde not kepe it at that tyme: because the Prestes were not sanctifyed sufficyentlye, neyther was the people gathered together to Jerusalem. And the thynge pleased the kynge and al the congregacyon. And they decreed that it shoulde be proclaymed thorowoute all Israell from Berſabe to Dan, that they shoulde come, and holde the feast of Passeouer vnto the Lorde God of Israell, at Jerusalem: for they had not done it of a great season as they shoulde haue done by the lawe. So the postes wente wyth letters of the hande of the kynge, and of his Lordes thorowoute all Israell and Juda: and at the commaundement of the kynge, they sayde: ye chyldren of Israell, tourne agayne vnto the Lorde GOD of Abraham, Isahac and Israell, and let euerye one returne to the remnāt that are escaped you oute the hande of the kinges of Assur. And be not ye like your fathers, & your brethē which trespaced agaynste the Lorde God of their fathers, whu he gaue them vp to be destroyed, as ye se. And now be not ye stiffe necked lyke as wer your fathers, but yelde your selues vnto the Lorde, and entre into his holy place, whiche he hathe sanctifyed for euer: & serue the Lord your God, & the feercenesse of his wrath shall turne awaye from you. For if ye turne agayne vnto the Lorde, then shall your brethren & your children finde cōpassion in presence of the that toke them captyue, and they shall come again vnto this lande: * for the Lord your God is gracious & mercyfull, and will not turne away his face from you, if ye conuerte vnto him. And so the postes went frō citie to citie in the lāde of Ephraim & Manasse, euen vnto Zabulon. But they laughed the

And they ſlewe Paſſeouer the fourtenth daye of the ſeconde moneth. And the Prieſtes and Leuites, whiche were aſſhamed, ſanctified theym ſelues, and broughte in the burnte-offrynges vnto the houſe of the Lorde.

And they ſtoode in theyr offyce after theyr maner, and accordynge to the lawe of Moſes the manne of God. And the Prieſtes ſprynckled the bloude, whyche they receaued by the hande of the Leuites.

For there were manye in the congregacyon, that were not ſanctifyed, and the Leuites did ſley Paſſeouer for all that were not cleane, and that myght not execute the holye worcke of the Lorde. For manye of D the people, and verye manye oute of Ephraim, Manaſſe, Iſakar, and Zabulon were not clenſed, and yet dyd eate Paſſeouer agaynſte the lawe appoynted. Wherfore Hezekia prayed for them, and ſayde: the good Lorde be mercyful vnto the. For he ſet hys whole hearte, to ſeke the Lorde God, euen the God of hys fathers: but all the other dyd not ſo, accordynge to vnfayned holynelle. And the Lorde hearde Hezekia, and healed the people. And the children of Iſraell that were preſente at Ieruſalem, helde the feaſte of ſwete breade ſeuen dayes wyth great gladneſſe, and the Leuites and the Prieſtes prayſed, and magnyfyed the power of the Lorde daye by daye, vpon inſtrumentes. And Hezekia ſpake heartelye vnto all the Leuites that hadde vnderſtandyng, and were of a good mynde towarde the Lorde. And they dyd eate thorowout that feaſte, ſeuen dayes longe, and offered peaceoffrynges, and thanched the Lord God of theyr fathers. And the whole E aſſemble toke counſell, to do ſo other ſeuen dayes, and they helde thoſe ſeuen dayes wyth gladneſſe. For Hezekia kynge of Juda, toke out (from amonge hys cattell) for the congregacion a.M. yonge oxen, and vii.M. shepe. And the Lordes gaue out to the congregacyon a.M. yong oxen, and.x. thouſande ſhepe. And a greate numbre of the Prieſtes were ſanctyfyed. And all the congregacyon of Juda wyth the Prieſtes and Leuites, and all the congregacyō that came oute of Iſraell, and the ſtraungers that came oute of the lande of Iſraell, and that dwelte in Juda, reioyſed: & there was greate gladneſſe in Ieruſalem. For ſence the tyme of Salomon, the ſonne of Dauid, kynge of Iſraell, there was no ſuche ioye in Ieruſalem. And the prieſtes and the Leuites aroſe, and bleſſed the people, and theyr voyce was hearde of the Lorde, and theyr prayer came vp vnto heauē, his holy dwellynge place.

badde the people that dwelt in Ieruſalem, gene the part to the Prieſtes and Leuites, that they myghte ſubſtaunceyallye applye theym ſelues to the lawe of the Lorde. And as ſoone as the kynges commaundemente came abrode, the childrē of Iſrael brought aboundaunce of fyrſte fruytes, of corne, wyne, oyle, honye, & of all maner of frutes of the felde, and the tythes of all maner of thynges, brought they in plenteouſlye, and the children of Iſrael & Juda, that dwelte in the cyties of Juda, they alſo brought in the tythes of oxen and ſhepe, and other holye tythes whiche were conſecrate vnto the LORDE theyr GOD, they dyd offre and broughte theym all by heapes.

In the thyrde moneth they beganne to lay the heapes (in maner of a foundacyon) and finiſhed thē in the ſeuenth moneth. And when Hezekia, and the lordes came and ſawe the heapes, they bleſſed the Lorde and his people Iſrael. And Hezekia queſtioned wyth the Prieſtes and the Leuites concernynge the heapes. And Azaria the chiefe Priefte of the house of Zadock, answered hym, and sayde: Sence the people began to bringe the heaue offerynges into the house of the Lorde, we also haue had ynoughe to C eate, there remayned so much: for the Lorde hathe blessed his people, and thys heape is lefte. And Hezekia bad prepare the chambres in the house of the Lorde. And they dyd prepare them, and caryed in the fyrste frutes, the tythes, and the dedicat thinges faythfully. Ouer whiche Chonaniahu the Leuite had the rule, and Semei hys brother nert to him. And Jehiel, Azaziahu, Na-hath, Asael, Jerimoth, Josabad, Eliel, Jesmachiahu, Mahath and Banaiahu, were ouerseares ordeyned by Chonaniahu, and Semei his brother was an officer of Hezekia the kyng, and Azaria was the ruler of the house of God: vnto whō all these thynges belonged. And Chore the sonne of Imna the Leuite, porter of the Eastdore, had the ouersight of the thinges that were offered of a frewyll vnto GOD (and D were geuen in maner seuerallye vnto the Lorde) and ouer the thynges moste holy. And vnder his hande were Eden, Miniamin, Jesua, Semeiahu, Amariahu, Sechaniahu, in the cytyes of the Priestes appoynted of theyr fidelite to gene to their brethrē theyr porcyons, as well to the small as to the great. Excepte that to the males that were reckned from three yeare and aboue (amōg all that wente into the house of the Lorde) they shoulde geue daye by daye, for theyr ministracyon, and for theyr geuynge at-tendaunce, and for their dyuerse waytinges by course. And to the Prieastes and Leui-tes throwoute the housholde of theyr fathers, from twentye yeare and aboue, to wayte when theyr courses came. And to the families of all their babes, wiues, son-nes and daughters throwe all the congregacyon. For vpon the fydelyte of theym were the holye thynges bestowed. And to the children of Aaron, the priestes, whiche were in the feldes and Suburbes of theyr cyties, citie by citie, the men (whose names were expressed aboue) should gene porcions, euen to all the males amonge the priestes, and to all the Leuites, accordyng to theyr numbre. And of this maner dyd Hezekia throwoute all Juda, and wrought it that is good, and ryghte, and true, before the Lorde his GOD. And in all the workes that he beganne for the seruice of the house of God, for the lawe, and for the comman-dementes, he sought his God, and that dyd he with all his hert, and prospered.

The xxxii. Chapter.

AFter that, these dedes were faythfullye done, * Sennacherib kynge of Assur, came, and entred into Juda, and compassed the stronge cytyes, and thoughte to wynne them for hym selfe.
And so when Hezekia sawe that Sennacherib was come, and that he was purposed to fyghte agaynste Jerusalem, he toke counsell wyth hys lordes, and menne of myghte to stoppe the water of the fountai-hym. For there gathered manye of the people together, and stopte all the welles, and the broke that ranne throwe the myddes ges of Assur come, and fynde muche watere?

And Hezekia wente to lustelye, and buylte made ordynaunce vpon the towres, and to B throwe wal without, and repayred Millo in the cytye Dauid, and made manye dar-

Know ye not what I and my fathers haue done vnto the people of all landes?

Were the goddes of the people of other landes able or myghty to saue their landes oute of my hande? Whyche of all the goddes of those nacyons (that my fathers destroyed) coulde deliuer hys people oute of myne hande? And shall youre God be able to helpe you out of my hande? Wher fore now let not Hezekia deceyne you, nor per swade you of this faction, nor yet beleue him. For as no god amonge al nacions and kingdomes, was able to rid his people out of my hãr, & out of the hãde of my fathers.

How much lesse shall your goddes be able to kepe you out of my hãd? And yet mo thi ges did his seruauntes speake against the lord god, and against his seruaũt Hezekia.
And Sennacherib also wrote a letter, to raple on the Lord god of Israell, & spake a-gaynste him, sayinge: as the goddes of the nacyons of other landes haue not bene hable to delyuer theyr people oute of my hande: Euen so shal not the God of Heze-kias delyuer his people out of myne hande.
And they cryed wyth a loude voyce in the Iewes speache vnto the people of Jerusalem that were on the wall to feare them, and to make them fayntе harted and that they might so take the citie. And they spake against the God of Jerusalem, as agaynst the goddes of the nacyõs of the earth, which were the wozkes of the handes of men.

E But Hezekia the kynge, and the prophete Isai the sonne of Amoz, prayed againste

And Manasse slepte with his fathers, and they buried him in his owne house. And Amon hys sonne raygned in hys rowme. Amon was two and twentye yeare olde when he began to raygne, and raygned two yere in Jerusalem. But he dyd euell in the syghte of the Lorde, lyke as dyd Manasse hys father: for Amon sacrifyced to all the kerued ymages, whyche Manasse hys father had made, and serued them, and submytted not hym selfe before the Lorde: as Manasse hys father had mekened hym selfe. But Amon trespassed greatlye. And hys owne seruauntes conspired agaynst hym, & slue hym in hys owne house. But the people of the lande slue all them that had conspyred agaynst kynge Amon. And the same people of the lande made Josia hys sonne king in his rowme.

3. Esd. b. c

And when * the seuenthe Moneth came, & the children of Israel were now in theyr cities: the people came together (euen as one mā) vnto Jerusalem. And there stode vp Jesua the sonne of Josedec: and hys brethren the priestes, and Zorobabell the sonne of Salathiel, and hys brethren, and builded the aulter of the god of Israel, to offer burntoffrynges theron, as it is wrytten in the lawe of Moses the mā of god, and the aulter set they vpō his sockets (for there was a feareulnes among them, because of the nacions and landes) therfore they offred burntoffrynges there on vnto the Lorde * in the morynge and at euen. And they helde the feaste of tabernacles * as it is wrytten: and offered burnte sacrifyces daylye, accordynge to the numbre and custome, daye by daye. Afterwarde they offred dayly burntoffrynges also, and in the newe mones and in all the feaste dayes that were consecrate vnto the lord, & for all them which dyd (of theyr owne free wyll) offre vnto the Lorde. From the first day of the seuenth moneth began they to offre burnte sacrifyces vnto the Lord: euen when the foundacion of the temple of the Lorde: was not yet layde. They gaue money also vnto the masons & carpenters, and meate and drynche: & oyle vnto them of Zidon and of Tire, to bringe the Cedre tymber from Lybanus by sea vnto Joppa, accordinge to the graūt that they had of Cyrus the kynge of Persia.
In the seconde peare of theyr commynge vnto the place of the house of God at Jerusalem in the seconde moneth, began Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and Jesua the sonne of Josedec, and the remnaunte of their brethren the priestes and Leuites, and all they that were come out of the captyuyte vnto Jerusalem, and appoynted the Leuites from. xx. peare olde and aboue to se that the worcke of the house of the Lorde wente forwarde. And Jesua stode with his sonnes and brethrē: and Cadmiel with his sonnes, and the children of Juda, to gether the worckemen of the house of God, euen the children of Henadab wyth theyr children and theyr brethren the Leuites. And whē the builders laied the foundaciō of the temple of the lorde, the priestes stodein their arape, with trompettes. And the Leuytes the children of Asaph with cymbales: to prayse the lorde. * After the maner of Dauid kynge of Israell. And they sange together whē they gaue prayse and thanckes vnto the Lord, because he is gracious, and because his mercy endureth for euer vpon Israell. And all the people shouted loud in prayinge the lord, because the foundacion of the house of the lord was layde. Many also of the priestes & Leuites & auncyente fathers: whiche had sene the first house (when the foundacion of thys house was layde before theyr eyes) wepte wyth a loude voyce. And manye shouted wyth ioye, so that the noyse gaue a great sounde: in so much that the people coulde not dyscerne the ioyful sounde & gladnes, frō the noyse of the wepynge amonge the people: for the people shouted with a loude cryes and the noyse was hearde farre of.

geuē of the kynges house. And let the golde & syluer vessel of the house of God, whyche (Nabuchodonosor tooke out of the temple at Jerusalem, and broughte vnto Babilon) be restored, and broughte agayne vnto B the temple at Jerusalem to theyr place in the house of God. Gette you farre frome them therefore, thou Thabnai Captayne beyonde the water, and Starbuzanai, and youre counsaylers, and Apherscchei, whyche are beyonde the water, gette ye awaye frome them. Let the worcke of the house of thys God alone, that the Captayne of the Jewes, and theyr Elders may buylde the house of God in hys place. I haue commaunded what shall be done to the Elders of Juda for the buyldynge of the house of God, that there shal be dilygente dede taken of the kynges goodes, euen of the rentes beyonde the water, and geuen vnto the men, that they be not hyn-dred. And yf they haue nede of calues, rāmes, and lambes for the burntoffrynge of the God of heauen, wheate, salte, wyne, and oyle, after the custome of the prestes at Jerusalem, let the same be geuen them dayly without anye delaye: that they maye offre swete sauoures vnto the God of heuē, and praye for the kynges lyfe, and for hys children. And suche a cōmaundement haue C I geuen: that what man so euer he be that altereth thys worde, there shall a beame be taken frome hys house, and set vp, and he shall be hanged thereon, and hys house shalbe made a donghyl, for the same thig.
And the God that set hys name there, de-stroye all kynges and people that put to theyr hande to alter, and to breake downe the house of God, whyche is at Jerusalem.
I Darius haue commaunded: that thys be done with spede. Then Thabnai the captayne of the countrey beyonde the water, & Starbozanai wyth their counsaylers (to whom kynge Darius had sente) dyd theyr dilygence: And the elders of the Jewes builded, and they prospered thorowe the prophecyynge of Aggeus the Prophete, and Zacharī the sonne of Jodo: And they builded and layed vp the foundacion, accordynge to the commaundement of the God of Israell, and after the commaundement of Cyrus and Darius, and Artharxerses, kynges of Perſis. And the house was fyn-ysshed

nished the thyrde daye of the moneth Adar, euen in the sixte yeare of the raygne of 1.Es.7.b. kynge Darius. * And the children of Israell, the preestes, the Leuites: and the other chyldren of the captiuitie, helde the dedication of the house of GOD wyth ioye, and offered at the dedication of thys house of God: an hundred oxen: two hundred rammes: foure hundred Goates: and for the reconcylynge of all Israel twelue hegoates, accordynge to the number of the trybes of Israell: and set the preestes in their sundrye courses, and the Leuites in their dyuers offices, to minister vnto God at Jerusalem: as it is written in the boke of Moses.

And the chyldren of the captiuitie helde Passeouer vpon the fourteenth daye of the firste moneth: for the preestes and Leuites were purified, so that they were all cleane togither, & killed Passeouer for all the children of the captiuitie, and for their brethren the preestes, and for them selues. And the children of Israel which were come againe out of captiuitie, and all such as had seperated them selues vnto them from the filthines of the heathen of the lande: to seke the Lorde God of Israel, did eate, and held the feaste of vnleuened breade, seuen dayes with ioye: for the Lord had made them glad, and turned the herte of the kinge of Assur vnto them, to strengthen their handes in the worcke of the house of GOD, euen the God of Israell.

Exr.vii.8. was a perfect scribe in the lawe of Moses, * which the Lord God of Israel dyd geue. And the king gaue him al that he required because the hand of the Lord his God was vpon him. And there went vp certayne of the chyldren of Israel: of the preestes, Leuites, syngers, porters, and of the mynistrynes vnto Jerusalem, in the seuenth yeare of kynge Artaxerses. And he came to Jerusalem in the fifte moneth, euen in the seuenth yere of the kynge. For vpon the firste daye of the fyrste moneth, begaune he to goe vp from Babylon: and on the fyrste daye of the fyrste moneth, came he to Jerusalem, because the good hande of God was vpon hym. For Eldzas prepared his herte to seke the lawe of the Lorde, and to do it, & to teache the precepte and iudgemente in Israell. And thys is the coppe of the letter, that kynge Artharxerses gaue vnto Eldzas the preeste and scrybe: whyche was a wryter of the wordes and commaundements of the Lorde, and of hys statutes ouer Israell. Artharxerses a kynge of kynges. Vnto Eldzas the preeste and scrybe of the lawe of the GOD of heauen, peace and salutacyon. I haue commaunded, that all they of the people of Israell, and of the preestes, and Leuites in my realme (which are mynded of theyr owne good wyll to go vp to Jerusalem) go wyth thee: and therfore arte thou sent of the kynge, and of hys seuen counsaylers, to byseke Juda and Jerusalem, accordyng to the lawe of thy GOD, whyche is in thy hande: And that thou shouldest take with the, syluer and golde, whiche the kynge & hys counsaylers offre of their owne good wyll, vnto the God of Israell (whose habytacyon is at Jerusalē) and all the syluer and golde that thou canst fynde in all the countreye of Babylon, with it that the people offre of theyr owne good wyll, and the preestes geue for the house of theyr God which is at Jerusalem. C Take thou the same, and bye dylygently with the same money, oxē, rammes and lābes, wyth their meatoffrynges and dryncke offrynges, and thou shalt offre theim vpō the aulter of the house of youre God, which is at Jerusalem. And loke what it lyketh thee and thy brethren to do wyth the remnaunt of the money, that do after the wyll of youre God. And the vesselles that are gyuen the for the mynistracyon in the house of thy God, those delyuer thou before God at Jerusalem. And what so euer thynge more shall be nedefull for the house of thy god, which is necessary for the to spēd, thou shalt receaue the charges out of the kinges treasure house: I kynge Artharxerses haue commaunded all the treasurers beyonde the water, that loke what so euer Eldzas the preeste and scrybe, in the lawe of the God of heauen, requyreth of you, that ye fulfyll the same spedely, vntyll an hundred talentes of syluer, and vntyll an hundred quarters of wheate, and vntyll an hundred Barres of wyne, and vntyll an hundred * Bar- 3.Es.7.D.

of thy God, that is in thy hande) set iudges and arbyters (by my auctozytye) to iudge all the people that is beyonde the water, euen all suche as knowe the lawe of thy God: and thē that knowe it not: those men. Of the childzen of Bigual, Uthai and zabud, and wyth them seuentye men.

And I gathered them together by the water that runneth towarde Ahaua, and there aboode we thze dayes. And I loked amonge the people and the pziestes, and founde there none of the childzen of Leui.
Then I sente to Eliezer, to Ariel, Semeia, Elnathan, Iarib, Elnathan, Nathan, za-charye: and to Mesullam the rulers, and to Ioiarib, and Elnathan, whych were mē of vnderstandynge, and to those gaue I commaundemente: vnto Iddo the chefeste at Casphia, that they shoulde fetche vs ministers for the house of oure God, and I tolde them what they shoulde saye vnto Iddo: and to his bzethzen the Nethinims at Casphia. And (thozewe the good hande C of oure God vpon vs) they bzoughte vs a wyse man from amonge the childzen of Moholi, the sonne of Leui, the sonne of Israel: and Sarabia wyth hys sonnes and his bzethzen, euen eighteene. And Hasabia, and wyth hym Iesai of the childzen of Merari, wyth hys bzethzē, and theyz sonnes twentie. And of the Nethinims, whom Da uid and the pzinces gaue to ministre vnto the Leuites, two hundzed & twenty of Ne-thinims, whyche all were named by name. D And euen there at the water, beside Aha-ua I pzoclamed a fast, that we might humble our selues before oure God, and seke of hym a ryght way for vs, and for our childzen and for all oure substaunce. For I was ashamed to requyze of the king, soul-diers and horsemen, to helpe vs agaynste the enemy in the waye: but we sayde vnto the kynge: The hande of oure GOD is vpon all them that seke him, in goodnesse, and his dominion & his displeasure and wzath is agaynste all them that forsake him. So we fasted, and besoughte our god for this, and he hearde vs. And I tooke out twelue of the chiefe pziestes: Sarabia, and Hasa-bia, and ten of theyz bzethzen with them, and weyed them the syluer and golde, and vessels that were appoynted for the house of oure God, whyche the kynge and hys counsaylers and his Lozdes, and al Israel that were there at hād, had geuē together.
And I weyed vnto their hād syxe hundzed and fyftye talentes of syluer, and in syluer vessels an hūdzed talētes, and in golde, an hundzed talentes: twentie basens of gold, of a thousande peces: and two costly oznamentes of good bzasse, as cleare as golde: and I sayde vnto them: ye are consecrate vnto the Lozd, lyke as the vessels are holy also, and the golde and siluer are genen of a good wyll vnto the Lozde God of youre fathers. Watche ye, & kepe it: for ye shall weye it downe before the chefe pziestes and Leuites, and auncient fathers of Israel at Ierusalem

Jerusalem, in the treasurys of the house of the Lorde. Then toke the Priestes and Leuites the weyed syluer and golde, and bessell, to bryngе it to Jerusalem, vnto the house of oure God. And we brake vp, from the water of Ahaua on the twelueth daye of the fyrste moneth, to go vnto Jerusalem: and the hande of our God was vpon vs, and deliuered vs from the hande of the enemyes, and of suche as layed wayte for vs by the waye. And we came to Jerusalem, and abode there thre dayes. But on G the fourth daye was the syluer and golde and bessell weyed in the house of oure God by the hande of Meremoth, the sonne of Vria the Priestе, and with him was Eleazar the sonne of Phinehes, and with them was Josabad the sonne of Jesua, & Noadia, the sonne of Benoi, the Leuites. Accordynge to the numbre and weyghte of euerye one, was the weyghte all wrytten vp at the same tyme. And the chyldren of the captiuitie, whiche were come out of prison, offred burnt offerynges vnto the God of Israell, twelue bullockes for all Israell, fyre and nynete rammes, seuen and seuentie lambes, twelue hegoates for a synne offerynge, all to the burnteofferyng of the Lord. And they deliuered the kynges commissiō vnto the kinges officer, & to the captaynes that were on this syde the water. And they promoted the people, & the house of God.

A When these thinges wer done, the rulers came to me, & said: The people of Israel, and the priestes & Leuites are not seperated frō the people of the lāds (as touching their abhominacyōs) namely, of the Cananites, Hethites, Pherezytes, Jebusites, Ammonites, Moabites, Egyptians, & Amorites. * For they haue taken the doughters of the same to them selues, & to their sonnes, & the holie seede is myxed with the natiōs in the lande, and the hande of the princes & rulers hath bene principal in the trespasse. * And when I hearde this sayinge, I rente my clothes and my garmēt, & pluckt of the heere of my head, & of my beарde, & sat mournynge. And there resorted vnto me al suche as feared the wordes of the Lord god of Israel, because of the transgression of the people of the captiuity. And I sat mournyng vntil the euenyng sacrifice. And aboute the euenинge sacrifice, I arose vp from my heuinesse, & rent my clothes, & my raiment, and fel vpon my knees, and spred out my handes vnto the Lorde my God, and sayde. My God, I am ashamed, & dare not lift vp myne eyes vnto thee my God: for our wyckednesses are growen ouer oure heade: & oure trespasse is waxed great vnto the heauen. Since the tyme of our fathers, haue we bene in great trespasse vnto this day, * & because of oure wickednesses haue we & our kynges bene delyuered into the hand of the kinges of the naciōs, into the swerd, into captiuitie, into shame, & into cōfusiō of face: as it is to se this day. And now is there a litle, & sodayne gracyousnes come from the Lord our God, in caulynge some of vs to escape, & that he may gyue vs a naile in his holi place, & that our god may lyghte our eyes, and gyue vs a lytle lyfe to take breath in oure bondage. For we are bondmen, and oure God hath not forsaken vs in oure bondage, and hathe enclyned mercye vnto vs in the syght of the kinges of Persia, to geue vs life, to set vp the house of oure God, and to redresse the desolation thereof, and to gyue vs a wall in Juda and Jerusalem. And nowe, O oure God, what shall we saye after this? for we haue forsaken thy commaundementes, which thou haste commaunded by thy seruauntes the prophetes, sayinge. The lande vnto which ye goe to possesse, it is an vncleane lande, bycause of the fylthynesse of the people of the landes, whyche wyth theyr abhomynacyons haue made it full of vnclennesse on euery syde. * Therefore shall ye not geue youre doughters vnto theyr sonnes, and theyr doughters shall ye not take vnto youre sonnes, nor seke their peace and welth for euer, that ye maye be stronge and enioye the good in the lande, and that ye and youre chyldren may haue the enheritaunce of it for euermore. And after that all these thinges are come vpon vs (because of oure euyll dedes, and great trespasses) thou our God hast thrust downe our wyckednesses, and hast geuen vs a delyueraunce, (as it is come to passe this daye.) And if we tourne backe agayne, to let go thy commaundemētes, & make cōtract with the people of these abhominaciōs, wilt thou not thē be wroth at vs (& not without cause) tyl we be vtterly cōsumed, so that nothynge remaine, and tyl there be no dilyueraunce? O Lord God of Israell, thou arte ryghteous, for we remayne yet escaped as it is to se this daye. Behold also, in thy presence are we in oure trespasses, and because of it maye we not stande before the.

A And whē Esdras prayed after thys manner, & knowledged, wept, & laye before the house of God, there resorted vnto him out of Israel, a very great cōgregatiō of men & women & children: & the people wepte very sore. And Sechania the sonne of Jehiel, one of the children of Elā, answered: and sayd vnto Eldras: We haue trespalled against oure GOD, and haue taken straunge wyues of the people of the lande. Nowe there is hope yet in Israell concernynge this thynge: for now we wyl make a couenaunte with oure GOD, and put awaye all the wyues (and such as are borne of them,) accordynge to the counsail of the Lorde: and we wil be in the feare of the commaundementes of oure God, that we maye do accordynge to the lawe. Set the vp, for this matter belōgeth vnto the:

1. Esd. 9. a we also wyll be wyth the: be of good com-forte therfore, and do it. * Then rose Eldras: and toke an othe of the chefe priestes and Leuytes, and of all Israell, that they shoulde do accordynge to thys b worde: and they sware. And Eldras stode vp from before the house of God, and went into the chambre of Johanan the sonne of Eliasib. And when he came thither, he dyd eate no breade, nor dronke water, for he mourned, because of the transgression of the people that had bene in captiuitie. And they caused a proclamacyon to goe thorowout Juda and Jerusalem, vnto all the childzen which had bene in captiuitie, that they shoulde gather them selues together vnto Jerusalē. And that whosoeuer came not wythin thze dayes, accordynge to the deuyce of the rulers and elders, al his substaunce shoulde be forfet, and he shoulde be put oute from the congregacion of the captyue. Then all the men of Juda and Ben Jamin gathered them selues together vnto Jerusalem within thze dayes, euen the twentye daye of the nynth moneth: and all the people sate in the streete before the house of God, and trembled beyause of this matter, & for the rayne. And Eldras Deu. 7. a the priest stode vp, and sayde vnto them: Judi. 3. a * ye haue transgressed, and haue taken straunge wyues, to make the trespalle of Israell yet more: confesse nowe therefore vnto the Lorde God of youre fathers, and do hys pleasure, and seperate youre selues from the people of the lande, and from the straunge wynes. And all the congregacion answered, and sayde wyth a loude voyce: It shalbe so: and we wyll do as thou haste sayde. But the people are manye, and it is a raynie wether, & the people are to fainte to tarye wythoute in the streete, nether is thys a worcke of ane daye or two: for we haue offended herye sore in thys thynge.
Let oure rulers stande therefore in all the congregacion, and let al them which haue taken straunge wiues in oure cities: come at the tyme appoynted, and let the Elders of euery cytye and theyr Judges be wyth them, tyl they haue louened the wrathe of our God awaye from vs, concerninge this C matter. Then were appoynted Jonathan the sonne of Asahel, & Jahasia the sonne of Tekua, ouer this matter: And Mesullā and Sabathai the Leuytes helped them.
And the childzen of the captiuitie did euen so. And Eldras the priest, & the auncyente heades thorowe the house of their fathers, all men of greate fame, separated them selues, and sate them downe on the fyrste daye of the tenthe moneth, to examen the matter. And vntyl the fyrst day of the first moneth they were kinisch ynge the busines, with all the men that had taken straunge wiues. And amōge the childzē of the priestes there were men founde that had taken straunge wyues, namely, amonge the childzen of Jesua, the sonne of Josedec, and of his brethren, Maasiah, & Eliezer, Jarib, and Gedalia, and they gaue theyr handes there vpō, that they would put away their wiues, and for theyr trespalle offrynge together a rām for their trespalle. And amōg the childzen of Emer, Honany, & Zabadia.
Amonge the childzen of Harim, Maasia, Elia, Semeiah, Jehiel, & Vsia. Amonge the childzen of Pashur, Elioenai, Maasia, Jsmael, Nethanel, Jozabad and Elasa. Amonge the Leuites, Jozabad, Simei and Kelaia (whyche same is Kalithah) Pathahiah, Juda, and Eleazer. Amonge the D syngers, also Eliasib. And amonge the porters, Sellum, and Telem, and Vzi.
And of Jsrael. Amōge the childzē of Pharhos, Remia, Jeziah, Malchia, Miamin, Eliazar, Malchia, and Banaia. Amonge the chyldzen of Elam, Mathania, Zacharj, Jehiel, Abdi, Jerimoth, and Elia. Amonge the childzen of Zathu, Elioenai, Eliasib, Mathania, Jerimoth, Zabad, and Aziza. A monge the childzen of Bebai, Johohanan, Hanania, Zabai, and Athalai. Amonge the childzen of Beni, Mesullā, Malue, Adaiah, Jasub. Saal, and Jerimoth. Amonge the chyldzen of the captayne Moab, Adna, Chelal, Benaia, Masia, Mathania, Be-zelel, Bennui and Manasse. Amōge the chil dzen of Harim: Eliezer, Jezia, Malchia, Semeia, & Simeō, Benjamin, Malluch, Samaria. Amonge the childzen of Hasum, Mathanai, Mathathah, Zabad, Eliphelet, Jerenne, Manasse, and Semei. Amonge the childzen of Bani: Maadai, Amrā, Huel, Banea, Cheluhi, Badaiah, Vanuah, Maremoth, & Eliasib, Mathania, Mathanai, Jaesi, Bani, Beni, & Semeiah, Selemia, Nathan, Adaia, Machnadbai, Sasai, and Sarai, Asarel, Selemiahu, & Samariah, Sallum,

Saiam, Amarie, and Joseph. Amonge the childꝛē of Nebo, Jehiel, Mathathia, zabad Zabina, Jadai, Joell, and Banaia. All these had taken straunge wiues. And among the same, there were some that had childꝛen by the wyues.

¶ Thꝛ ende of the firste boke of Eldꝛas.

THe wordes of Nehemia the sonne of hachalia. It foꝛtuned in the moneth Chislen, i the. xx. yere, that I was i the castel at Susa: & Hanani one of my bꝛethꝛē came with certen mē of Juda, & I asked thē how the Jewes did, that were deliuꝛed & escaped frō the captiuite, & how it went at Jerusalē. And they said vnto me: the remnāt of the captiuite are ther in the land in great misfoꝛtune & rebuk. * The wal of Jerusalē also is brokē doune: and the gates therof are brent with fire. It foꝛtuned, that when I heard these wordes, I sat me doune & wept, and mourned certayne dayes, & fasted and prayed before the God of heauen, and sayd: O Lorde God of heauen, thou greate and terrible GOD, * thou that kepest couenaunte and mercye foꝛ them that loue thee, and obserue thy commaundementes, lette thyne eares herken, I beseche thee, and let thyne eyes beopē, that thou mayest heare the prayer of thy seruauntes, which I pray now before the day & nighte, foꝛ the childꝛē of Israell thy seruauntes, and knowledge the sinnes of the childꝛen of Israell, which we haue synned agaynst the. I and my fathers house haue synned: We haue bene vtterlye diseuered from thy law, and haue not kept thy commaundementes, statutes and lawes, which thou cōmaundedest thy seruaunte Moses. I beseche the cal to remēbraunce the woorde that thou cōmaundest thy seruaunte Moses, and saydest: ye wyl * transgresse, and * I will scater you abꝛode amonge the nacions. But yf ye turne vnto me, and kepe my commaundementes, and do them: though ye were caste out vnto the vttermoste parte of heauen, yet will I gather you from thence, and will bring you vnto the place that I haue chosen, to set my name there. They are thy seruauntes and thy people, whom thou hast deliuered ehowe thy great power & in thy mighty hande, O Lorde; I beseech the let thyne eare herken vnto the prayer of thy seruaunte, & to the prayer of thy seruauntes, whose delyte is to feare thy name, and let thy seruaunte prospere thys daye, and graunte hym mercye in the syghte of thys man, foꝛ I was the kynges butteler.

IT foꝛtuned, that in the moneth * Nisan in the twentieth yere of kyng Artharexes the wine stode before him, & I toke vp the wyne, & gaue it vnto the kyng. And I was heuye in hys presence. And the kynge sayde vnto me: Why lokest thou so sadlye, when thou art not sycke: is it nothing els, but that thou art heuy hearted. And I was sore afrayed, and sayde vnto the kyng: god saue the kynges lyfe foꝛ euer. How should I not loke sadlye, when the citie and place of my fathers burgall lyeth wast, and the gates therof are consumed with fyre? And the kynge sayde vnto me: what is then thy request? I made my prayer also to the God of heauen, and sayde vnto the kynge: yf it please the kynge, and yf thy seruaunt haue founde fauoure in thy syghte, sende me vnto Juda, vnto the cytye of my fathers burial, that I may builde it. And the kynge sayde vnto me (the quene hys wyfe sytting by hym) how lōg shal thy iourney contynue, & when wilt thou come agayne? And it pleased the kynge to sende me, and I set hym a tyme, and sayd vnto the king: yf it please the kynge, let hym geue me letteres to the captaynes whiche are beyonde the water, that they maye conuey me ouer, tyll I come into Juda: And letters vnto Asaph the lorde of the kynges wood, that he maye geue me tymbre to make beames foꝛ the gates of the palace (whiche is harde by the house) & foꝛ the walles of the cytye, & foꝛ the house that I shall entre into. And the king gaue me accoꝛding to the hand of my god, which was good vpō me. And whē I came to the captaynes beyond the water, I gaue them the kynges letters. And the kynge had sente captaynes and horsmen with me. Sanaballat also the Horonite & Tobia a seruaunt (the Ammonyte) heard of it, and it greued them sore, that there was come a man, which sought the wealth of the childꝛen of Israell. And I came to Jerusalem, and was there thꝛe dayes, and I gat me vp in the night season, and a few men with me, neither tolde I anye man, what God had geuen me in my heart to do at Jerusalē: and there was not one beaste with me, saue it that I rode vpon. And I wente in the nyght by the valley porte, before the dragon welle, and to the donge porte, & considꝛed the walles of Jerusalem, howe they were bꝛoken downe, & the porꝛ tes therof consumed with the fire. And I wente ouer to the well poꝛte, and to the kinges conduite, and there was no rowme foꝛ the beaste that was vnder me to passe. Then went Jon in the night by the bꝛoke side, & considꝛed the wal, & tourned backe, and came home agayne by the valley poꝛt. And the rulers knew not whither I went, oꝛ what I dyd: nether dyd I as yet tell it vnto the Jewes, to the Pꝛiestes, to the noble men, to the rulers, and to the other that laboured in the wozke. Then sayde I vnto them: ye se the misere that we are in, howe Jerusalem lyeth waste, and how the gates therof are bꝛent with fire: come therfoꝛe, that we maye builde vp the wal of Jerusalem, and that we be no moze a rebuke. And I tolde them of the hande of my God, (that it was gracious ouer me) and the kynges woozdes that he had spoken vnto me. And they sayd: let vs get vp & buylde: and they strengthed their hande to good. But when Sanabalat the Hozonite, and Tobia the seruaunte (an Ammonite,) and Gesem the Arabian, heardе it: they laughed vs to scorne, and mocked vs, and sayde: what is this that ye do? Wyl ye fall away from the kynge? Then answered I them, and sayde: the God of heauen, he it is that hath graunted vs pꝛosperite, and we be his seruauntes. Let vs get vp and buylde. As foꝛ you, ye haue no poꝛcion noꝛ ryghte, noꝛ remembꝛaunce in Jerusalem.

AND Eliasib the hye pꝛiest gat hym vp with his bꝛethꝛē the pꝛiestes, and they builded the sheepegate. They repayꝛed it, & set vp the doꝛes of it: euē vnto the tower Mea, repayꝛed they it, & vnto the *tower Hananeel. Next vnto him also builded the men of Jericho. And beside him builded Sachur the son of Amri. But the fish poꝛte did the childꝛē of Sanaa builde, which also laied the beames therof, & set on the doꝛes, lockes, & barres of it. And nexte vnto him buylded Meremoth, the sonne of Uria, the sonne of Hakoz: And nexte vnto thē buylded Mesulā, the son of Berechia, the sonne of Mesesabeell: And nexte vnto hym buylded Sadoch, the sonne of Baana. And nexte vnto him buylded they of Thekoa. But the great men that were amonge them, put not their neckes to the wozke of their Lozde. The oldegate buylded Jehoiada, the sonne of Phaseah, and Mesulam the sonne of Besodia, they layed the beames therof, and set on the doꝛes, lockes, & barres of it. Nexte vnto them buylded Melatiah of Gibeon, & Jadō of Merano, men of Gibeon, and of Mispa, where he that was captayne on thys syde the water had a mansion. Nexte vnto hym buylded Uziell the sonne of Harhaiah, the golde smyth. Next vnto hym also buylded Hananiah the sonne of Harakahim, and they repayꝛed Jerusalem vnto the bꝛode wall. Next vnto them builded Raphaiah the son of Hur, the ruler of the halfe parte of Jerusalem. Nexte vnto hym builded Jedaia the sonne of Harumaph ouer agaynste hys house: and nexte vnto hym buylded Hatus the sonne of Hasabnea. But Melchia the sonne of Harim and Hasub the sonne of the captayne of Moab, buylded the other pece, and the tower beside the fozna ces. Next vnto hym builded Sallum a singers sonne, the ruler of the halfe parte of Jerusalem, he and hys doughters. The Valleye gate builded Hanum, and the cytezyns of Zanoa. They builded it, & set on the doꝛes, lockes and barres therof, and a thousande cubites on the wall, vnto the donge poꝛte. But the donge poꝛte buylded Melchiah the son of Rechab, the ruler of the fourthe part of Bethcharem: he repayꝛed it, and set on the doꝛes, lockes, and barres therof. But the well gate repayꝛed Sallum the sonne of Cholhosah the ruler of the fourth parte of Mispa. He builded it, and layed the beames, and set on the doꝛes, lockes, and barres thereof, and the walle vnto the pole of Siloah, by the kinges garden, & vnto the steppes that goe downe fꝛome the citie of Dauid. And after him buylded Nehemiah the sōne of Asboke, the ruler of the halfe parte of Bethzur, vntyll the other side ouer agaynst the sepulchꝛes of Dauid, and to the poole that was repayꝛed, and vnto the house of the myghtye. After hym builded the Leuites, Rehum the sonne of Bani: and next vnto him builded Hasabia the ruler of the halfe parte of Keilah in his quarter. After hym buylded theyr bꝛethꝛen. Banai the sonne of Henadab the ruler of the halfe parte of Keilah: & after hym builded Ezer the sonne of Jesua the ruler of Mispa the other pece, harde ouer agaynste the goynge vp to the house of oꝛdynaunce that was in the cozner. Agayne, after hym bꝛake foꝛth Baruch the sonne of Zachai of indignation, and repayꝛed the other pece fꝛome the turnynge cozner, vnto the doze of the house of Eliasib the hyghe pꝛiest. After hym also builded Meremoth the sonne of Uria, the sonne of Hacos the other pece fꝛome the dooze of the house of Eliasib, euen as longe as the house of Eliasib extended. After him buylded the pꝛiestes, the men of the playne. After hym builded Benjamin and Hasub, ouer agaynst their house, & after hym wzought Asaria, the sonne of Maasia, the sonne of Anania, nexte vnto his house. After hym also buyl-ded Benui, the sone of Manadad the other pece, from the house of Azaria, vnto the turnynge of the wall, and vnto the corner. After hym buylded Phalal, the sonne of Vsai, ouer agaynste the corner, & the hye towze, which lieth out ouer from the kinges house, that was beside the courte of the pyson. After him Phedaia, the sonne of Pharhos, (as for the Nethinims, they dwelte in the stronge holde, vnto the watergate, toward the easte, and to the tower that lyeth out.) After hym buylded they of Thekua the other pece, ouer agaynste the great towze, that lyeth outewarde, vnto the wal of the strong holde. But from aboue the horsegate forth, buylded the preistes, euerye one ouer agaynst his house. And after them, buylded Zadok, the sonne of Immer, ouer agaynst his house. After him buylded also Semeia, the sonne of Sechania, the keper of the east gate. After hym buylded Hanania the sone of Selemia, and Hanun the son of Zalaph the syxte, the other pece. And after him buil ded Meshulam, the sonne of Barachia, ouer agaynst his store house. After hym buylded Malachia, the goldesmythes sonne, vntyll the house of Nethinims, & of the marchau-tes ouer against the gate of Maphkad, & to the parlour in the corner. And betwene the parlour of the corner vnto the sheepegate, buylded the goldesmythes, and the Mar-chauntes.

A But when Sanabalat heard that we buylded the wal, he was wroth in him selfe, & toke great indignacion, & mo ked the Jewes, and sayd before his brethrē & the souldyers of Samaria, what do these impotent Jewes? will the hethen suffre thē? shall they offre? shall they perfourme it in one day? shall they make the stones whole agayne, that are brought to dust & brente? And Tobiah the Ammonite, was beside hym, and sayde: Thoughe they builde, yet yf a fore go vp, he shall breake downe their stony wal. Heare (O thou our God) for we are despised, turne their shame vpon their owne heade, and gyue theym ouer into the despytynge in the land of theyr captiuitie. Couer not theyr wyckednesse, and let not their synne be put oute in thy presence: for they haue prouoked the buylders. And so buylded we the wall, & it was ioyned hole together, vnto the halfe heygth therof.

And the people were mynded to laboure.

And it fortuned, that whē Sanabalat, and B Tobiath, & the Arabians, Ammonites: and Asdodites heard, that the walles of Jeru-salem were made vp, and that the gappes began to be stopped, they were very wroth, and conspired all together to come & fyght against Jerusalem, and to make the peo-ple an hynderaunce therein. Neuertheles, we made oure prayer vnto oure God, and set watchemen by thē, whiche builded daye and nighte ouer agaynste them. And Juda sayde: the strength of the bearers is to feble: and there is yet muche moze mozter, & we are not able to build on the wall. And our aduersaries sayd: they shal not know, nether se: tyl we come in the middes amōge them, and slaye them: & hinder the wozcke. But it fortuned that when the Jewes (which dwelt beside them) came, they tolde vs as good as ten tymes: that in all places where ye go vnto, they are appointed to fal vpon vs. Therefore set I the people after their kinredes with their swerdes, speares & bowes beneth in the lowe places behinde the wall, and I loked, and gat me vp: and C sayde vnto the cheefe men: to the rulers: and to the other people, be not ye afrayde of them: * but thinche rather vpon the great 2. Esd. 4 b Lorde, which ought to be feared, and fight and . . . . for your brethren, your sonnes, your dough ters, your wiues, & your houses. Neuerthe lesse: it chaunsed that when your enemyes heard, that we had gotten wozde of it, God brought their counceil to noughte: and we turned al agayne to the wal: euery one vn-to his laboure. And from that tyme forthe it came to passe, that the halfe parte of the yonge men dyd the laboure, and the other halfe parte of thē held the speares: shildes: bowes: and brestplates: & the rulers stode behynde all the house of Juda, whych buil-ded on the wall, & bare burthes from those that laded them. With one hande dyd euery one wozcke: and wyth the other helde he hys weapen. And euery one that buylded: D had his swearde gyrd by his thygh, and so builded they. And the trumpet blew beside me. And I sayde vnto the puncipall men, to the rulers, and to the other people: the wozke is great and large, and we are sepe-rated vpon the wall one farre frō an other. Loke in what place therefore ye heare the noyse of the trumpet: resorte ye thither vn-to vs, * and oure GOD shall fyghte for Ex. 14. c vs: and we wil be labouring in the wozke. And the halfe parte of thē held the speares from the mozninge spryng: till the starres came forthe. And at the same tyme sayde I vnto the people: euerye one abide wyth his seruaunt at Jerusalē, that in the nighe season we maye watche, and laboure on the daye time. As for me and my brethren my seruauntes, and the men of the watche (whiche were behinde me) we put neuer of our clothes, no moze thē the other did their harnesse, saue onelye bicause of the water.

AND there arose a great complaint of the people, & of their wyues against their brethrē the Iewes. For there were some that said: our sōnes & doughters and we are to many, therfore wyll we take corne for thē, that we may eat & liue. Some also there were that said: let vs set our landes: vineyardes & houses to pledge, & take vp corne in the dearth. But some there were that sayde: let vs borowe moneye for the kynges trybute, and that vpon our landes and vineyardes. Beholde, our bodyes, as the bodyes of our brethren, and oure chyldrē as their childrē: elles should we subdue our sonnes and doughters vnto bondage, and some of oure doughters are subdued vnto bondage alreadye, and no strength is there in oure handes, & other men haue our landes & vineyardes. And when I hearde their cōplaynt, & such wordes, it displeased me sore: & I aduised so in my mynde, that I rebuked the counselers, and the rulers, & sayde vnto theym: Euerye one of you is to chargeable vnto his brother, & I brought a great congregacyon against them, & sayd vnto theym: we (after oure abilitie) haue boughte oure brethren the Iewes, whyche were solde vnto the Heathen. And wil you sel your brethren agayne vnto the hearth, after that they haue bene solde vnto vs? Then held they theyr peace, & could finde nothynge to answere. And Nehemia sayde: It is not good that ye do. Oughte ye not to walcke in the feare of God, because of the rebuke of the Heathen, that are oure enemies? I & my brethren, & my seruauntes, do lende them money and corne: but as for vsurye, let vs leue it. Therefore, this same daye, I praye you se that ye restore theym their landes agayne, theyr vineyardes, oile gardens, and their houses, and remytte the hundred parte of the money of the corne, wine, and oyle that ye haue wonne of thē. Thē sayde they, we will restore thē againe, and will requyre nothynge of the: and wyll do as thou haste spoken. And I called the prestes, and toke an othe of thē, that they shoulde do so. And I shoke my lappe, and sayde: God shake out euery man after the same maner frome hys house and labour, that maintayneth not this word: euē thus be he shaken oute, and voyde. And all the congregacyon sayde: Amen, and praysed the Lorde. And the people dyd so. And from the tyme forth that (the kynge) committed vnto me, to be a captayne of thē that were in the lande of Iuda, euen from the .xx. yere vnto the .xxxii. yeare of the kyng Artheraxes (that is .xii. yeare) I with my brethren lyued not of such sustinaunce as was geuē to a captayne. For the olde captaynes that were before me, had bene chargeable vnto the people, and had taken of theym breade and wyne, and .xl. sycles of syluer: yea, and their seruauntes had oppressed the people. But so dyd not I, and that because of the feare of God. But I laboured also in the worke vpon the wall, and boughte no land. And all my seruauntes came thither together vnto the worke. Moreouer, there were at my table an. C. & .l. of the Iewes & rulers, which came vnto me frō among the Heathē, that are about vs. And there was prepared for me daily an ore, & sixe chosen shepe, and birdes, and euer once in .x. daies a greate summe of wyne. Yet required not I the lyuinge of a captayne, for the bōdage was greuous vnto the people. + Thinche vpon me my God vnto the beste, according to all that I haue done for this people.

AND when Sanaballat, Tobiath, and Gesem the Arabian, and the other of our enemies heard that I had builded the wal: and that there were no mo gappes therin (howbeit at the same time hadde I not hanged the dores vpon the gates) Sanaballat and Gesem sente vnto me, sayinge: come that we may mete and take counsel together in the villages that are in the playne of the cytie Ono. Neuertheles, they thought to do me euel. And I sent messangers vnto theym, sayinge: I haue a greate busines to do, & I can not come down. The worke shoulde stande still, yf I were negligent, and came downe to you. Howbeit, they sent vnto me as good as foure tymes after the same maner. And I gaue them the same answere. Thē sēt Sanaballat his seruaunt agayne vnto me the fifth tyme, with an open letter in his hande, wherein was written: it is tolde the Heathen, and Gesem hathe sayde it, that thou and the Iewes thinche to rebel: for the whiche cause thou buildest the wall that thou mayest be their kynge in these matters, and haste ordeyned the prophetes to preache of thee at Ierusalem, and to saye: He is kynge of Iuda. And nowe shall thys come to the kynges eares: come nowe therfore, and let vs take our counsell together. And I sent vnto him, sayinge: there is no such thynges done as thou sayest, for thou faynest theym oute of thyne owne hearte. For they were all minded to make vs afrayed, sayinge: they shall withdrawe their handes from their worke, that it shall not be finished. Now be it, I strengthed my handes the more. And I came vnto the house of Semeia, the sonne of Melata, the sonne of Mehetabeel, and he had shut him selfe within, and sayde: let bs come together into the house of god, euē vnto the myddes of the temple: and shut the dores of the temple, for they will come C to slaye the: yea, euen in the nyght will they come to put thee to deathe. And I sayde: Houlde anye suche man as I, sayde: Who is that beynge as I am, that will go into the temple, to saue his lyfe? I will not go in.

And I perceaued, that God hadde not sent him. Yet spake he prophecie vpon me, ne-uertheles, Tobiah & Sanaballat, had hired him for money. Therefore toke he the money, that thoroughe feare I shoulde so do, and synne, that they myghe haue an euell reporte of me, to blaspheme me. My God, thynche thou vpon Tobiah, and Sanabalat, accordynge vnto these theyr workes, and of the Prophete Noadia, and of the other prophetes, that wolde haue put me D in feare. And the wall was finished on the xxv. daye of the moneth Elul, in. lu. dayes.
And when all oure enemyes hearde therof, all the Heathen that were aboute vs, were afrayed, and their courage fayled thē. And they perceaued, that this worke came of our God. And at the same time were there manye of the chiefe of Iuda, whose letters went vnto Tobiah, and agayne frō Tobiah vnto them, (for there were many of Iu-da, that were sworne vnto him, for he was the sonne in law of Sechania, the sonne of Arah, and his sonne Iehonathan hadde the doughter of Meshulla, the sonne of Bara-chia, and they spake good of himbefore me: and tolde him my wordes) and Tobiah sēt letters, to put me in feare.

¶ The. viii. Chapter.

A NOwe when the wall was buylded: I hanged on the dores also, and the porters: syngers, & Leuites were ap poynted. And I cōmaūded my brother Ha-nani, & Hanania the ruler of the castell at Ierusalō: for he was a faythfull man, & feared God more then dyd many other. And I said vnto them: let not the gates of Ieruſa lem be opened, vntil the sunne be whote.
And while they wer stāding in the watch, they shut the doores & barred thē. And we appointed certayne citezins of Ierusalē, to be watchmē, euery one to kepe his watch, and euery one to be ouer against his houle.
As for the citie, it was large of rowme, and great, but the people were few therin, & the houses were not buylwd. And my God gaue me in my hert, that I gathered together the principall men, & the officers, & the people, to numbre them: & I found a regiſter of the

The

The Leuites . The chyldren of Jesua of Cadmpel, and of the chyldren of Hoduah, foure and seuentye. The syngers: The chyldren of Azaph, an hundred and eighe and fourtye. The porters. The chyldren of Sallum, the chyldren of Ater, the chyldren of Talmon, the chyldren of Acub: the chyldren of Hatita, the childrē of Sobai, al together an. C. and eyghte and thyrtye.

The Nethinims. The chyldren of Ziha, the chyldren of Hasupha the chyldren of Tebaboth, the chyldren of Ceros: the chyldren of Sia, the chyldren of Phadon: the chyldren of Lebanah: the chyldren of Hagaba, the childrē of Salmai, the childrē of Hanan, the chyldren of Gidel, the chyldren of Gaher, the chyldren of Reaia, the chyldren of Rezin', the chyldren of Necoda, the chyldren of Gasam, the chyldren of Wsa, the chyldren of Phaseah the chyldren of Belai, the chyldrē of Meunim, the childrē of Nephussim, the childrē of Bacbuc, the childrē of Hacupha: the childrē of Harhur, the childrē of Bazluth, the chyldren of Mehida, the childrē of Harsa, the childrē of Barcos, the chyldren of Sisera: the chyldren of Thamah, the chyldren of Neziah: the childrē of Hathipha.

The chyldren of Salomons seruauntes, the chyldren of Sotai: the childrē of Sophereth, the chyldren of Pherida, the chyldren of Jaala, the chyldren of Darcon: the chyldren of Giddell, the chyldren of Saphatiath, the chyldren of Hatpll, the chyldren of Pochered of Zabaim: the chyldren Amon. All these Nethinims, and the chyldren of Salomons seruauntes, were three hundred and nyntye and two. And these went vp also of Thel, Mela, Thel, Harsa, Cherub, Adon, and Immer: but they coulde not shewe theyr fathers house, nor theyr seed, & that they were of Israel. The chyldren of Dalaiah, the chyldren of Thobia, and the chyldren of Nechoda: syxe hundred and two and foxtie. And of the priestes the childrē of Habaiah: the childrē of Hacos, the childrē of Berslai, whiche toke one of the doughters of Berslai the Siliadite to wyfe, and was named after their name.

These sought theyr writinge in the regystre of theyr generacion, but they were not founde, therefore they were put from the priesthode. And Hathirsata sayd vnto them that they should not eate of the most holy, tyll there came vp a priestе which shoulde were Urim and Thummim . And so the whole congregacio together was two and foxtye thousande, thre hundred and three score beside theyr seruauntes and maydes of whome there were seuen thousande thre hundred and seuen and thyrtye . And they had two. C. and seuen and foxtye singynge men and wemen. Their hoxses seuen hundred & sixe and thirtye, & their mules: two hundred and fyue & foxtye. And Eldras prayed the Lorde the greate God. And all the people answered, Amen, Amen, with their hanxes vp, and bowed theym selues, and worshipped the lord fallynge downe vpō theyr faces to the grounde. And Jesua, Baam, Serabiah, Jamin, Acub, Sebathai, Hadaia, Maasia, Celita, Azaria, Jozabad, Hanan, Pelaia: and the Leuites caused the people to gene hede vnto the lawe, and the people stode in theyr place. nesse, and forsokest the not. * And though they made a moulten calfe (and sayd: This is thy Godde) that brought the out of the lande of Egypte) and dyd great blasphemy-es, yet forsokest thou them not in the wil-dernes, accordig to thy great mercy. * And the cloudye pyller departed not from them on the daye tyme to leade them the waye: nether the pyller of fyre in the nyghte sea-of Og the kynge of Basan. And their chil dre multiplyedst thou as the starres of hewherof thou hadeste spoken to their fathers, that they shoulde go into it, & have it in possession. And the children went in, and possessed the lande, * and thou subduedst before them the inhabiters of the lād, euen the Canaanites and gauest them into their hande, with their kynges and the people of the lande, that they myghte do with them what they woulde. And they wanne their stronge cyties, and a fat lāde and toke possession of houses that were ful of al maner of goodes, welles dygged out, vineyardes, oplegardens, and many frute-full trees, and they did eate: and were fulled and became fat: and dwelt in welthe thorowe thy greate goodnesse. Neuertheles they were dyso bedyente, and rebelled a-gaynste the, and caste thy lawe behynde their backes, & * slue thy prophetes (which exhorted them earnestlye, that they myght turnge them agayne vnto the) & did greate blasphemyes. Therfore thou gauest them ouer into the hande of their enemyes, that vexed them. And in the tyme of their trouble when they cryed vnto thee: thou them in the hande of their enemyes, so that they had the dominyon ouer them.

And when they conuerted, and cryed vnto thee: thou hardeste them from heauen, and many tymes haste thou delyuered the accordynge to thy greate mercye, and testyfyedst vnto them that thou myghteste turnge them agayne vnto thy lawe. Notwythstandynge, they were proude, and herkened not vnto thy commaundemētes, ned the shoulder away, and were stiffenec-ked, and wouldē not heare. And many yea-res dydest thou forbeare them, and testifiedst vnto them thorow thy spyrye, euen by the hande of thy prophetes, and yet would they not heare. Therfore gauest thou them into the hande of the nations in the landes. And for thy great mercies sake, thou haste not vtterlye consumed them, nether forsaken them: for thou arte a gracious and mercyful God. * Nowe therfore oure God, thou greate GOD, myghtye and terryble, thou that kepest couenaunte and mercy, regarde not a lytle al the tra-uayle that hathe happened vnto vs, and oure kynges, oure rpynces, oure Prophetes, oure Prophetes, and oure fathers, and al the people, sence the time of the kinges of Assur, vnto this day. And truly thou arte iuste, inal that thou haste broughte vpon vs: for thou haste done ryghte. As for vs, we haue bene vngodly and our kin ges, and our rpynces, oure priestes, and oure fathers haue not done after thy law, not regarded thy commaundemētes, and thy earnest exhortacions, wherwyth thou haste exhorted them, and they haue not serued the in their kyngedome, and in thy greate goodes that thou gauest them, and in the large and plenteous lande whyche thou gauest before them, and haue not conuerted from their wycked worckes.

Beholde, we are in bondage, thys daye:
and lo in the lande that thou gaueste vnto our fathers, to enioye the frutes & goodes therof, beholde there are we bondemen.
And greate is the increase of it vnto the kynges whome thou haste set ouer vs, because of oure synnes: and they haue domy-nion ouer our bodyes and catell (euen as they wil them selues,) and we are in great trouble. And al this make we a sure couenaunte, and write it, and our rpynces, Leuites, and priestes seale vnto it.

C of charge. And we decreed a statute vpon our selues, to gyue yerely the thyrde parte of a sicle to the ministracion in the house of oure God, to the shewebreade, to the dayly meatofferynge, to the dayrye burntofferynge of the Sabbothes: Of the newe Moones, and feaste dayes, and to the thinges that were sanctifyed, and to the offerynges of attonementes, to reconsyle Israell withall, and to all the busynesse in the house of oure God. And we caste the lot amonge the priestes, Leuites, & the people, for the offering of the woode to be broughte vnto the house of oure God frome yeare to yeare, after the houses of our fathers; that it might be dyent at times appointed, vpon the aulter of the Lorde God, as it is wrytten in the lawe: And to bringe the fyrstlynges of our land, and the firstlinges of oure fruites of all trees: yeare by yeare vnto the house of the Lorde: and the firstlynges of oure sonnes, and of our catel, as it is written in the law: and the firstlinges of oure oxen and of oure shepe, whiche we D shoulde bringe to the house of our God, vnto the Priestes that ministre in the house of oure God: And that we shoulde bring the fyrstlynges of oure dough, and of oure heauesofferynge, and the fruites of all maner of trees, of wyne also, and of oyle, vnto the Priestes, to the chestes of the house of oure God. And the tythes of oure lande vnto the Leuites, that the Leuites myght haue the tythes in all the cytyes of our ministracion. And the priest, the sonne of Aaron shall with the Leuytes haue also of the tythes of the Leuites: so that the Leuites shal bringe vp the tythes of their tythes vnto the house of oure God, to the stooze houses, and to the treasure houses. For the chyldren of Israel, & the chyldren of Leui, shall bring vp the heaueoffringes of the corne, wyne, and oyle, vnto the stoze houses, there as are the vessels of the sanctuarye and the priestes that minister, and the porters and singers, that we forsake not the house of our God. ¶ The.xi. chap.

AND the rulers of the people dwelte at Jerusalẽ. The other people also A cast lottes, that amonge.x. one part shoulde go to Jerusalẽ into the holy city to dwell, and.ix. partes to be in the cytyes. And the people thanched all the men that were wyllynge to dwell at Jerusalem. These are the heades of the lande, that dwelte in Jerusalem, and in the cytyes of Juda, euery one in his possession, & in their cities: they of Israel, the priestes, Leuites, the Nethinims, and the chyldren of Salomons seruauntes. And at Jerusalem dwelte certayne of the chyldren of Juda, and of Ben Jamin. Of the chyldren of Juda: Athaiah, the sonne of Vzia, the sonne of Zacharya, the sonne of Amaria, the sonne of Saphtia: The sonne of Mahalaleell, of the children of Phares. And Maasia: The sonne of Baruch, the sonne of Chall, Hose, the sonne of Hasaia, the sonne of Adaia, the sonne of Joiarib, the sonne of Zachary, the sonne of Silon. Al these were the chyl- B

And Adaia the sonne of Jeroham, the sonne of Phalaliel, the sonne of Amzi, the sonne of Zachari, the sonne of Phachur, the sonne of Malchia, and hys bzethzen chiefe amonge the fathers, two hundzed and two and fozty. And Amaſai the sonne of Jſariel, the sonne of Ahaſai, the sonne of Meſelemoth, the sonne of Immer, and hys bzethzen were valiaunte men: an hundzed and eyghte and twentye.
1.par.9.b And their ouerſear was Sabdiell, a sonne of one of the greate menne. * Of the Leuites: Semeia the sonne of Haſub, the sonne of Aſerikam, the sonne of Haſabia, the C sonne of Bunni, and Sabathai, and Joſabad of the chiefe of the Leuites, had the ouerſyghte of the outwarde buſynesse of the house of God. And Mathania the sonne of Micha, the sonne of Sabdi, the sonne of Aſaph, was the pzincypal to begynne the thankeſgeuynge and pzayer. And Bachbukia the seconde amonge hys bzethzen, and Abda the sonne of Sammua, the sonne of Galall, the sonne of Jeduthun. All the Leuites in the holye citie were two hundzed foure scoze and foure. * And the pozters 1.par.9.c. Acub and Talmon, and their bzethzē that kept the pozters: were an hundzed and two and seuentie. As foz the reſidue of Jſraell, the prieſtes and Leuites, they were in all the cities of Juda, euerye one in hys inheritaunce. And the Nethinims dwelte in Ophel: and Ziba, and Giſpa, were set ouer the Nethinims. The ouerſear of the Leuites at Jeruſalem, was Vſi: The sonne of Baani, the sonne of Haſabia, the sonne of Mathania, the sonne of Micha. Of the chyldzen of Aſaph there were ſyngers a-D boute the buſynesse in the house God foz it was the kynges commaundemente concernynge them: That the ſyngers ſhoulde deale faythfully euerye daye as was accozdynge. And Mathaia the sonne of Meſababell of the chyldzen of Zerah the sonne of Juda, next the kinge in al matters concernynge the people: and their byllages, and landes. And some of the chyldzen of Juda, that were without in the townes of their land, dwelte at Kariah Arbe. And in the billages therof, at Dydon, and in the byllages therof, and at Jecabzeell, and in the byllages thereof, at Jeſua, Moladath, Bethphalet in the towne of Suall. Beerſeba and in their byllages: at Siklag, and Moconah, and their byllages. And at Enremon, zarah, Jerimoth, zonoa, Odollam, and in their byllages, at Lachis, and in the feeldes thereof, at Aſeka, and in the byllages therof, and they dwelte frome Berſeba vnto the vallepe of Hinnon. The chyldzen alſo of Beniamin, of Geba, dwelt at Machmas: Aia, Bethel, and in their billages. And at Anathoth, Nob, Ananiah, Hazoz, Ramath, Gethaim, Hadid, zeboim, Nabalath, Lod, Ono, the carpenters valley. And the Leuites had poſſeſſion both in Juda: and in Benjamin.

THeſe are the prieſtes & Leuites, that went vp with zozobabell the sonne of Salathiel, & with Jeſua, Zacaria, Jeremi, & Eldzas Amaria, Maluch, Hatus, Sechadia, Rehū, Meremoth, Iddo, Genthoi, Abia, Miamin, Maaria, Belga, Semeia, Joiarib, Jadaia, Salu, Amok, Helkia, and Jadaia. Theſe were the heades amonge the prieſtes, and their bzethzen in the dayes of Jeſua. The Leuites were theſe: Jeſua, Bennui, Cadmiell, Sarabia, Juda, and Mathania, which was ouer the office of thankeſgeuynge: he and hys bzethzē, Bachukia and Himni, and their bzethzen, were aboute them in the watches. Jeſua begat Joakim, Joakim alſo begat Eliaſib, & Eliaſib begat Joiada: Joiada begat Jonathan, Jonathan begat Jadua. In the dayes of Joakim were theſe the chiefe fathers amonge the prieſtes: Vnder Saraia, Maraia, vnder Jeremi, Hanania, vnder Eldzas, Meſullam, vnder Amaria, Jehoanan, vnder Melico, Jonathan: Vnder B Sebania, Joſeph, vnder Harim, Adna, vnder Maraioth, Helkia, vnder Iddo, zacharie: vnder Genthon, Meſullam, vnder Abia, zichzi, vnder Miniamin, and Moadia, Piltai: vnder Belga, Samua: Vnder Semeia, Jehonathan: vnder Joiarib, Mathenai, vnder Jadaia, Vſi: vnder Selai, Kelai: vnder Amok, Eber: vnder Helchia, Haſabia: vnder Jadaia, Nathanael. And in the tyme of Eliaſib: Joiada, Johanan and Jadua were the chiefe fathers amonge the Leuites & the prieſtes, written vnder the raygne of Darius the Perſian, the chyldzen of Leui, the pzincypall fathers were wzitē i the chzonicles, vntyll the tyme of Jonathan the sonne of Eliaſib. And these were the chiefe amonge the Leuites: Hasabia, Serebia, and Iesua the sonne of Cadmiell, and theyr brethren in theyr presence, to geue prayse and thanckes, accordynge as Dauid the man of God had ordeined it, one watch ouer against another: Mathania, Balbukia, Obadia, Meshullã, Talmon, and Akub, were Porters in the watche at the trescholdes of the gates: These were in the dayes of Joakim, the sonne of Iesua, the sonne of Josedec, and in the dayes of Nehemia the captayne, and of the prieaste Esdras the scribe. And in the dedication of the wall at Jerusalem, they soughte the Leuites out of all theyr places, that they myght be brought to Jerusalem, to kepe the dedication and gladnesse with thanckesgeuinges, and singing with Cimbales, Psalteries, and Harpes. And the chyldren of the syngers gathered themselues together frome euery syde oute of the playne countreye aboute Jerusalem, and frome the villages of Nethophati, frome the house of Gilgall, and oute of the countreyes of Geba, and Asmaueth: for the syngers had buylded them villages rounde aboute Jerusalem. And the priestes and Leuytes were purifyed, and clensed the people, and the gates, and the walle. And I broughte the prynces of Juda vpon the walle, and appoynted two great queres of men to gyue thanckes, whyche wente on the ryghte hande of the walle, towarde the Donge gate, and after them went Hosaia, and halfe of the Prynces of Juda, and Azaria Esdras. And Mesullam, Juda, Ben Jamin, Semia, Jeremi, and certayne of the Priestes chyldren wyth Trompetes: Namelye, Zachary, the sonne of Jonathan, the sonne of Semia, the sonne of Mathania, the sonne of Machaiah, the sonne of Zacur, the sonne of Asaph, and hys brethren, Semeia, Asaraell, Malalai, Elalai, Maai, Nathanael, and Juda, and Hanani, wyth the musicall instrumentes of Dauid the man of God. And Esdras the Scribe went before them, and beside the welle gate, they wente vp ouer against them vpon the steppes of the cite of Dauid, at the goynge vp of the walle beyonde the house of Dauid, vnto the water gate eastward. The other quere of them that gaue thanckes, went ouer against them, and I after them, and the halfe parte of the people vpon the walle, beyonde the fornace gate vntyll the brode walle, and beyonde the porte of Ephraim, and beyonde the olde gate, beyonde the fishgate, & the tower of Hananell, and the tower of Mea, vntyll the sheepe gate.

And they stode styll in the prison gate, and so stode the two queres of them that gaue thanckes) in the house of GOD: And I, & the halfe of the rulers wyth me, and the Priestes, namely, Eliakim, Maasia, Miniamin, Michaia, Eliocnai, Zachary, and Hanania, with trompettes, and Maasia, Semiah, Eleasar, Vrsi: Jehohanan, Melchiah, Elam, and Ser. And the syngers sange loude, haynge Jesrahiah for theyr ouerseer. And the same daye: they offered greate sacrifyces, and reioyced: For God hadde geuen them greate gladnesse, so that bothe the wiues and chyldren wer ioyfull: and the myrthe of Jerusalem was heerde farre of. At the same tyme were there men appoynted ouer the treasure houses (wherein were the heaue offeringes: the firstlinges, and the tythes) that they shoulde gather them oute of the feeldes aboute the cities: To destribute them vnto the Priestes, and Leuites accordynge to the lawe: for Juda was glad of the prieste and Leuites, that they stode and wayted vpon the office of theyr God, whyche is a pure office. And the syngers and porters stode after the commaundemente of Dauid, and of Salomon hys sonne: for in the tyme of Dauid and Asaph were the chiefe singers ordeined, & the songes of prayse, & thanckesgeuynge vnto God. In the time of Zorobabel, and Nehemiah, did al they of Israell gene portions vnto the singers and porters, euery daye his portion, & they gaue tythes vnto the Leuites, & the Leuites gaue tithes agayne vnto the chyldren of Aaron.

AND that daye dyd they reade in the boke of Moses, & the people herkened therto, & ther was founde wrytten, * that the Ammonites and Moabites Deu.64 should neuer come into the congregacion of God because they met not the chyldren of Israel with bread & water, * but hired Balaã agaynst thẽ, that he should curse them & our god turned the curse into a blessyng. Nu.23.
Now whẽ they hearde the law, it fortuned that they separated from Israel euery one that had mixt hym selfe therin. And before thys had the prieste, Eliasib the ouersight of the treasure of the house of oure God, and he was kynsman vnto Tobia: And hadde made hym a greate chambre, and there had they afore tyme layed the offerynges, Frankencence, vessell, and tythes of corne, wyne and oyle (accordynge to the cõmaundemente gyuen to the Leuites, Syngers and Porters) and the heaue offerynges of the Priestes.

But in all thys tyme was not Jerusalem salem: for in the two and thyrtye yeare of Artharzerses kynge of Babilo, came I vnto the kynge, & after certayne daies optayned I licence of the kynge to come to Jerusalē. And I gat knowledge of the euyll that Eliasib dyd vnto Tobia, in that he had made hym a chambre in the courte of the house of God, and it greued me sore, and I caste forthe all the vessels of the house of Tobia out of the chambre, and commaunded ths to clense the chābers. And thither broughte I againe the vessels of the house of God, with the meatoffrige, & the incēse. And I perceyued that the portions of the Leuites were not geuē ths, and that euery one fled to his lande, euen the Leuytes and singers that executed the worke. Ths reproued I the rulers, and sayde: why is the house of God forsakē? And I gathered thē together, & set them in their place. Ths broughte all Juda the tithes of corne and wyne, & ole vnto the treasure. And I made treasurers ouer the treasure, euen Selemiah the preeste, and Zadoc the scribe, & of the Leuites, Phadaia, & vnder their hāde was Hanan the sonne of Zacur, the sonne of Mathania: for they were coūted faithfull, and theyr office was to distribute the portions vnto theyr brethren. ✠ Thinke vpon me, O my God here in, and wipe not oute my mercy that I haue shewed on the house of my God, and on the offices therof. And the same time sawe I some treadynge wine presses on the Sabboth, and bryngynge in sheues, and asses laden with wine, grapes, frygges, & bryngynge all maner of burthēs vnto Jerusalem, vpon the Saboth daye. And I rebuked them earnestlye the same daye that they solde the vytayles. There dwelte men of Tire also therin, whyche broughte fyshe and all maner of ware, and solde on the Sabboth vnto the children of Juda in Jerusalem. Then reproued I the rulers in Juda, and saide vnto them: what euell thynge is this that ye do, and breake the Sabboth daye? Did not your fathers euen thus, and our God broughte all this plage vpon vs, and vpō this cytie? And ye make the wrath more yet vpon Israell, in that ye breake the Sabboth. And it forthe-ned that when the portes of Jerusalem began to be darke in the euenynge before the Sabboth, I cōmaunded to shut the gates, & charged that they should not be opened vntill after the Sabboth: & some of my seruantes set I at the gates, that there should no burthē be broughte in on the Sabboth daye. Then remayned the chapmen and marchauntes once or twyse ouer nyghte without Jerusalem, with al maner of wares. Then reproued I them fore, and sayde vnto ths: why tarye ye al nyght about the wall? If ye do it once agayne, I will laye handes vpon you. From that tyme forthe came they no more on the Sabboth. And I said vnto the Leuites that they shoulde clense them selues, and that they shoulde come and kepe the gates, to halowe the Sabboth daye. Thincke vpon me (O my God) concernynge this also, and spare me, accordynge to thy great mercy. And at the same tyme sawe I Jewes that maryed wiues of Azod, of Ammon, and of Moab, and the childre spake halfe in the speache of Azod, & could not speake in the Jewes lāguage, but by the tonge might a mā perceyue euery people. Then I reproued thē, and cursed thē, and smote certayne men of them, and made them bare, and toke an oth of them by God: ye shall not gyue youre doughters vnto their sonnes, neyther shal ye take their doughters vnto youre sōnes, or for youre selues. Did not Salomon the kynge of Israel synne for such? and yet amonge many heathen was there no kynge like him, which was deare vnto his God: and God made hym kynge ouer all Israel, and yet neuertheles, outlandishe women cauled hym to sinne: Shall we then obeye vnto you, to do all this great euel, and to trangresse against our God, and marye straunge wyues? And one of the children of Jehoiada the sonne of Eliasib the hye prieste, had made a contracte with Sanaballat the Horonite: but I chaced him from me. (O my God) thynche thou vpon them that defile the priesthode, and the couenaūt of the priesthode, & of the Leuites. Thus clensed I them from all suche as were outlandish, and appointed the courses of the priestes & Leuites, euery one in his office, and to offer the wood at times appointed, and the firste frutes. Thincke thou vpō me (O my God) for the beste. Amen.

IT forthe-ned, in the dayes of Ahasuerus whyche raigned frō India, vnto Ethiopia, (ouer an hūdred & seuē & twentie lōdes) euen in those daies whē the kyng Ahasuerus sat on his seate royal, which was in Susan the chefe cytie, in the thirde yere of his raigne, he made a feaste vnto all his prynces and seruauntes. And the mightie men of Perssa & Media, the captaynes also and rulers of his coun-

eyes were before hym, and he shewed the ryches and glorye of hys kyngdome, and B the glorious worshyppe of hys greatnesse many dayes longe: Euen an hundred and foure score dayes. And when these dayes were expired the king made a feast vnto al the people that were in Susan the chiefe cytye, bothe vnto greate and smale, seuen dayes longe, in the courte of the garden by the kynges palace: Where there hanged white, greene and yelowe clothes, fastened with cordes of fine silke, & purple, in syluer ringes, vpõ pyllers of marble stones. The benches also were of golde and siluer made vpon a pauement of greene, white, yelowe, & blacke marble. And they dráke in vessels of golde, and chaunged vessell after vessell.
C And the kinges wyne was much accordig to the power of the kynge. And the drynke was so appoynted, that none should compel any man, for so the kyng had commaunded by the officers of his house, that euery one shoulde do as it lyked hym. And the quene Vasthi made a feaste also for the women in the palace of Ahasuerus. And on the seuẽth daye whan the kynge was merye after the wyne, he commaunded Mehumã, Biztha, Harbona, Bigtha, Abagethan, Zethar, and Charchas, the seuen chamberlaynes (that did seruice in the presence of kynge Ahasuerus) to fetch the quene Vasthi with the crowne regal into the kynges presence, that he might shewe the people and princes her fayrenesse, for she was bewtyfull. But the D quene Vasthi wolde not come at the kinges worde by his chamberlaynes. Then was the kinge very wroth, and his indignacion kyndled in hym. And the king spake to the wise men, that had vnderstandynge in the ordinaunces of the lande, for the kynges matters muste be handled before all suche as haue knowledge of the lawe and iudgement: & the chiefe & next vnto him were, Carsena, Sethar, Admata, Tharsis, Mares, Marsena, and Memucan, the seuen princes of Persia, & Media, whiche sawe the kynges face, and sat aboue in the kingdome: What lawe (sayeth the kynge) shoulde be executed vpõ the quene Vasthi, because she dyd not accordyng to the word of the kynge Ahasuerus, whyche he commaunded by hys chamberlaynes? And Memucan answered before the kynge and the princes: The quene Vasthi hathe not onely done euyl agaynst the king, but also against all the princes, and agaynst all the people that are in all the landes of kynge Ahasuerus: for thys dede of the quene shal come abrode vnto all women, so that they shall despise theyr husbandes before theyr eyes, and shall saye: The kyng Ahasuerus commaunded Vasthi the Quene to be brought in before hym, but she would not come. And so shall the princesses in Persia and Media, saye lykewyse vnto all the kinges princes: When they heare of thys dede of the quene, thus shall there aryse to muche dispitefulnesse and wrathe. If E it please the kynge therfore, let there goe a commaundement from hym, and let it be wrytten accordynge to the lawes of the Persians and Medyans (and not to be transgressed) that Vasthi come no more before king Ahasuerus, and let the kynge gene her kyngdome vnto another, that is better thã she. And when this cõmaundmẽt of the king (which shalbe made) is published throwoute all hys empire (whiche is great) al womõ shal holde their husbandes in honoure both amonge greate and smalle. This pleaseth the king & the princes, and the king did accordyng to the word of Memucan. For he sent forth letters into al the kynges landes, into euery lãd, accordig to the wrytynge thereof, and to euerye people after their language, that euery mã should be lord in his owne house. And this caused he to be spoken after the language of hys people.

AFter these actes, when the displeasure of kyng Ahasuerus was nowe laid, he thought vpõ Vasthi, & what she had done, & what was concluded agaist her. The sayde the kynges seruantes that ministred vnto him: let there be fayre yong virgins sought for the king, & the kig appointed certen men in al the landes of hys empire, whome he charged that they should bryng togyther all the fayre younge virgyns vnto Susan the heade cytye, to the womens buyldinge, vnder the hande of Hagei, the kiges chamberlayne that kept the women, to gyue them theyr apparell, (& other thinges necessary to be had). And that the damsell whiche pleased the kynge shulde be quene in Vasthis stede. And this pleased the kinge and he did so. In the cyte of Susan there was a Jewe, whose name was Mardocheus, the sonne of Jair, the sonne of Semei, the sonne of Cis a man of Jemini, whyche was caryed away from Jeruſalem, * whan Jechonia the kynge of Juda was led awaye, (whome Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babylon caryed thence) and he norysched Hadassa (that is Esther) his vncles doughter: for she had neyther father nor mother, and the mayde was fayre and bewtyfull damsell: whome Mardocheus (whõ her father and mother was deed) receyued for his owne doughter. So it foꝛtuned, that whē the kynges cōmaundement and cōmission was published, and manye damoselles were brought togither in the Citye of Sulan, vnder the hande of Hagei. Esther was brought also vnto the kynges house, vnder the hande of Hagei the keper of womenne, and the damosell pleased him, and she founde fauour in hys syghte. And he caused oꝛnamentes to be giuen hir, and such thinges as belonged to hir, & appointed hir seuen comely damsels out of the kinges house, & fauoured bothe hir and hir gentilwomen singulerly in the house of the women. But Hester shewed not hir people and her kynred: foꝛ Mardocheus had charged hir, that she shoulde not tell it. And Mardocheus walked euery daye before the court of the womennes house, that he myghte know howe Esther did, and what shoulde become of her.

And when the appointed time of euerye damsell came, that she shoulde go in vnto the kinge Ahasuerus, after that she had bene twelue monethes in the dechynge of the womenne (foꝛ their dechinge must haue so muche tyme, namely syxe monethes wyth Balme and Myxre, & sixe monethes wyth good spices, so were the women bewtified) thē went there one damsell vnto the king, and what so euer she required (so that it were comely) that must be geuē her, to go wyth her out of the womens buyldynge vnto the kynges palaice. In the euenynge she went, and on the mozowe againe, into the second house of the women, abidynge vnder the hande of Saasgas the kynges chamberlaine, which kept the concubines. And she came in vnto the kynge no moze, except it pleased the king to haue hir, and that he called her by name. Now whē the tyme came of Esther the daughter of Abihan the vncle of Mardocheus (whiche had receyued her as hys owne daughter) that she should come in to the king, she desired nothing, but what Hagei the kinges chāberlaine, the keper of the women sayde. And Esther founde fauoure in the sight of all them that loked vpon her. And Esther was taken vnto king Ahasuerus into hys house royal, in the tenth moneth, which is the moneth * Tebeth, in the seuenth yere of his rayne. And the kinge loued Esther aboue al the women, & she founde grace & fauour in his syghte before all the virgins: so that he set the crowne of the kingedome vpō hir head, and made hir quene in stede of Vasthi. And the kinge made a greate feaste vnto all his princes and seruauntes (whiche feaste was bicause of Esther) and caused the lādes to be in quietnes, & gaue gifres, as became the royalrye of a kinge.

And when the virgyns were gathered foꝛ gither the second tyme, Mardocheus sate in the kynges gate. And as yet hadde not Esther shewed her kinred and hir people, accoꝛding as Mardocheus had biddē her: foꝛ Esther dyd after the woꝛde of Mardocheus, lyke as if she hadde bene yet vnder his gouernaunce. At the same time, while Mardocheus sate in the kinges gate, two of the kinges chamberlaynes, Bigthan & Theres, which kept the doꝛe, were wroth and soughte to laye theyr handes on the king Ahasuerus. Wherof also Mardocheus gate knowledge, * & told it vnto quene Esther, & Esther certified the kinge therof in Mardocheus name. And when inquisition was made, it was found so. And they were both hanged on tree: & it was writtē in the Chronicles before the kinge. Esth.6.a

A Fter these actes dyd kyng Ahasuerus pꝛomote Hamā the sōne of Amada the Agagite, & set him on hye & set his seat aboue al the pꝛinces that he had with him. And al the kings seruaūtes that were in the kinges gate bowed theyr knees, & woꝛshipped Haman: foꝛ the king had so cōmaunded, concerninge him. But Mardocheus bowed not the knee, & woꝛshypped hym not. Then the kynges seruauntes whych were in the kynges gate, sayd vnto Mardocheus, why transgressest thou the kinges cōmaundement? And whē they spake thys daylye vnto him, he folowed them not, and they told Haman: that they myghte see howe Mardocheus matters would endure: foꝛ he had tolde them, that he was a Jewe. And when Haman sawe that Mardocheus bowed not the knee vnto hym, noꝛ woꝛshypped hym, he was ful of indignation, and thought it to litle to laye handes onely on Mardocheus foꝛ they hadde shewed hym the nacion of Mardocheus: wherefoꝛe he sought to destroye all the Jewes, that were thoꝛowout the whole empire of Ahasuerus, & that were of the nacion of Mardocheus. In the firste moneth (that is the moneth Nisan) in the twelueth yeare of kinge Ahasuerus they cast Phur (that is a lotte) before Haman frome daye to daye, and from moneth to moneth, to the twelueth moneth, that is the moneth Adar. And Haman sayd vnto kinge Ahasuerus: There is here a people scatred abroad, & dispersed among all people in al the landes of thine empire, & they haue their lawes contrary from all people, & do not after the kinges lawes, neither is it the kynges profite to suffer theim after this maner. If it please the kinge, let it be written that they maye be destroyed, and so wyl I weye downe ten thousande talentes of syluer, by the hãdes of the worckmen, to be brought ito the kiges treasure. And the kynge toke his ringe from his hand, & gaue it vnto Haman the son of Amadatha the Agagite the Iewes enemye. And the kynge sayd vnto Haman: Let the syluer be gyuen the, and doe with that people as it D pleaseth the. Thẽ were the kinges scribes March. called on the thirtenth day of the first moneth (Nisan) and there was writtẽ (accordinge as Haman commaunded) vnto all the kinges officers, & to the captaines that were in all the landes, and to the rulers of euerye people in the countreyes on euerye syde, accordynge to the writynge of euerye nation, and after theyr language: In the name of kinge Ahasuerus was it written, and sealed with the kynges ringes. And the writinges were sent by postes into all the kynges landes, to rooteout, to kyl, and to destroye all Iewes, bothe younge and old, children and women in one daye (namelye, vpon the thirtenth daye of the twelueth Moneth. Whiche is the moneth * Adar) Februari and to spoyle their goodes. This was the summe of the writynge, that ther should be a commaundement giuen in all landes, and publyshed vnto all people, that they shulde be ready agaynst the same day. And the postes went in all the haste, accordinge to the kinges cõmaundemẽt. And in Susã the chiefe city was the cõmaundement vpsyed. And the kynge and Haman sat and dranke, when in the meane tyme the citye of Susan was disquieted.

When Mardocheus perceiued al that was done, he rent his clothes & put on sackecloth, with ashes, & wẽt out into the middes of the citie, & criedloude, & lamẽtably, & came before the kinges gate, but he might not entre within the kinges gate, because he had sackcloth on. And in all lãds, coũtries & places as far as the kiges woorde and commaundemente extended, there was great lamentacyon amonge the Iewes, fastynge, weppynge and mournynge, and manye laye in sackeclothes and in ashes. So Hesters damosels & her chãberlaines came & told it her. Thẽ was the quene exceadingly astonied. And she sente rayment, that Mardocheus shuld put on, and
B ley the sackecloth frõ him. But Mardocheus wolde not take thẽ. Then called Hester Hathath one of the kinges chamberlaines (whiche stode before her) and gaue hym a commaundemente vnto Mardocheus, that he myght know what it were, wherefore he dyd so. So Hathath wente forth to Mardocheus vnto the strete of the cytye, which was before the kynges gate. And Mardocheus told hi of al that had happened vnto hym, & of the sume of syluer that Hamã had promised to wey downe into the kinges treasury because of the Iewes, if he wold destroye thẽ (& he gaue him the coppe of the kinges commaundement, that was deuised at Susan, to destroye them that he myght shew it vnto Esther) & to speake to her, and charge her, that she shoulde go in to the kyng, and make her prayer & sup- C plicacion vnto hym for her people. And when Hathath came in, he tolde Esther the wordes of Mardocheus. And agayne, Esther spake vnto Hathath, and cõmaunded hym to saye vnto Mardocheus: all the kynges seruauntes, and the people in the landes of the king, knowe that whosoeuer commeth within the courte vnto the king, whether it be man or woman, which is not called, the cõmaundement is, that the same shall dye: excepte the kynge holde out the golden scepter vnto hym (in token of graciousnelle) for then he shal liue. As for me, I haue not bene called to come in to the kynge nowe this thyrtie dayes. And they certified Mardocheus of Esthers wordes, D and Mardocheus badde saye agayne vnto Esther: thinke not to saue thyne owne life, while thou art in the kinges house, before all the Iewes. for yf thou holdest thy peace at thys tyme, then shall the Iewes haue helpe and delyueraunce out of another place, and thou & thy fathers house shalbe destroyed. And who knoweth whether thou art come to the kyngedome, for thys cause sake? Esther bad them gyue Mardocheus this answered: Go thou thy way, and gather al the Iewes together that are founde at Susan, and faste ye for me, that ye eate not and drynche not in thre dayes, neyther daye nor nyghte. I and my damosels wyll faste lykewyse, and so wyll I goe in to the kyng, which thing is yet cõtrary to the commaundement: and yf I perysshe, I perisshe. So Mardocheus wẽt his way, & did al that Esther had cõmaunded him.

And on the thirde daye it fortuned, that Esther put on her royal apparel, & stode in the courte of the kynges place within, ouer agaynste the kiges houle. And the king sat vpõ his roial seate in the kinges palace ouer against the gate of the house. And whẽ the king saw Esther the quene stãding in the courte, she found grace in his sight. And the king held oute the goldẽ scepter that was in his hande towarde Esther. So Esther crept forth, and forth, and touched the toppe of the scepter.

Then sayde the kynge vnto her: What wylt thou quene Esther? and what requirest thou? aske euen the halfe of the empire, and it shalbe geuē the. And Esther answered: If it please the kyng, let the kyng & Haman come this day vnto the banket, that I haue prepared for hi. And the kynge said: cause Hamā to make hast that he may do as Esther hath sayde. So the kyng and Haman came to the banchet that Esther hadde prepared, and the kynge sayde vnto Esther at the banket of wyne: what is thy petycyon? That it maye be geuen the. And what requirest thou? yf it be euen the halfe of the empire, it shall be done. Then answered Esther, and sayde: my petycyon and desire is, yf I haue founde grace in the sight of the kyng, and if it please the kyng to gyue me my peticyon, and to fulfyll my request, then let the kyng and Hamā come to the banket that I shal prepare for them and so wyll I doe to morowe, as the kynge hathe sayde. Then went Haman forth the same day ioyfull and merye in hys mynde.
And when the same Haman sawe Mardocheus in the kynges gate that he stode not vp, and kneled before hym, he was full of indignacyon at Mardocheus. Neuerthelesse, Haman refrayned hym selfe: and whē he came home, he sente, and called for hys frendes, and Zares hys wyfe, and Haman tolde them of the glorye of hys ryches, and the multitude of hys chyldren, and all together howe the kyng had promoted hym so greatlye, and howe that he had set hym aboue the Rulers and seruauntes of the kynge. Hamā sayd moreouer: Yea, & Esther the quene dyd let no man come in with the kyng vnto the banket, that she had prepared, excepte me. And to morowe am I byd-den vnto her also wyth the kynge. But in al this am I not satisfied, as longe as I see Mardocheus the Iewe sytteyng at the kinges gate. Then sayde Zares hys wife, and all his frendes vnto hym: Let them make a galous of fyftye cubytes hye, and to mo-rowe speake thou vnto the kynge, that Mardocheus maye be hanged theron, and go thou in merely with the kyng vnto the banket. And Hamā was well content with al, and caused the galous to be made.

THe same nighte could not the kynge slepe, & he cōmaūded to bryg the chronicles & storyes: which whē they were red before the kyg, they happed on the place where it was writtē, howe * Mardocheus Esthe. 2 d had told that Bigthana & Theres the kinges two chamberlaynes (whiche kept the thresholdes) sought to lay handes on kyng Ahasuerus. And the kyng said: what worshyp & good haue we done to Mardocheus therfore? Then sayde the kynges seruauntes that ministred vnto hym: There is no thynge at all done for hym. And the kynge sayde: Who is in the courte? (For Haman was gone into the courte without, before the kynges house, that he might speake vn to the kynge to hāge Mardocheus on the tree, that he had prepared for hym.) And the kynges seruauntes sayde vnto hym: behold, Hamā stāderh without in the courte.
And the kynge sayd: let hym come in. And when Haman came in, the kyng sayd vnto him: what shalbe done vnto the mā, whom the kynge wolde fayne bryngе vnto worshyp? Hamā thought in his heart: whom desireth the kyng to bryngе vnto worshyp more then me? And Haman answered the kyng: let the mā whom the kyng pleaseth to bryng vnto worshyp, be brought hither: that he maye be arayed wyth the royall garmentes, which the kig vseth to weare:
and the horse that the kynge rydeth vpon, & that the crowne royall maye be set vpon hys head. And let thys raymente and horse be delyuered vnto the hande of one of the kinges Rulers, that he maye araye the man withal (whome the kynge is disposed to bryngе to honoure) & cary him vpon the horse thorowe the streete of the cytye, & proclame before him: Thus shall it be done to the man, whom the kyng pleaseth to bryng to honoure. And the kynge sayde: Make haste, and take as thou hast sayde: the ray-mente and the horse and doe euen so vnto Mardocheus the Iewe, that sytteth before the kynges gate, and let nothynge fayle of al that thou hast spoken. Then toke Hamā the rayment & the horse, and arayed Mar-docheus, and brought hym on horsebacke thorowe the streete of the citie, & proclamed before him: Euen thus shall it be done vnto the man whom the kynge is disposed to honour. And Mardochius came agayne to the kynges gate, but Hamā gat him home in al the haste, mourning, bare headed, and tolde Zares his wyfe & al his frendes, eue-ry thynge that had happened hym. Then sayde his wise men & Zares his wyfe vnto hym: If it be Mardocheus, of the sede of the Iewes, before whē thou haste begonne to fall, thou shalte not preuayle agaynste him, but shalt surelye fall before hym. And whyle they were yet talkynge with hym, came the kinges chamberlaynes, and caused Haman to make haste to come vnto the banket that Esther had prepared.

¶ The. vii. Chapter.

And

A And the kyng & Haman came into the baket that quene Esther had prepared, & the kig sayde vnto Esther on the .ii. day at the baket of wine: what is thy petició (quene Esther) that it may be geuen the? & what requyrest thou yea, asle euē halfe of the empire, & it shal be done. And Esther the quene answered, & sayd: if I haue foūde grace in thy syghte (O kynge) and yf it please the kyng, then graunt me my life at my desire, and my people for my petityons sake: for we are solde, I & my people, to be destroyed, to be slayne, and to perish. And B wold god that we wer sold to be bōdmen, & bondwomen, then wolde I holde my tonge: For the enemy pondereth not the kynges harme. The kyng Ahasuerus answered, & sayde vnto quene Esther: who is he? And where is he, that dare presume in his mīde to do after that maner? And Esther sayde: the enemye and aduersarye is this wicked Haman. Haman was exceadingly afrayed before the kynge and the quene. And the kynge arose frome the banket, and frō the wyne in his displeasure, & wente into the palace garden. And Haman stode by, and C besought quene Esther for hys life: for he sawe that there was mischefe prepared for him of the kynge all readie. And when the kig came agayne out of the palace garden, into the place wher they dranke wine, Ha-mā had layed him dpō the bed, that Esther sat dpō. Thē sayd the king: wil he forze the D quene also before me in the house? allone as that word went out of the kynges mouth, they couered Hamans face. And Harbona one of the chamberlaynes that stode before the kynge, sayde: Beholde, there standeth a galous in Hamans house, fyftye cubites hye, whiche he had made for Mardocheus, that spake good for the kynge. The kynge sayde: hange him theron. So they hanged Hamā on the galous, that he had made for Mardocheus. Thē was the kynges wrath pacyfyed.

¶ The .viii. Chapter.

A The same daye dyd kinge Ahasuerus gyue the house of Haman the Jewes enemy, vnto quene Esther and Mar-docheus cam before the kyng, for Esther tolde howe that he belonged vnto her.
And the king put of his fingar ringe, whiche he had taken from Haman, & gaue it vnto Mardocheus. And Esther set Mardo cheus ouer the house of Haman. And Esther spake yet more before the king and fell downe at his feet wepinge, and besought him that he wolde put away the wickednesse of Haman the Agagite, and his deui ce that he had imagined against the Jewes.
And the king (accordīg to the maner) held out the golde sceptre toward Esther (whe-by was declared a token of graciousnes) Thē arose Esther, & stode before the kig, & sayd: if it please the king, & if I haue foūd grace in his sight, & if it be acceptable before the B king, then let it be written, that the letters of the deuice of Haman the sonne of Hamadatha the Agagite, maye be called A-gayne: which letters he wrote to destroye the Jewes, which are in al the kynges landes. For how can I suffre, & se the euel that shal happen vnto my people? Or howe can I loke vpon the destructiō of my kyndred?
And the kyng Ahasuerus sayd vnto quene Esther, & to Mardocheus the Jew: behold, I haue geuen Esther the house of Hamā, whō they haue hanged vpon a tree, because he layde hande vpon the Jewes. Wryte ye also for the Jewes, as it lyketh you, in the kinges name, and sealet with the kynges ryng (for the writtinges that were wryttē in the kynges name, and sealed wyth the kynges ryng, durste no man dysanull.) Then were the kinges scribes called at the same time, euen in the thyrde moneth, that Maye. is the moueth Siuan, on the thyrde and C twentieth daye. And it was written (acco-dynge to all as Mardocheus commaunded) vnto the Jewes and to the princes, to the debities and captaynes in the landes, whiche are from India vnto Ethiopia, namelye, an. C. and seuen and twenty landes vnto euery one accordynge to the writinge therof, & vnto euery people after their spech, & to the Jewes according to their writing & language. And he wrote in the kynge Ahasuerus name, & sealed it with the kinges ring. And dy postes that rode dpō hozses, & swift ponge mules sente he the writynges wherin the kynge graunted the Jewes (in what cities so euer they were) to gather thē selues together, & to stande for their lyfe, & for to root oute, to slaye, and to destroy all the power of the people & lād that wold re ble thē, with childre & wome, & to spoyle their good vpon one daye in all the landes of kyng Ahasuerus, namely, vpon the thirteenth daye of the twelueth moneth, which Februari is the moneth Adar. The summe of the D writing, was how there shoulde be a commaundemēt geuē in al landes, & published amonge al people, & that the Jewes shulde be ready agaynste that day, & to auēge thē selues on their enemyes. And so the postes that rode vpon the swifte hozses & mules, made hast with al spede, to execut the kiges worde, & the cōmaūdemēt was deuised in Sulā the cheefe citie. And Mardoche wēt out (frō the palace) & from the king, in roial apparell, of yelow, & white, & with a great crowne of golde, beinge arayed with a garmente of lilne & purple: & the citie of Susan reioysed, & was glad: & vnto the Jewes there was come [a new] light & gladnelle, ioye & worship. In all landes & cities into what places soener the kynges worde and cõmaundemente reached, there was ioye & mirth, prosperite & good dayes among the Jewes: in so much that many of the people in the lande became of the Jewes beleue, & the feare of the Jewes came vpon them.

IN the twelueth moneth, that is, the moneth Adar, vpõ the thirteenth daye of the same, when the kynges worde & cõmaũdement should be done, euen vpon the same daye that the enemyes shoulde haue destroyed the Jewes, to haue oppressed them, it turned contrary wyse, euen that the Jewes shulde subdue their enemyes. For thẽ gathered the Jewes together i their cities, within al the landes of kynge Ahasuerus, to lay hand on such as wolde do thẽ euel, & no man coulde withstand thẽ, for the feare of thẽ was come ouer all people. And al the rulers in the landes, & princes, & nobities, & officers of the kynge: promoted the Jewes, for the feare of Mardochey came vpon thẽ. For Mardochey was greate in the kinges house, & the reporte of hym was noysed in all landes, howe he encreased and greme. Thus the Jewes smote all theyr enemyes with a sore slaughter, & slue and destroied, did after their wyl vnto such as were their aduersaries. And at Susã the cheefe cytye slue the Jewes, and destroyed fiue hundred men, & slue Pharsãdatha, Dalphõ, Aspharha Phozatha, Adalia, Aridatha, Pharmastha, Arisai, Aridai, and Vaizatha, the ten sonns of Haman, the sonnes of Hamadata the enemy of the Jewes: but on his goods they layed no handes. At the same tyme was the kynge certifyed of the numbre of thole, that were slayne in the cytye of Susan. And the king sayd vnto quene Esther. The Jewes haue slayne and destroyed fiue hundred men in the citye of Susan, & the ten sonnes of Haman. What haue they done thinkest thou in the other lãdes of the kynge? And what is thy peticyon, that it maye be geuen thee? Or what requyrest thou more to be done? Esther answered: If it please the kynge, let hym suffre the Jewes to morowe also to doe accordynge vnto this dayes commaũdemẽt, that they may hang Hamãs ten sons vpon the tree. And the kyng charged to do so, & the commaundemẽt was deuised at Susan, & they hãged Hamãs ten sonnes. For the Jewes that were in Susã gathered thẽ selues together, vpon the fourteenth daye of the moneth Adar, and slue thre hundred men at Susã, but on theyr goodes they layed no handes. As for the other Jewes that were in the kinges lãdes, they came together, and stode for theyr lynes, that they might haue rest from their enemyes, & slue of their enemies fiue and seuenty thousand: how be it, they layd no handes on theyr goodes. This they did on the thirteenth daye of the moneth Adar, & on the fourteenth daye of the same moneth rested they, whiche daye they helde with feastinge & gladnes. But the Jewes which were at Susan, came together, both on the thirteenth daye & on the fourteenth, & on the fiftenth daye of the same they rested, and held that day with feastig & gladnelle. And therefore the Jewes that dwelt in the byllages, & vnwalled townes, helde the fourteenth daye of the moneth Adar, with gladnelle, & feasting, & kept holy day, & euery one sent giftes vnto another. And Mardocheus wrote these actes, and sente the wrytynges vnto all the Jewes that were in all the landes of kynge Ahasuerus, both nye & farre, that they shoulde make a law amonge thẽ selues, & hold the xiiii. & fiftenth daye of the moneth Adar, as the dayes where in the Jewes came to rest from their enemies, and as a moneth where in their payne was tourned to ioye, and their sorowe in to an holy daye, & that in those dayes they shoulde make feastes and gladnelle, and one to sende giftes vnto an other, and do dystribut vnto the poore. And the Jewes were contente wyth it that they had begon to do, and that Mardocheus wrote vnto them: howe that Haman the son of Hadamatha, all the Jewes enemye, had deuysed agaynste the Jewes, how he myghte destroye them, and caused to cast Phur (that is a lot) for to put them in feare, & to hynge them to noughte: and howe Hester went, and spake to the kyng, that thorowe letters hys wycked deuyce, (which he ymagyned agaynst the Jewes) myghte be tourned vpon hys owne heade, and howe he and hys sonnes were hanged on the tree. For the whyche cause they called thys daye Phurim, because of the name of the lot, & because of all the wordes of this wrytynge, & what they thẽ selues had sene, & what had happened vnto them. And the Jewes set vp, and tooke it vpon them and theyr seed, and vpon all suche as ioyned them selues vnto thẽ, that they wold not mysse, but obserue these two dayes yerely, accordyng as they were writtẽ & appointed, how that these daies are not to be forgotte, but to be kepte of children children among al kynredes, in al landes and cytyes. They are the dayes of Phu-rim, whiche dee not to be ouerskypt among the Jewes, & the memorial of them ought not to perysshed from theyr seed. And quene Hester the doughter of Abihail, & Mardocheus the Jewe wrote with all auctorite, (to confirme this seconde writyng of Phurim) and sente the letters vnto al the Jewes, in the hundred and seuen and twesye landes of the empire of Ahasuerus, with frendlye & faythfull wordes, to confirme these dayes of Phurim, in theyr tyme appoynted, accordinge as Mardocheus the Jew, and Esther the quene had appointed thē. And they bond theyr soule & theyr seed to fasting & prayer. And Esther stablished the wordes of these lottes, as it is written in the boke. And the kinge Ahasuer* layed tribute vpon the lande, and vpō the yles of the sea. And al that he dyd by hys power & auctorite, & the great woꝛkyng of Mardocheus, which the kyng gaue him, be they not writtē in the Chronicles of the kinges of Media and Persia? For Mardocheus the Jewe was the seconde next vnto king Ahasuerus, and great amonge the Jewes, and accepted amonge the multitude of hys brethrē as one that seketh the welth of his people, & speaketh the best for al hys seed.

N the lande of* Hus there was a mā whose name was Job: & the same was a perfect & iust mā, such a one as feared god, & eschued euel. And he had. vii. sons, and iii. doughters. * Hys substaūce also was. vii. M. shepe, & .iii. M. camels. b. C. yocke of oxen. & C. she asses, & a very great houshold, so that he was. i. of the most principal mē among al thē of the east coūtre. And his sons wente and made banketes, one day in one house, another daye in another, & sente for their three systers to eate and drinke with thē. And it foꝛtuned, that when they had passed ouer the tyme of their banketyng rounde about, Job sent foꝛ them, and sanctified them, and gat vp early, and offered foꝛ euery one a burntofferyng. Foꝛ Job sayde: lest peraduenture my sonnes haue done some offence, and haue bene vnthākful to god in their hearts. Thus dyd Job euerye daye: and vpon a daye* whan the chyldren of God came, and stode before the Lorde, it foꝛtuned that Sathan came also amonge them. And the Lorde sayde vnto Sathan. From whence comest thou? Sathan answered thy: Lord, and sayde: * I haue gone about the lande and walked thorowe it. And the Lorde sayde vnto Sathā: hast thou not considred my seruaunt Job, howe that there is none lyke him in the lande? a perfecte and a iust man: suche one as feareth God, & eschueth euyl? Sathan answered, and sayd vnto the Lorde: doeth Job feare God foꝛ nought? hast thou not preserued hym, and his house and all that he hathe on euery syde? Thou hast blessed the workes of hys handes, and hys possession is encreased in the lande. But laye thyne hande nowe vpon hym a lytle and touche all that he hathe, and he shall curse thee to thy face. And the Lorde sayd vnto Sathan: lo, al that he hath be in thy power, only vpon hym self, se that thou laye not thyne hande. And Sathan wente foꝛth frome the presence of the Lorde. And vpon a certayne daye it foꝛtuned, that hys sonnes and doughters were eatynge and drynkynge wyne in their eldest brothers house, and there came a messenger vnto Job, and sayde: Whyle the Oxen were a plowynge, and the Asses goynge in the pasture beside thē, the Sabees came & violētlye, and toke them awaye: yea, they haue slayne thy seruauntes with the edge of the swearde, and I onely ranne my way, to tell thee. Whyle he was yet speakynge, there came another, and sayde: The fire of God is fallen from heauen, and hathe brēte by all thy shepe and seruauntes: and consumed them: And I onely ranne awaye, to tell the. And whyle he was yet speakynge, there came another and sayde: The Chaldees made three armyes, and fell vpon the camels: and haue caryed them awaye: yea, and slayne thy seruauntes with the swerd, and I onely am gotten awaye to tell thee. And whyle he was yet speakynge, there came another, and sayde: Thy sonnes and thy doughters were eatyng and drinking wyne in their eldest brothers house: and beholde, there came a myghty great winde out of the south, and smote the. iiii. corners of the house, which fell vpon thy chyldren, and they are dead: and I am gotten awaye alone foꝛ to tell the. Then Job stode vp, and rent hys clothes, and shaued his head: fell downe vpon the grounde, woꝛshipped: and sayde: * Naked came I out of my mothers wombe, and naked shall I tourne thyther agayne. The LORDE gaue, and the Lorde hath taken away, (euen as it hathe pleased the lord so it is come to passe) blessed be the name of the Lorde. * In all these thinges dyd Job not offende, noꝛ murmured folyshlye agaynst God.

thou not considered my seruaunte Job? for there is none lyke hym in all the lande.
For he is a perfite, and a iuste man: such a one as feareth God: and eschueth euil, and cōtinueth styl in his godlynes. And thou moueste me agaynste hym, that I shoulde punyche hym for naught. And Satan answered the Lorde, and sayde: Skynne for skynne? yea, a man wil geue all that euer he hath for his lyfe. But laye thine hande now vpon hym, and touch once hys bone & flesshe, & he shall curse the to thy face. And the Lorde sayde vnto Satan: lo, there hast thou him in thy power, but spare his lyfe.
So went Satan forthe from the presence of the Lord: & smote Job, with marueilous sore byles, from the soule of the foote vnto his crowne, so that he sate vpon the groude, in the asshes: and scraped of the fylthe of his sores with a potcherde. Then sayde his wife vnto him: * Woest thou continue yet in thy perfectenesse? curse God and dye.
But Job saide vnto her: Thou speakeste lyke a folysshe womanne. Shal we receyue prosperitie at the hande of GOD, and not receyue aduersitie? * In all these thynges did not Job sinne with his lippes.

Nowe when Jobs frendes hearde of all the trouble that happened vnto him, there came thyder of thē, euery one from his owne place, namelye Eliphas the Themanite, Baldad, the Suhite, and Sophad the Naa-mathite. And they were agreed together to come to shewe their compassion vpon him, and to conforte him. So when they lyfted vp their eyes a farre of, they knewe him not. Then they cryed and wept, and euerye one of them rente hys clothes: and sprinckled duste vpon their heades in the ayre. They sate thē downe bi him allo vpō the grou. bii. dayes: & .vii. nyghtes. Nether was there anye of thē that spake one word to him, for they sawe that his payne was very great. ¶ The. iii. Chapter.

AFter this opened Job his mouth & cursed his day. And Job answered, and saide, lost be that daye, wherin I was borne: & the nighte, in the whiche it was said: ther is a mā child cōceiued. The same day be turned to darckenes, & no regarded of God frō aboue, neyther let him shine vpō it with lyghte, but let it be stay-ned with darckenesse and the shadowe of death. Let the dimme cloude fal vpon it, & let it be lapped in with sorowe on the day time. Let the darcke storme ouercome that nyghte: and let it not be ioyned vnto the daies of the yere, nor cōsited in the mone-thes. Desolate be that night, and without gladnesse: let them that curse the daye, and that be ready to rayse vp mourninge, gene it also their curse. Let the starres of that nyghte be dymme thorowe darckenesse of it. Let it loke for lyghte, but let it se none, neyther the rising vp of the fayre morning: because it shut not vp the wōbe that bare me. For then should the sorowes haue bin hydde frome myne eyes. Alas * why dyed I not in the byrthe? whye dyd not I perish, as sone as I came out of my mothers wōbe? Why let they me vpon their knees?
Whye gaue they me souche wyth theyr brestes? Then shoulde I nowe haue lyen still, I shoulde haue slept, and bene at reste lyke as the kynges & lordes of the earthe, which haue builded the selues special places: Or as the princes that haue had great substaunce of golde, and their houses full of siluer. Or why was not I hid, as a thunge borne oute of tyme, eyther as younge children, whiche neuer sawe the lighte?

There muste the wicked ceasse from theyr tyrannye, and ther such as be ouer laboured be at reste: there are those lette out fre, whyche haue bene in prysons, so that they heare no more the voyce of the oppressour.
There are small and greate, and the seruaunte is free from his master. Wherefore is the lyghte geuen to hym that is in miserie? & life vnto them that haue heauy hertes? Which longe for death (& thoughe it come not) would dygge it oute of hyd places, whych also would be exceadynge glad and reioyce, if they could fynde their graue any where. That should be ioye to that mā whose waye is hyd, & God hepeth it backe from him. For my syghes come before I eate, and my roarynges fall oute like the water. For the thynge that I feared is come vpon me; and the thynge that I was afrayed of, is happened to me: was I not happy? had I not quietnes? Was I not in rest? And nowe cōmeth such misery vpon me. ¶ The. iiii. Chapter.

ANd Eliphas the Themanite aun-swered, and sayde: If wee begyn to tented? But who can withholde him selfe frō speakinge? Beholde, thou hast bene a cha-stener of many, & hast conforted the werye hādes. Thy wordes haue set vp those that were fallen, thou hast refresh ed the weake knees. But nowe that the plage is come

Or when were the godly destroyed? For (as I haue proued by experience) they that plowe iniquitie, and * sowe wzetchednes, reape the same. With the blast of God they perish, & with the bzeth of his nastrelles are they consumed away: The roarynge of the Lyon, and the voyce of the Lyon, and the teeth of the Lyons whelpes are pulled out. The Lyon perysheth for lacke of pray, & the Lions whelpes are scatered abzoade. And vnto me came the wozde secretely, & mine eare harb receyued a tittle therof. In the thoughtes and visions of the nyght (when slepe commeth on men) feare came vpõ me, & dread, whyche made all my bones to shake. The wynde passed by, before my presence, and made the heeres of my flesche to stande vp. He stode there, and I knewe not his face, an ymage there was before myne eyes, and in the stylnes heard I a voyce. * Shal mã be more iuste then God? Or shall a man be purer then his maker? Beholde, he founde no trueth in his seruauntes, and * in his angels there was folye. How muche more in them that dwell in houses of claye, and whose foundation is but duste: which shal be cõsumed as it wer with a Mothe? They shal be smytẽ frõ the mozynng to the euenning: yea, they shal perish for euer whẽ no man thinketh theron. Is not their excellẽtie gone away with thẽ, they shal dye truly: & not in wisdome.

A CRye (I praye the) if happily there be anye that will answere the, and loke vnto vpon anye of the holy men. As for the folyshe manne, disspleasure killeth him, and anger slayeth the ignorannte. * I haue sene my selfe, when the folyshe was depe rooted, & sodenly I cursed his habitacion. His chyldren were without prosperitie, & they were slaine in the gate, & there was no mã to deliuer them. * His harueste was eaten vp of the hungry, and the weapened manne spoyled it, and the thyrsty droncke vppe theyr laboure. Is not the earth that bryngeth forth iniquity, nether commeth sorow out of the grounde, but man is borne vnto laboure, lyke as the sparkes flye vp oute of the hote coles. But I wyll alle counsell at the Lorde, and wyll talke with God, whiche dothe thinges that are vnsearcheable, and maruels without nũbre. * He geueth rayne vpon the earth, & poureth water vpon the streets, to set vp the that be of lowe degree, and that those which are in heauinesse, may come to prosperitie. He destroyed the deuyses of the sotle, so that they? handes are not able to perfourme any stedfastle thynge. * He compasseth the wyse in their owne craftines, & ouerthzoweth the counsell of the wycked. In so much, that they runne into darkines by fayre daye, and * grope aboute them at the noone daye, lyke as in the nyght. He shall delyuer the poore frome the swearde, and frõ the threatenynges of the vngodlye, and from the violence of the myghtye. He is the hope of the poore: and the mouthe of the wycked shall be stopped. Beholde, * happye is the manne, whom God punysheth: therefore refuse not thou the chastenynge of the almyghtye. For thoughe he make a wounde, he geueth a plaster, thoughe he smyte, his handes maketh whole againe. He shall deliuer the in syxe troubles, & in the seuẽth, there shal no euel come to thee. In hunger, he shall saue the from deathe: and whẽ it is warre from the power of the swearde. Thou shalt be kept from the euell tounge, and when trouble commeth, thou shalte not nede to feare. In destruction and derth thou shalte be merye, and * shalt not be afrayed of the beastes of the earth. For the stones of the lande shall be confederate with the, and the beastes of the felde shall geue the peace. And thou shalt knowe that thy dwellynge place shalbe in rest, & thou shalt go and beholde thy habytacion, and shalte not synne. Thou shalte se also, that thy sede shal encreasle, and that thy posteritye shalbe as the grasse vpon the earth. Thou shalte come also to thy graue in a fayre age, like as whẽ they take vp a cozne whefe in due season: Lo, thus we oure selues haue proued by experience, & euen thus it is. Herken thou to it also, that thou maiest take hede to thy selfe.

IOb answered also, & sayde: O that the disspleasure whiche I haue were truly weyed, and my punishment layde in the balaunces together: for nowe is it heuyer thẽ the sande of the sea. And thus is the cause, that my wozdes are so sozowful. For the arowes of the almyghtie are rounde aboute me, whose indignation hath dronck vp my spyrite, & the terrible feares of God are set against me. * Doth the wild Asse roar when he hath graslle? Or crieth the oxe when he hath foder ynough? That whiche is vnsauerye, shall it be eaten wythoute salte? Or is there any taste in the whyte of an egge? gynne and smyte me: that he would let his B hand go, and take me cleane awaye. Then should I haue some comforte: yea, I would defyre him in my payne, that he should not spare, for I wyll not be agaynste the wor-des of the holy one. For what power haue I to endure? And what is myne ende, that my soule might be pacise? Is my strogthe the strogth of stones? Or is my flesshe made of brasse? Is it not so, that there is in me no helpe: and that my substaunce is taken from me? He that is in tribulacion oughte to be comforted of hys neyghbour: but the feare of the Lorde is cleane awaye. Myne owne brethren passe ouer by me as the water broke, and as the ryuer of water, do hastely go awaye. But they that feare the hoze frosse, the snowe shal fall vpon them.
C When theyr tyme commeth, they shalbe destroyed and perisshe: when they be set on fire, they shalbe remoued out of their place: for the pathes that they goe in, are croked: they haste after vayne thynges, and shall perisshe. They turne them to the pathes of the man, and to the waies of Saba, where in they haue put theyr trusste. Confounded are they that put anye confydence in them.
For when they come to obtayne the thyn-ges, that they loke for, they are brought to confusyon. Euen so are ye also come vnto me: but nowe that ye se my mysery, ye are afeayed. Wyd I desyre you to bringe vnto me, or to geue me any of your substaunce?
To deliuer me from the enemyes hande, or to saue me from the hande of tyraunnes?
D Teach me, and I wil holde my tonge: and when I do erre, shewe me wherin. Howe redfaste are the woordes of truthe? And which of you can rebuke & reprooue them?
Do ye take delyberacion to checke mens sayinges? and iudge a poore woid spoken in vaine? Ye fall vpon the fatherlesse, and go about to ouerthrow your owne frende.
And therfore be cõtent, and loke nowe vpõ me, and I wyll not lye before youre face.
Turne (I praye you) be indifferẽt iudges, turne agayne, and ye shal se myne vngil-tinesse whether there be any vnrighteousnes in my tonge: or payne woides in my mouthe. ¶ The. viii. Chapter.

D euery man denieth it, sayinge: I knowe the not. Lo, thus is it with him, that reioyseth in his owne doinges: and as for other, they growe out of the earth. Behold, God wyll not caste away a vertuous man, neither wil he helpe the vngodly. Thy mouth shall be wyll speake of strength, lo, he is stronge: yf men wil speake of ryghteousties, who dare be my recorde. yf I wyl iustifie my self, mine owne mouth shal condempne me. If I wyl put forth my selfe for a perfect man he shal proue me a wycked doer. For though I be an innocente, and my conscience cleare: yet am I wery of my lyfe. One thinge it is, and C therfore I sayde: He destroyeth bothe the righteous and vngodlye: And thoughe he slaye sodaynely with the scourge, yet wyll he laughe at the punishmente of the innocent. As for the worlde, it is geuen ouer into the hande of the wycked, and he shal couer the faces of the Iudges therof: Is it not so? where is there any, but he is suche one?

Iob.7.a. * My dayes are more swyft then a runner: they are gone, and haue sene no good thing, they are passed awaye as the shyppes that be good vnder sayle, and as the Egle that flyeth to the praye. When I am purposed to forget my complaynynge, to leaue of fro my wrath, and to comforte my selfe, then am I afrayed of al my sorowes, for I know that thou wilt not iudge me innocent: yf I be then a wycked doer, why labboure I in vayne? If I washe my selfe wyth snowe D water, and make myne handes neuer so cleane at the well, yet shalte thou dyppe me in the myre: and myne own clothes shal defyle me. For he that I must gyue answer vnto, and wyth whome I go to the lawe, is not a man as I am. Neyther is there any dayesman to laye his hande betwene vs.
Let him take his rodde awaye fro me: yea, let him make me no more afrayde of hym, and then shall I answere him without a-nye feare. For as longe as it is thus, I can make no answere.

O remembre (I beseke the) howe that thou madest me of the moulde of the earthe, and shalte brynge me into dust agayne. Hast thou not turned me, as it were mylcke, and turned me to cruddes like chese? Thou hast couered me with skynne and flesche, & ioyned me together with bones and synnowes, Thou hast graunted me lyfe, and doone me good: and the dylygente hede that thou takest vpon me, hath preserued my spirite. Thou hast hydde these thynges in thyne hert. I am sure, that thou remembrest thys thynge. If I syn̄e, thou haddeste an eye vnto me, and shalte not declare me innocent because of myne offence. If I haue done wyckedlye, wo is me therefore: If I haue done ryghteouslye, yet dare I not lift vp my heade, so full am I of confusion, and se myne owne myserye. Thou huntest me oute (brynge in heupnesse) as it were a Lyon, and troublest me oute of measure. Thou bryngest freshe wytnes agaynst me, and thy wrathe increasest thou vpon me, very many are the plages that I am in.
Job.3.b * Wherefore hast thou brought me oute of my mothers wombe? O that I hadde perysshed, and that no eye had sene me. If they had caryed me to my graue as soone as I was borne, then shoulde I be nowe as though I had neuer bene. Are not my dayes fewe? Let him then leaue of fro me, and let me alone, that I maye ease my selfe a lytle, a fore I go thyther, from whence I shall not tourne agayne: euen to the lande of darcknesse and shadowe of deathe: yea, into that darcke cloudy lande and deadlye shadowe, where as is no order, but terrible feare as in the darcknesse.

THen answered Sophar the Naamathite, & sayd: Should not he that maketh many wordes, be answerde? Should he that babbleth much, be cōmended therfore? Should mē geue eare vnto the only? Thou wilt laugh other men to scorne, and shal no body mocke the agayne? Wilt thou saye vnto God. The thynge that I take in hand is perfect, & I am cleane in thy sighte? O that God wold speake, & open his lyppes agaynst the, that he might shewe the (out of his secrete wysedome) why he rewardeth the double as he was appoynted to do: thō shouldeste thou knowe, that God had forgotten the, bycause of thy synne. Arte thou able to finde out the secretes of God? Or wylt thou attayne to the perfectnesse of the almyghtye? He is hyer then heuen, what art thou able to do. Deper then the hell, howe wilte thou then knowe him? Hys lengthe exceadeth the length of the earth, & his breathe the bredeth of the sea. Though he turne all thynges vpsyde downe, close them in, gather them togeather, who wyll tourne hym from hys purpose? Or who may saye vnto hym, why doest thou so?
1.Pe.16.b Jere.7.b Psal.7.c Rom.8.e * For it is he that knoweth the vanytie of mē: he seeth their wyckednesse also, though he not then consyder it? A playne bodye exalteth hym selfe, and a man newe borne is lyke a wylde asses colte. If thou haddeste nowe a ryghte heart, and lyfteddest vp thine handes towarde hym: yf thou wouldeste put awaye the wyckednesse that thou hast in hande, so that no vngodlynesse dwel in thy house. Then myghtest thou lyft vp thy face wythoute shame, and then shouldeste thou be sure, & haue no nede to feare. Then shuldest thou forget thy miserie, and thinke no more vpon it then vpon the waters that runne by. Then shoulde the resydue of thy lyfe be as cleare as the noone daye & spring forth as the morning. Then mighteste thou haue confort, in the hope that thou hast: and slepe quietlye, when thou art buryed. Then shouldest thou take thy rest, and no man to make the afrayed: yea, manye one should set muche by the. As for the eyes of the vngodly, they shalbe consumed, and not escape: their hope shall be myserye, and sorowe of mynde.

SO Job answered, & said: The (no dout) ye are the men alone, and wysedō shall perysh with you. But I haue vnderstanding as well as ye, and am no lesse thē ye. Yea, who knoweth not these thinges? Thus he that calleth vpon god, and whom God heareth, is mocked of his neyghbour: the Godly and innocent man is laughed to scorne. Godlinesse is a lyghte dispised in the hertes of the riche, and is sette for them to stumble vpon. A Then answered Eliphas the Themanite, and sayd: Shall a wyse mannes answere be the science of the wynde, & fyll any mans bellye, as it were the wynde of the east? Shall he reprowe with a worde that is nothing worth: and speake the thinges whyche can do no good? When he goeth forth to get hys lyuynge, he seeth playnely, that the daye of darcknesse is at hande. Sorowe and carefulnesse wyl make hym afrayde, and coinpasse hym rounde about, lyke as it were a kynge wyth hys hooste readye to the battayle. But woulde God that youre soule were in my soules stede: then shoulde I heape vp wordes agaynste you, and shake my heade at you. I shoulde comforte you wyth my mouthe, and releasse youre payne, wyth the talking of my lyppes. But what shal I do? For all my wordes, my sorowe wyll not cease: and thoughe I holde my tounge, yet wyll it not departe from me. But now that God hathe sente me aduersitye, thou haste troubled all my congregacyon. And that thou haste fylled me wyth wrynchles, my fleshe is recorde, and my leanesse ryseth vp agaynste me, and beareth wytnesse agaynste me. He is angrye at me, he hateth me: and gnasheth vpon me wyth his teeth. Myne enemye shouleth vpon me with hys eyes. They haue opened theyr mouthes wyde vpon me, * and smytten me vpon the cheke despytefullye, they gather theym selues together agaynst me. God hathe put me in preace wyth the vngodlye, and deliuered me into the handes of the wycked. I was in wealth, but he hath broughte me to naught. He hath taken me by the necke, he hath rent me, and sette me as a marcke for hym selfe. Hys Archers compasse me rounde about: he wounded my loynes, and doth not spare. My bowelles hath he poured vpon the grounde. He hath geuen me one wounde vpon an other, and is fallen vpon me like a giaunt. I haue sowed a sackecloth vpon my skynne, and lye with my heare in the duste. My face is swollen with weapyng, and in myne eyes is the shadowe of death. Howe be it, there is no wyckednes in my handes, but my prayer is cleane.

O earth, couer not thou my bloude, and let my cryinge synde no rowme. For loe, my witnesse is in heauen: and he that knoweth me, is aboue in the height: My frendes gyue me manye wordes to scorne: and myne eye powreth out teares vnto God. O that a body myght pleate wyth God, as one manne doeth wyth another: yet the numbre of my yeares is come, and the waye that I muste goe is at hande, frome whence I shall not turne agayne.

My breathe stynketh, my dayes are shortened. I am heardе at deathes dore. Frowarde men are with me, & myne eye must continue in the bitternesse of them. O delyuer me, and loke out one to be my suretye in thy syghte, what is he that knoweth who wyll prouyde for me? For thou haste wythholden theire heartes from vnderstadynge: therefore shalte thou not set (them) vpon hye. He prouyketh hys frendes parte of hys good, but hys owne chyldren spende it. He hath made me as it were a by word of the people, whereas afore I was their tope. Myne eye is dymme for bery heuinesse, & al my strength is become lyke a shadowe. Vertuous men therefore shall well consider thys, and the innocente shall take part against the hypocrite. The ryghteous also will kepe hys waye, and he that hath cleane hades, wyl euer be stronger and stronger. As for you, turne you, & get you hence (I praye you) seynge I can not finde one wyse man amonge you: My dayes are passe, & my counsayles & thoughtes of my herte are banished awaye, chaungynge the nyghte into daye, & the lyghte into darkenesse. Thoughe I tarye neuer so muche, yet the graue is my house, and I haue made my bedde in the darke. I call corruption my father, and the wormes cal I my mother and my sister. What helpeth then my longe tarynge? Or who hath consydered the thynge, that I looke for? All that I haue shal go downe into the pytte, and lye with me in the dust.

Then answered Baldad the Suhite, and sayde: when wil ye make an ende of your wordes? Marke well, & then we wyll speake. Wherefore are we counted as beastes, & reputed as vile in your sight? He destroieth him selfe with his anger, shal the earth be forsaken, or any stone remoued out of his place because of the? Yea, the lyght of the vngodlye shall be put out, and the sparke of hys fyre shall not burne. The light shalbe dark in his dwellinge, and his candle shal be put out wyth him. His presumptuous gouges are kept in, and his owne counsaile shall caste him downe. For his feete are taken, as it were in the net, and he is at hys wits ende. His fote shall be holden in the snare, & it shall eate the them that be thirstye of the bloud: The snare is layd for hym in the grounde, and a pytfall in the waye. Fearefulnesse shal make him afrayed on euery syde, that he shal not knowe where to get out. Hunger shall be hys strength: miscfortune shall hange vpon him. He shal eate the strength of his owne skinne, euen the firste borne of death shall eate hys strength. Hys hope shal be rooted out of hys dwellinge, bery fearfulnesse shall bringe him to the king. Other menne shall dwell in his house (but shall be none of his) and brimstone shal be scattered vpon his habitacion. Hys rootes shall be dryed vp beneth, and aboue shall his braunch be cut downe. His remembrance shal perish e frem the earth, and he shal haue no name in the strete: they shal driue hym him from the pyght he into darckenes: and cast him cleane out of the world. He shal neyther haue children, nor kynsfolkes amonge hys people: no, nor any posterytie in hys dwellynges. They that come after him, shall be astonyed at his day, & they that go before, shalbe afeared. Suche are nowe the dwellinges of the wicked, & this is the place of hym that knoweth not God.

But if ye wyl enhaunce your selues against me, and accuse me to be a wycked person, bycause of the shame that is come vpon me: knowe this then, that it is God, which hath handled me so violentlye, & hath compassed me about with his net. ✠ If I co-

O that my wordes were now wrytten: O that they were put in a boke, would God they were grauen with an yron pēne in leade, or in stone to endure. For I am sure, that my redemer lyueth, & that I shall ryse out of the earth in the latter daye: that I shalbe clothed agayne with this skynne, and se God in my flesche. yea, I my self shall behold him, not with other, but with these same eyes. ¶ The. xx. Chapter.

THen answered Saphar the Naamathite, and sayd: For the same cause do my thoughtes compel me to answere. And why? my mynde is ready wythin me. I haue sufficiently herd thy checkyng and reproue, therefore am I purposed to make answere after myne vnderstandynge.
Knowest thou not this, namely, that from the begynnynge (euer sins the creacyon of man vpon earth) the gladnesse of the vngodly hath bene shorte, & that the ioye of ypocrites contynued but the twynkelynge of an eye? Whē he had plenteousnesse of euery thing, yet was he poore, thoughe he was helped on euery syde. For thoughe the wycked haue neuer so much to fil his bely, yet god shal sende his wrath vpon him, and cause his indignacio to raygne ouer him: so that yf he flye the yrō weapons, he shalbe shot with the stele bowe. The arowe is taken forth, and gone out of the quyuer, & a glysteryng swerde throwe the gall of hym, feare shal come vpon him. There shall no darcknesse be able to hyde him. They wayted foz me, as foz the raine: & gaped vpō me, as the groūde doeth to receyue the latter shoure. When I laughed, they knewe wel it was not garnesse. And the lyghte of my countenaunce would they not put out. When I agreed vnto their wape: I was the cheefe, & sate as a kynge with his armie about him. The.xxxii. Chapter.

SO these thꝛee men would striue no moꝛe with Iob, because he helde hym selfe a ryghteous man. But Elihu the sonne of Barachell, the Bullite, of the kynred of Ram, was deep soꝛe displeased at Iob, be-cause he called him selfe iust before God. And with Iobs thꝛee frendes he was angry also, because they had founde no reasonable aunswere to ouercome Iob. Nowe tarped Elihu, eyll they had ended their communi-cacion with Iob, for why? they were elder then he. So when Elihu the sonne of Ba-rachell the Bullite, sawe that these thꝛee men were not hable to make Iob answere: he was mistontent: Elihu the sonne of Ba-rachel the Bullite answered him selfe, and sayde: *Considꝛyng that I am ponge, and ye be men of age: I was afrayed, and durste not shewe fozth my mynde. For I thoughte thus within my selfe. Je becommeth olde men to speake, and the aged to teach wyse-dome. Euery man (no doubt) hath a minde, *but it is the inspiracyon of the Almygh-tye, that gyueth vnderstandynge. Greate menne are not alwaye wyse, neyther doeth euery aged manne vnderstande the thynge that is lawefull. Therefoꝛe, wyll I speake also (I heare me) and I wyll shewe you al-so myne vnderstandynge. For when I had wayted tyll ye made an ende of youre talkynge, and hearde your wisedome, what argumentes ye made in youre communica-cion: yea, when I had diligentlye pondꝛed what ye sayde, I founde not one of you that made anye good argumente agaynste Iob, that dyꝛectlye coulde make answere vnto his wozdes: lest ye shoulde saye: We haue founde oute wisedome: God shal caste hym downe, and no manne. Ye hath not spoken vnto me, and I wyll not aunswere him as ye haue done (for they were so abas-shed, that they coulde not make aunswere, noꝛ speake one wozde) but in so muche as ye wil not speake, standyng still like dōme men, and makynge no aunswere: I haue a good hope for my parte, to shape him an aunswere, and to shewe him my meanyng:

so much that hys body is cleane consumed

God he shalbe gracious vnto him, & shew a man confesse (& say:) I haue offended, I did vnrighteously, & it hath done me no good. yea, he hath deliuered my soule frō destrucmen) herkē vnto me, ye that haue vnderstanding, for the eare proueth & discer-neth the woordes * and the mouthe tasteth Job.12.b the meates: As for iudgemēt let vs seke it oute amonge oure selues, that we maye knowe what is good. And why? Job hath sayde: I am ryghteouse, but GOD doeth me wronge. I muste nedes be a lyer, though my cause be ryght, and violently I am plaged wher as I made no faule, wher is there suche a one as Job, that drynketh vp scornefulnelle lyke water: whyche goth in the company of wycked doers, and walketh with vngodlye men? For he hathe sayde: Thoughe a man be good, yet is he noughte before GOD. Therefore herken vnto me, ye that haue vnderstandynge.

Farre be it from God, that he should meddle wyth wyckednesse: And farre be it F from the Almyghtye, that he shulde meddle with vnryghteousdealynge: * For he Mat.16.b shall rewarde the workes of mā, and cause Rom.2.b euery mā to fynde accoyding to his wayes.
For sure it is, that * God condempneth no man wrongfully, and the iudgement of Rom.3.b the Almyghtye is not vnrighteous. Who ruleth the earth in hys steade? Or whome hathe he set to gouerne the whole worlde?
To whome hath he geuen hys heart for to drawe hys spirite and breathe into hym?
All fleash shal come together vnto nought, and all men shal turne agayne vnto * dust. Gen.3.b.
If thou now haue vnderstandynge, heare pſa.146

what I saye: And hearken to the voyce of my wordes. Maye he be a ruler, that loueth no ryght? Or maye he that is a verye innocent man doe vngodlye? Is it reason that thou shouldest saye vnto the kynge: Thou arte wycked, or thou art vngodlye, and that before the princes? * he hathe no respecte vnto the persons of the lorde: lye, and regardeth not the ryche more the the poore. For they be all the worcke of hys handes. In the twinklynge of an eye shall they dye: and at mydnyght, when the people and the tyrauntes rage, then shal they perysche and be taken awaye without handes. And why? * hys eyes looke vpon the wayes of man, and he seeth all hys goynges. There is no darcknesse, nor shadowe of deathe, that can hyde the wycked doers from hym. For no man shall be suffered to goe into iudgemente wyth GOD? Manye one: yea, innumerable doeth he punish, and setteth other in theyr steades. Therfore, shall he declare their worckes, he shal turne the nyght, and they shall be destroyed. They that were in the steade of feares, dealte lyke vngodlye menne: And therefore he punyshed them, because they tourned backe from hym, and would not consider all hys wayes. In so muche that they haue caused the voyce of the poore to come vnto hym, and nowe he heareth the complaynte of suche as are in trouble. If he graunte pardon, who wyll condempne? And yf he hyde awaye hys countenaunce, who shall be able to see it? whether it be to the people, or to anye manne, thus wyll he doe. For the vngodlynesse of the people, doeth God make an ypocrite to raygne ouer them. For so muche then as I haue begonne to talcke of GOD, I wyl not hinder the. If I haue gone amisse, enfourme thou me: if I haue done wronge, I wyl leaue of. Can he do nothing without the? for thou hast reproued his iudgement. Thou also hast thine owne minde, and not I. But speake on what thou knowest. Let men of vnderstandynge tell me, and lette a wyse man hearken vnto me. As for Job, he hathe neyther spoken to the purpose: nor wyselye. O father, let Job be well tryed, because he hathe aunswered for wicked men: yea, aboue hys synne he doth wyckedlye, triumpheth amonge vs, and multiplieth his wordes agaynst God.

ELihu spake moreouer, & sayd: thinkest thou it right, that thou sayest: I am righteous before God. For thou sayest: What aduauntage wyl it be vnto the, & what profyte shalt thou haue of my sin, Therfore will I geue an answere vnto the & to thy cõpanions with the: looke vnto the heauē, & behold it: cõsidre the cloudes, whiche are hier the thou. yf thou hast sinned, what hast thou done against him? if thine offences be manye, what hast thou done vnto hym? If thou be righteous, what geuest thou hym? Or what wyl he receaue of thyne hande? Of suche an vngodlye persone as thou, and of the sonne of manne that is righteous as thou pretendest to be there is a great crie and complaynte made by them that are oppressed with byolence: yea, euerye man complayneth vpon the crueltye of tyrauntes. For suche a one neuer sayeth: Where is God that made me? and that giueth vs occasion to prayse him in the nyghte? Whyche geueth vs moore vnderstandynge then he doeth the beastes of the earthe, and teacheth vs moore then he doeth the foules of heauen. If anye suche complayne, no man geueth answere, & that because of the wickednesse of proude tyrauntes. But yf a man call vpon God, doeth not he heare hym? doeth not the almyghtye accepte hys crye? When thou speakest then, shulde not he pardon the, yf thou open thy selfe before him, and put thy truste in hym? Then bleth he no byolence in hys wrathe, nether hath he pleasure in curious and depe inquisicions. Therefore doeth Job open hys mouth but in bayne, & foli̇shly doeth he make so many wordes.

ELihu proceed forth in his talking, & sayd: holde the styll a lytle, & I shall shewe the what I haue yet to speake on Gods behalfe. I wyll open vnto the yet moze of mine vnderstãding: and proue my mater righteous. And truelye, my wordes shall not be vayne, seynge he is wyth the that is perfect in knowledge: beholde, the greate God casteth awaye no man, for he him selfe is myghtye in power and wysdome. As for the vngodly, he shall not preserue him, but shall helpe the poze to theyr ryght. He shall not turne hys eyes awaye from the righteous, but as kynges shall they be in their trone: he shall stably the the for euer, and they shalbe exalted. But yf they be layed in prison and chaynes, or bounde with the boundes of trouble, thē wyl he shewe them their worcke, and the synnes wherewith they haue bled cruell violence. He wyth pumishing and nurtring of them roundeth them in the eares, warneth them to leaue of from theyr wyckednesse, and to amende. * If they nowe wyll take hede, and serue hym, they shal weare out theyr dayes in prosperite, and theyr yeares in pleasure, and ioye. But yf they wyll wyl not heare ken, they shal go thorowe the swerde, and perishe, or ever they be aware.

As for suche as be layned ypocrites, they shall heape vp wrathe for them selues: For they cal not vpon hym, though they be his pryseners. Thus shall theyr soule perishe in folyshnes, and theyr lyfe shall be condemned amonge the fornicatoures. The poore shall he delyuer oute of hys affliction, and rounde them in the eare whē they be in trouble. Euen so shall he kepe the (yf thou wylte be contente) frome the bottomlesse pitte that is beneth: And yf thou wylte holde the quiet, he shall fyll thy table wyth plenteousnes. Neuertheles, thou hast condempned the iudgement of the vngodlye: yea, euen suche a iudgemente and sentence shalte thou suffre. For then shall not thy cause be styfled wyth cruelnes, nor pacified with many gyftes. Thynkest thou that he wyl regarde thy riches? he shal not care for golde, nor for al them that excell in strēgth. Prolonge not then the tyme, tyll ther come a nighte for the, to set other people in thy steade. But beware that thou turne not aside to wickednes & syn, whiche hitherto thou haste chosen more thē mekēnesse. Beholde, God is of a mightye hie power: wher is there suche a gide & lawe geuer as he? Who wil reproue hi of his way?
Who wyll saye vnto hym: thou haste done wronge. O consider how great & excellente his workes be, whome all men loue and prayse: yea, wonder at hym, and yet they se hym but a farre of. Beholde, so greate is God, that he passeth our knowledge, nether are we able to come to the experience of his yeares. * He tourneth the water to smalle droppes, he dryueth hys cloudes to gether for to rayne, so that they powre downe and droppe vpon mē. Ye can sprede oute the cloudes (a couerynge of hys Tabernacle) and cause his lyght to shine vpō them, and to couer the bottome of the sea.
By these thiges gouerneth he his people, and geueth them aboundance of meate.
With the cloudes he hydeth the lyghte: & at his commaundement it cometh agayne.
The rysynge vp thereof sheweth he to hys frendes, and to the catel.

the soūd of his voice, & the noise that goeth out of his mouth. He gouerneth eue-ry thinge vnder the heauē, & his light reacheth vnto the ende of the worlde. A roring voyce foloweth hym: For hys glorious maiestye geueth suche a thunders clappe, that (thoughe a whyle he dreme) yet maye he not perceyue it afterwarde. Ie gyueth oute hys voyce: Greate thynges doeth he, whiche we can not comprehende. * When he commaundeth the snowe, it falleth dpō charge, immediatlye the showers haue ther strength, & fal doune. He sēdeth feare dpō euery mā, that they might know their owne workes. The beastes crepe into their dennes, and take their reste. Oute of the Southe commeth the tempeste, and colde out of the Northe. At the breathe of God, the frost commeth, and the waters are sheed abrode. He maketh the cloudes to do theyr labour, in gewig moystnes: & agayne with his lighte he driueth awaye the cloude. He distributeth also on euerie side, accordinge as it pleaseth him to deale out his workes: that they may do what soeuer he cōmaundeth them thorowe the whole worlde: whether it be to punish any land, or to do good (O Job) stande styll, & consider the wonderous workes of God. Arte thou of councell wyth God, when he doeth these thynges?

When he causeth the lyghte to come forthe of hys cloudes? Arte thou of hys councel, whē he spredith out the cloudes?
Haste thou the perfecte knowledge of hys wonders? and how thy clothes are warme when the lande is styll thorowe the southe wynde? Haste thou helped hym to sprede out the heauen, whiche is to loke vpon, as it were caste of cleare metall? Teache vs what we shall saye vnto hym, for we are vnmete, because of darcheneste. Shall it be told hym what I saye? Shoulde a man speake, or shoulde he kepe it backe? For e-uery mā seeth not the light that he hepeth clere in the cloudes, which he cleuseth whē he maketh the wynde to blowe. Golde is brought out of the Northe, but the prayse and honoure of Gods feare, commeth from God hym selfe. It is not we that can fynde out the almyghtye: for in power, equyte, fore me? or * who hath geuē me any thing afore hād, that I may reward him agayne? al thinges vnder heaue are mine. I feare hi not whether he threaten or speake fayre. Who lifteth hi vp, & strippeth hi out of his clothes, or who taketh hi by the bit of his bridle? who openeth the dore of his face? for he hath horrible teeth rounde about. His body is couered with scales, as it were with shyldes lockte in, kepte, & well compacte together. One is so ioyned to ano-C ther that no ayre can come in: yea, one hangeth so vpon another, and sticketh so together, that they can not be sondred. His neesing is lyke a glystringe fyre, and his eyes lyke the morynge shyne. Oute of hys mouth goe torches, & out of hys nostrelles there goeth a smoke, lyke as oute of an hoote seething pot. Hys breth maketh the coales burne, & the flame goeth oute of hys mouth. In his necke remayneth strength, and nothinge is to labozious for him. The membzes of his body are layned so straite one to another, and cleaue so fast together, that he can not be moued. His hert is as harde as a stone, and as faste as the stithye that the smith smiteth vpon. When he goeth, the mightie are afrayed, & feare troubleth them. If any man drawe out a sword at him, it shal not hurt him: there may nepther speare, iauelyng, nor brest plate abide him. He setteth as much by a strawe, as by yron, and as much by a rotten stock, as by brasse. He shooteth not awaye for him that bendeth the bowe: and as for slyng stones, he careth as muche for stubble as for them.

He counteth the dartes no better than a strawe, he laugheth him to scorne that cha-reth a speare. He treadeth the golde in the myre, lyke the sharp pot herdes. He ma-keth the depe to boyle lyke a pot, and fyr-eeth the sea together like an oynement. He maketh a pathe to be seue after him, the depe is his walkynge place. Vpon earth is there no power lyke vnto hys, for he is so made, that he feareth not. If a man wil consyder al the hye thynges, this same is a kig ouer all the childzen of pryde.

¶ The .xlii. Chapter.

Then Job answered the Lord, & sayd:
*I know that thou hast power ouer al thinges, & that there is no thought hyd vnto the. For who can hyde hys owne counsaile so secrete, but it shalbe knowen?
Therfore haue I spoken, that I vnderstode not, the thinges that are so hye, and passe myne vnderstandyng. O herken thou vnto me also, & let me speake: answere vnto the thyng that I will aske the. I haue geuen diligent eare vnto the, & now I se the with myne eyes. Wherfore I gyue myne owne selfe the blame, and take repentaunce in the dust and ashes. Nowe when the Lorde had spoken these wordes vnto Job, it fortuned, that the Lord said vnto Eliphas the The-manite: I am displeased with thee, and thy two frendes, for ye haue not spoken of me, the thing that is right: lyke as my seruaut Job hathe done. Therfore, take you nowe seuen oxen, and seuen rammes, and goe to my seruaunte Job, and * offre vp for youre selues a burntofferyng, and my seruaunte Job shal pray for you. Him will I accepte, and not deale with you after your folyshenesse: in that ye haue not spoken the thyng whyche is right, lyke as my seruaunt Job hath done. So Eliphas the Themanite, & Baldab the Suhite, and Sophar the Naa-mathite wente their waye, and dyd accor-dyng as the Lord commaunded them. * The Lorde also accepted the person of Job, and the Lord turned the captiuitie of Job, whe he prayed for his frendes: Yea, the Lord gaue Job * twyse as muche as he had afore. And then came there vnto him al his brethren, all his systers, and al they that had bene of his acquayntaūce afore, & dyd eate breade with him in his house, wondring at him, & ofsering him ouer al the trouble, that the Lorde had brought vpon him. Euery man also gaue him a certaine summe of money, and a Jewell of golde. And the Lorde made Job rycher then he was before: for he had fourtene thousande sheepe, sixe. M. camels: a thousande yocke of oxen, & a. M. Asses.
He had seuē sonnes also, & thre doughters.
The firste doughter called he Jemima, the seconde Kezia, and the thirde Kerenhapuch.
In all the lande were no women founde so fayre, as the doughters of Job: and their father gaue them enheryteaunce amonge their brethren. After this lyued Job an hundred and fourtye yeres, so that he saw * his childzen, and his childzens childzen vnto the fourth generacyon. And so Job dyed, beynge olde, and of a parfyte age.

* The sorowes of death compassed me, and the ouer flowynges of vngodlynes made me afrayed. psa.116.a

The paynes of hell came abonte me, the snares of death ouertoke me.

In my trouble I wyl cal vpon the Lorde, and complayne vnto my God.

So shal he heare my voyce out of hys (holy) temple, & my complaynt shal come before hi, it shall entre euen into hys eares.

* The earth trembled and quaked, the verye foundacions also of the hylles shoke & were remoued, because he was wrath. mat.27.f

There went a smoke out in hys presence: & a consumyng fire out of hys mouthe, so that coales were kyndeled at it.

He bowed the heauēs also, & came downe, and it was darke vnder hys fete.

He rode vpon the cherubins, & dyd flye, he came fliyng vpō the wiges of the winde.

He maw darknes his secrete place: his pauilion voūde about him, with darke water and thycke cloudes to couer him.

At the brightnes of his presēce his cloudes remoued, hayle stones, and coales of fire.

The Lorde also thundred out of heauen, & the hyest gaue his thūder, hayle stones & coales of fyre.

He sent out hys arowes & scatered thē, he cast forth lightninges, & destroyed them.

The sprynges of waters were sene, and the foundacions of the rounde worlde were discouered at thy chydynge.

O Lorde, at the blastynge of the breath of thy displeasure.

He shall sende downe frome the higth to fetch me, and shal take me out of manye waters.

He shal deliuer me fro my strongest enemy, and from them which hate me: For they are to myghty for me.

They preuented me in the day of my trouble: but the Lorde was my vpholder.

He broughte me forthe also into a place of liberty: he brought me forth, euē because he had a fauoure vnto me.

The Lord shal rewarde me after my righteous dealyng: according to the clenes of my handes shal he recompence me.

Because I haue kept the wayes of the lorde: and haue not forsaken my GOD as the wycked doeth.

For I haue an eye vnto all his lawes: and wyl not caste oute hys commaundements from me.

Drawe me out of the nette that they haue layed prynelye for me, for thou arte my strength.
Luc.23.e * Into thy handes I commende my spirite: Act.7.g For thou hast redemed me, O Lord thou God of trueth.
I haue hated them that holde of superstitious vanities, and my trust hathe B bene in the Lorde.
I wil be glad and reioyse in thy mercye: for thou hast consydred my trouble, and hast knowen my soule in aduersities.
Thou hast not shut me vp into the handes of the enemye, but hast set my fete in a large rowme.
Haue mercye vpon me, O Lorde, for I am in trouble, and myne eye is consumed for verye heuynesse: yea, my soule and my body.
For my life is waren old with heuines, and my yeares with mournynge.
My strength faileth me because of mine iniquitte, and my bones are corrupte.

I am become lyke a broken vessell.
For I haue hearde the blasphemye of the multitude: and feare is on every syde.
Whyle they conspyre together agaynste me, and take their counsell to take away my lyfe.
But my hope hath bene in the, O Lorde, I haue sayde: thou art my God.
My tyme is in thy hande: delyuer me from the hand of mine enemies, and from them that persecute me.
Shewe thy seruaunte the lyghte of thy countenaunce, and saue me for thy mercyes sake.
Let me not be confounded, O Lorde, for I haue called vpon thee: let the vngodlye be put to confusyon, and be put to silence in the graue.
Let the lying lippes be put to silence, which cruellye, disdaynfully, and dyspytefully, speake agaynst the ryghteous.
O howe plentyful is thy goodnesse, which thou haste layed vp for them that feare thee: and that thou hast prepared for them, that put their trust in the, euen before the sonnes of men!
Thou shalte hyde them preuely by thyne owne presence, from the prouoking of all men: thou shalte kepe them secretly in thy tabernacle, from the stryfe of tonges.
Thankes be to the Lorde, for he hathe shewed me merueilous great kyndnesse in a stronge cytie.
And when I made hast, I sayde: I am caste out of the syght of thine eyes.
Neuertheles, thou hearest the voice of my prayer, when I cryed vnto the.

Fret not thy selfe because of the vngodly: Neyther be thou enuious agaynst the euell doers. A For they shall sone be cut downe lyke the grasse, and be wythered euē as the grene herbe.
Put thou thy truste in the Lorde, and be dooynge good: dwel in the lande, and verely thou shalt be fed.
Delyte thou in the Lorde, and he shal giue the thy heartes desyre.
Committe thy waye vnto the Lorde, and put thy truste in hym, and he shal bringe it to passe.
He shall make thy rygheousnes as clearе as as the ryght, and thy lust dealyng as the noone daye.

Holde the styll in the Lorde, and abide paciently upon hym: but greue not thy selfe at hym, whose waye doeth prospere agaynste the man that doeth after euyll counselles.

Leane of from wrath, and let go displeasure, fret not thy selfe, els shalte thou be moued to do euell.

Wycked doers shalbe roted oute: and they that paciently abide the Lord, those shal enherit the lande.

Yet a lytle while, and the ungodly shall be clene gone: thou shalt loke after his place, and he shalbe awaye.

But the meke spirited shall possesse the earth, and shalbe refreshed in the multitude of peace.

The ungodly seketh councell agaynste the iuste, and gnasheth upon hym with his tethe.

The Lorde shall laughe hym to scorne, for he hath sene, that his daye is commyng.

The ungodly haue drawē out the sweard, and haue bended their bowe.

To cast downe the poore and nedye, and to slaye suche as be of a righte conuersacion.

Theyr sweard shall go thorow their owne herte, and theyr bowe shalbe broken.

A smale thynge that the ryghteouse hath, is better then greate rychesse of the ungodlye.

For the armes of the ungodlye shalbe broken, and the Lorde upholdeth the ryghteous.

The Lorde knoweth the dayes of the godlye, and their inheritaunce shall endure for ever.

They shall not be confounded in the perelous tyme, & in the dayes of dearth they shall haue ynoughe.

As for the ungodly, they shall perish: and the enemyes of the Lorde shall consume as the fatte of lambes: yea, euen as the smoke shall they consume awaye.

The ungodly borroweth and payeth not agayne, but the ryghteouse is mercyfull and lyberall.

Suche as be blessed of God, shall possesse the lande, and they that be cursed of him, shalbe roted out.

The Lorde ordereth a good mans goynge, and maketh his waye acceptable to him selfe.

Psa.14.b. Thoughe he fall, he shall not be caste awaye, for the Lorde upholdeth him with his hande.

I haue bene yonge, and now am olde: and yet sawe I neuer the ryghteous forsaken, nor his sede beggyng their breade.

The righteous is euer mercyfull, and lendeth, and his sede is blessed. Psa.xv.d

Flee from euyll, and do the thynge that is good: and dwel for euer.

For the Lorde loueth the thynge that is right, he forsaketh not his that be godly, but they are preserued for euermore.

The unrighteous shalbe punyshed, and as for the sede of the ungodly, it shall be roted oute.

The righteous shall inherete the land, and dwell therin for euer. Psa.x.d

The mouth of the ryghteous is exercysed in wysedome, and his tonge wilbe talkynge of iudgement. F

The lawe of his God is in hys herte, and his goynges shall not slyde.

The ungodly seeth the ryghteous, and seketh occasyon to slaye hym.

The Lorde will not leaue him in his hande, nor condempne him when he is iudged.

Hope thou in the Lord, and kepe his way, and he shal promote the, that thou shalt possesse the lande: when the ungodly shal perish, thou shalte se it.

I my selfe haue sene the ungodly in greate power, & florysshing like a grene bay tre.

I went by, and lo, he was gone: I sought him, but [his place] coulde no where be founde.

Kepe innocencye, and take hede unto the thynge that is ryght, for that shal bring a man peace at the laste.

As for the transgressours, they shal perysh together, and the ende of the ungodly is, they shall be roted oute at the last.

But the saluacyon of the ryghtuous commeth of the Lorde, whiche is also theyr strength in the tyme of trouble.

And the Lorde shall stande by theim, and saue theim: he shall deliuer thē frome the ungodly, and shall saue thē, bicause they put their truste in hym

✶ All thy waues and stormes: are gone ouer me.

The Lorde hathe graunted hys louynge kindnesse on the daye tyme: and in the night season did I synge of hym, & made my prayer vnto the God of my lyfe.

℣ I wyll saye vnto the God of my strength, why haste thou forgotten me: why go I thus heuely, whyle the enemye oppresseth me?

myne

My bones are smytten a sunder as with a swearde: while myne enemies (that troube me) cast me in the teth.
Namely, while they saye daylye vnto me where is nowe thy God?
Why art thou so vexed (O my soule): & why art thou so disquieted within me?
O put thy trust in God, for I will yet thanke him which is the helpe of my countenaūce, and my God.

A Gyue sentence with me, O God, and defende my cause agaynst the vngodlye people: Oh delyuer me from the disceptful and wylked man.
For thou art the God of my strength: why haste thou put me from the: and why go I so heuylye, whyle the enemye oppresseth me?
Oh sende out thy lyght and thy truth, that they maye leade me: and brynge me vnto thy holy hill, and to thy dwellyng.
And that I maye goe vnto the aultare of God, euen vnto the God of my ioye and gladnesse.
And vpon the harpe will I gyue thanckes vnto the, O God, my God.
* Why art thou so heuye (O my soule) and Good lucke haue thou with thyne honour, ryde on because of the worde of truth, of mekenesse and rightwysnes: & thy right hande shall reache the terryble thynges.

B Thy arrowes are very sharpe, and the people shalbe subdued vnto the, euen in the myddes among the kynges enemyes.
Heb.i.b. * Thy seate, O God, endureth for euer: the sceptre of thy kyngedome is a ryghte sceptre.
Thou hast loued righteousnesse, and hated iniquite: wherfore God (euen thy God) hath anoynted the with the oyle of gladnesse aboue thy felowes.
All thy garmentes smel of myrre, Aloes, & Cassia, out of the ivery palaces, whereby they haue made the glade.
Kynges doughters were amõg thy honourable wemen: vpon thy ryght hande dyd stande the Quene in a vesture of golde, [wrought about with dyuers colours.]
C Herken (O doughter) and consydre: encline thine eare, forget also thyne own people, and thy fathers house.
So shall the kynge haue pleasure in thy bewtie, for he is the Lorde [God] & worshyp thou hym.
And the doughter of Tire shall be there with a gift, like as the riche also among the people shall make their supplication before the.
The kinges doughter is all glorious within, her clothynge is of wrought golde.
She shalbe brought vnto the king in rayment of nedle worke: the virgins that be her felowes, shal beare her company, and shalbe brought vnto the.
With ioy & gladnesse shal they be brought and shall enter into the kynges palaice.
In steade of thy fathers thou shalte haue childre, whom thou maist make princes in all landes.
I wyl remember thy name from one generacion to another: therfore shal the people gyue thankes vnto the world without ende.

myghte,

mighte, and wonderfull workes that he hath done.

He made a couenaunt with Jacob, & gaue Israel a lawe, * whiche he commaunded oure fore fathers to teache their children.

Exo.12.d Josu.4.d

That their posterite myght knowe it, and the children whiche were yet vnborne.

To thintent that when they came vp, they myght shew their children the same.

That they myght put their trust in God, and not to forget the workes of god, but to kepe his commaundementes.

Exo.xx.c * Deu.32.a

And not to be as their forefathers, a faythles & stubburne generacion: a generacion, that set not their hearte right, and whose spirite cleued not stedfastlye vnto God.

Like as the children of Ephraim, whiche being harnessed & carying bowes, turned them selues backe in the daye of batayl.

They kept not the couenaunce of god, and would not walke in his lawe.

But forgat what he had done, & the wonderful workes that he had shewed for them.

Marueilous thynges did he in the sight of our fathers in the lande of Egypte, euen in the felde of zoan.

Exo.14.d * He deuided the sea, and let them go thorow: he made the waters to stande on an heape.

Exo.14.f Nu.xx.b * In the day time also he led them with a cloude, and all the nyght thorowe with a lyght of fyre.

Exo.17.b He claue the harde rockes in the wyldernes, & gaue them drynke therof, as it had bene out of the great deapth.

1.Cor.x.a He brought waters oute of the stonye rocke, so that it gushed out like the riuers.

Yet for all this, they synned more agaynste hym, and prouoked the moste hyeste in the wyldernes.

They tempted God in their hearte & required meate for their lust.

They spake agaynste God also, sayinge: shall God prepare a table in the wyldernesse.

Exo.17.b Nu.11.b He smote the stonye rocke in dede, that the water gushed out, and the streames flowed withall: but can he geue breade also, or prouyde flesh for his people?

When the Lord heard this, he was wroth, so the fyre was kyndled in Jacob, & there came vp heuy displeasure agaynst Israel.

Because they beleued not in God, and put not their truste in his helpe.

So he commaunded the cloudes aboue, & opened the doores of heuen.

Exo.xvi.b Deu.8.a Sap.16.b Joh.vi.d

He rayned downe Manna also vpon the for to eate, & gaue them of the heuen corne.

So man dyd eate angels fode, for he sente them meate ynoughe,

He caused the east wynde to blowe vnder the heauen, and thorowe his power he brought in the southwest wynde.

Exo.16.d. Nu.xxv. * He rayned flesh vpon them as thycke as dust, & feathered foules lyke as the sande of the sea.

He lette it fall amonge their tentes, euen rounde about their habitacion.

So they dyd eate, and were well fylled, for he gaue them their owne desyre: They were not disappointed of their lust.

Nu.11.a * But while the meate was yet in their mouthes, the heuy wrathe of God came vpon them & slewe the wealthyest of them: yea, & smote downe the chosen men that were in Israell.

Nu.14.f * But for all this, they synned yet more, & beleued not his wonderous workes.

Therefore their dayes dyd he consume in vanite, and their yeares in trouble.

Nu.1.a 1.Cor.x.a * When he slewe them, they sought him, and turned them early, and enquired after God.

And they remembred that God was their strength, and that the hie God was their redemer.

Neuertheles, they did but flater him with their mouthes, and dissembled with him in their tongues.

For their heart was not whole with him, neyther continued they stedfast in his couenaunt.

But he was so mercyfull that he forgaue their misdedes, and destroyed them not, yea, many a tyme turned he his wrathe away, and wolde not suffre his whole displeasure to aryse.

Ps.civ.c * For he considered that they were but flesh: & that they were euen a wynde that passeth away, & commeth not agayne.

Many a tyme dyd they prouoke him in the wildernesse, and greeued him in the deserte.

They turned backe, and tempted god, and moued the holye one in Israel.

F

They thought not of his hand, and of the daye when he delyuered them from the hande of the enemye.

How he had wrought his myracles in Egypte, & his wonders in the felde of zoan.

Exo.7.d * He tourned their waters into blonde, so that they might not drinke of the riuers.

Exo.8.d * Exo.8.b

He caste vpon them the furyousnesse of his wrath, anger, displeasure, and trouble, & sent euyl angels amonge them.
Exo. 9.c *He made a waye to his indignacyon, and spared not their soule fro death, but gaue

Exo. 12. *And smote all the fyrste bozne in Egypte,

E.135.b. dwellynges of Ham.
F But as for hys owne people, he lead them forth lyke sheepe, and caried them in the wildernesse like a flocke.
He brought them oute safely, that they shoulde not feare, & ouerwhelmed their enemies with the sea.
And broughte them within the borders of his sanctuarye: euen to this mountaine whyche he purchased with hys ryghte hande.
Deu.3.a. *He cast out the Heathē also before them, Iosu.6. caused their lande to be deuided among 10.&.11 thē for an heritage, and made the tribes of Israel dwell in their tentes.
So they tempted and displised the moste hye God, and kept not his testimonies.
But turned their backes, and fell awaye like their forefathers, starting aside like a broken bowe.
For they greued hym with their hill aul-tees, and prouoked hym to displeasure with their Images.
Whē God hearde this, he was wrothe, and toke sore displeasure at Israel.
So that he forsoke the Tabernacle in Silo, euen the tente that he hadde pitched amonge them.
He deliuered their power into captiuitie, and their bewty into the enemies hand.
He gaue his people ouer also to the swerd, and was wroth with his enheritaunce.
The fire consumed their younge men, and there maydēs were not geuē to mariage.
Their priestes were slaine with the swoꝛd, and there were no wyddowes to make lamentacion.
So the Lorde awaked as one oute of slepe, and like a giant refreshed with wyne.
1.Re.5.b *He smote his enemyes in the hinder par-tes, and put them to a perpetual shame.
He refused the tabernacle of Joseph, and chose not the tribe of Ephraim.
Psl.87.a. * But chose the tribe of Juda, euen the hyll of Sion which he loued.
And there he buylded hys temple on hye, and layed the foundation of it, lyke the grounde which he hath made continually.
.xc.16.c *He chose Dauid also his seruaunte, and toke him awaye frome the shepe folde.
As he was folowing the ewes great with younge ones, he toke him: that he might feede Jacob hys people, and Israell hys enheritaunce.
So he fed them with a faithfull and true herte, and ruled them prudentlye wyth all his power.

Mearc

HEare * my prayer, O Lorde, & let my crying come in vnto the.
Hyde not thy face frome me in the tyme of my trouble: encline thine eares vn to me when I call, O heare me, & that ryghte soone.
For my dayes are consumed awaye lyke smoke, and my bones are brente vp, as it were a fire brande.
My heart is smitten downe, and withered like grasse, so that I forget to eate my breade.
For the voyce of my groning, my bone will scarce cleue to my flesche.
I am become lyke a Pellicane of the wil-dernes, & like an owle that is in the desert I haue watched, and am euen as it were a sparow, that sitteth alone, vpon the house roppe.
Mine enemies reuile me all the day longe: & they that are mad vpon me, are swoine together agaynst me.
For I haue eaten ashes as it were breade, and mingled my drincke with weping.
And that because of thine indignation and wrath, for thou hast taken me vp, & caste me downe.
My dayes are gone like a shadowe, and I am withered lyke grasse.
But thou, O Lorde, shalt endure for euer, and thy remembraunce throwout all generations.
Thou shalt aryse, and haue mercye vpon Sion, for it is time that thou haue mercy vpon her: yea, the tyme is come.
And why? * thy seruauntes thinke vpo her stones, and it pitieth them to see her in the duste.
The heathen shal feare thy name, O lord, and all the kynges of the earthe thy ma-iestye.
When the Lord shal builde vp Sion, and when his glory shal appeare.
When he tourneth him vnto the prayer of the poore destitute, & despyseth not theyr desire,
This shall be written for those that come after: * & the people which shalbe borne, shal prayse the Lorde.
For he hath loked downe from his San-ctuarye, oute of the heauen dyd the Lorde beholde the earth.
That he myght heare the mournynges of such as be in captiuite, and deliuer the children appoynted vnto death.
That they maye declare the name of the Lorde in Sion, and hys worshyp at Jerusalem.
When the people are gathered together, and the kyngdomes also to serue the lord.
He brought downe my strength in my iour-ney, and shortened my dayes.
But I sayd: O my God, take me not away in the myddest of myne age: As for thy yeares, they endure throwout al generacyons.
* Thou Lorde in the beginyng hast layde the foundacions of the earth, and the hea-uens are the worke of thy handes.
They shal perish, but thou shalt endure: they all shall waxe olde, as doth a garment, & as a vesture shalt thou chaunge them, and they shalbe chaunged.
But thou art the same, and thy yeres shal not fayle.
The children of thy seruauntes shall continue, and their sede shall stande fast in thy syghte.

Prayse the Lorde, O my soule, and forget not al his benefites.
Which forgeueth al thy sinne, and healeth

Whiche saueth thy lyfe from destruccion, and crowneth the with mercy & louyng kyndenesse.
Whiche satisfied thy mouthe with good thinges, making thy younge and lusty as an Egle.
The Lorde executeth righteousnesse and iudgement, for al them that are oppressed with wronge.
He shewed hys wayes vnto Moses, hys workes vnto the children of Israel.

parison of the earth, so great is his mercy also towarde them that feare him.
Loke howe wyde also the easte is frome weste, so farre hathe he sette oure synnes from vs.
Yea, like as a father pitieth his owne children, euen so is the Lorde mercyful vnto them that feare him.
For he knoweth wherof we be made, * he remembreth that we are but dust.
The dayes of man are but as grasse: for he flourisheth as a floure of the felde.
For as sone as the wynde goeth ouer it, it is gone, and the place therof shal knowe it no more,

But the mercyfull goodnes of the Lorde, endureth for euer and euer, vpon them that feare him, & his righteousnes vpon childrens children.
Euen vpon suche as kepe his couenaunte, and thinke vpon hys cõmaundementes to do them.
The Lorde hath prepared his seat in heauen, and his kingdome ruleth ouer all.
O prayse the Lorde ye aungels of hys, ye that excel in strength: ye that fulfyl hys commaundemente, and herken vnto the voyce of hys wordes.

Nun. * Thy worde is a lāterne vnto my psal.119.c fete, and a light vnto my pathes.
I haue sworne, and am stedfastly purposed, to kepe thy righteous iudgementes.
I am troubled aboue measure: quicke me, O Lorde, accordynge vnto thy worde.
Let the frewyll offerynges of my mouthe please the. O Lorde, and teache me thy iudgementes.
* My soule is alwaye in my hande, yet do Iud.xii.a not I forget thy lawe. Iob.13.c The vngodly haue layed a snare for me, but yet swarued not I from thy cōmaūdementes.
Thy testimonies haue I claymed as myne heritage for euer: and whye they are the very ioye of my herte.
I haue applied myne hert to fulfyl thy statutes alwaye: euen vnto the ende.
Samech. I hate them that ymagin euell thynges, but thy law do I loue.
Thou art my defence and shylde, and my truste is in thy worde.
Awaye fro me ye wicked, I wyll kepe the commaundementes of my God.
O stablisshe me accordynge vnto thy word, that I may lyue, and let me not be dys-apoynted of my hope.
Holde thou me vp, and I shall be safe: yea, my delyte shall euer be in thy statutes.
Thou haste troden downe al them that departe from thy statutes, for they ymā-gine, but disceate.
Thou putteste awaye all the vngodlye of the earthe lyke drosse: therfore I loue thy testimonyes.
My flesshe trembleth for feare of the: and I am afrayed of thy iudgementes.
Ain. I deale wyth the thinge that is law:

Q full and right, O geue me not ouer vnto myne oppressours.
Make thou thy seruaunte to delite in that whiche is good, that the proude do me no wronge.
Myne eyes are wasted awaye with loking for thy health, and for the worde of thy righteousnesse.
O deale with thy seruaunt according vnto thy louinge mercy: and teache me thy statutes.
I am thy seruaunte, O graunte me vnderstandynge, that I may knowe thy testimonyes.
It is tyme for the Lorde to laye to thyne hande, for they haue destroyed thy lawe.
For I loue thy commaundementes aboue golde and precious stone.
Therfore holde I streyght all thy cōmāudementes, and all false wayes I vtterlye abhorre.

R Phe. Thy testimonyes are wonderful, therfore doth my soule kepe them.
Whē thy worde goeth forth, it geueth light and vnderstādinge, euē vnto the simple.
I opened my mouth & drew in my breath, for my delite was in thy cōmaūdmētes.
O loke thou vpon me, and be mercyful vnto me, as thou vsest to do vnto those that loue thy name.
Order my steppes in thy worde: & so shall no wickednesse haue dominion ouer me.
O delyuer me from the wrongefull dealinges of men, and so shal I kepe thy commaundementes.
Shewe the light of thy countenaūce vpon thy seruaunt, and teach me thy statutes.
Myne eyes gushe out with water, because men kepe not thy lawe.

S Sade. Righteous art thou, O Lorde: and true is thy iudgemente.
The testimonyes that thou haste commaunded, are exceadynge ryghteous and true.
Psa.6 9.b John.2 b 1 pet. 12.b and.18.c *My zele hath euen cōsumed me, because mine enemies haue forgotte thy wordes.
& Thy worde is tryed to the vttermost, & thy seruaunte loueth it.
I am smal, and of no reputacion: yet do not I forget thy commaundementes.
Thy righteousnesse is an euerlastinge righ-teousnes: and thy lawe is the trueth.
Trouble and heuynesse haue taken holde vpon me: yet is my delite in thy cōmaūdementes.
The ryghteousnesse of thy testimonyes is euerlastinge: O graūt me vnderstādinge, and I shall lyue.

T Caph. I call with my whole herte, heare me, O Lorde, I wyll kepe thy statutes.
Yea, euen vpon the do I call, helpe me, and I shall kepe thy testimonies.
Early in the morynge do I crie vnto the:
for in thy worde is my truste.
Myne eyes preuente the nighte watches, that I might be occupyed in thy wordes.
Heare my voyce, O Lorde, accordynge vnto thy louynge kyndnesse: quicken me accordynge as thou art wont.
They drawe nye that of malice persecute me: and are farre from thy lawe.
Be thou nye at hande, O Lorde: for all thy commaundementes are true.
As concernynge thy testimonyes, I haue knowen lōge sence, that thou hast grouded them for euer.
Res. O consider myne aduersite, and dely- 10 uer me: for I do not forget thy law.
Auenge thou my cause, and delyuer me: quicken me accordinge vnto thy worde.
Health is farre frō the vngodlye, for they regarde not thy statutes.
Greate is thy mercy, O Lorde: quicken me as thou arte wonte.
Many there are that trouble me, and persecute me: yet do not I swarue from thy testimonies.
It greueth me, when I se the transgressours: because they kepe not thy lawe.
Consyder, O Lorde, howe I loue thy commaūdementes: O quicken me accordinge to thy louynge kyndnesse.
Thy worde is true from euerlastynge: all the iudgementes of thy ryghteousnesse endure for euermore.
Sin. Princes haue persecuted me without S cause, but my hearte standeth in awe of thy wordes.
Psal.9.8 • I am as glade of thy worde, as one that fyndeth great spoyles.
As for lyes, I hate and abhorre them: but thy lawe do I loue.
Seuen tymes a daye do I praise the, because of thy righteous iudgementes.
Greate is the peace that they haue whiche loue thy lawe, and they are not offended at it.
Lord, I haue loked for thy sauinge health, and done after thy commaundementes.
My soule hath kepte thy testimonies, and loued them exceadyngly.
I haue kepte thy commaundementes and testymonyes, for all my wayes are before the.
Thau. Let my complaynte come before T the, O Lorde: geue me vnderstandynge, accordynge vnto thy worde.
Oh let my supplycacion come before the, delyuer me accordynge to thy worde.
My lippes shal speake of thy prayse, whan thou haste taughte me thy statutes.
Yea, my tonge shall synge of thy worde:
for

for all thy comaundementes are ryghteouse.
Let thyne hande helpe me, for I haue chosen thy commaundementes.
I haue longed for thy saunynge healthe, O Lorde, and in thy lawe is my delyte.
Oh, let my soule liue, and it shall prayse the, and thy iudgementes shal helpe me.

A THe prouerbes of Salomon, the sonne of Dauid, kynge of Israell: to learne wysdome, & to perceiue the instruction, & to perceyue the wordes of vnderstandynge: and therby to receyue prudence, rightwysnes, iudgemente & equite. That the very symple might haue witte, and that the yonge men might haue knowledge and true vnderstandynge. By hearynge, the wyse man shal come by more wysdome: and he that is endued with vnderstandyng, shall optayne wyt to perceaue a parable, and the interpretacyon therof, the wordes of the wyse, and the darck speches Job.28.b Eccle.1.c Psl.116.b. Prou.9.c of the same. ✶ The feare of the Lorde is the begynnyng of wysdome. But foles despise wysdome and instruction. My sonne, B heare thy fathers doctrine: and forsake not the lawe of thy mother: for that shal bring grace vnto thy heade, & shalbe as a cheyne about thy neche. My sonne, cõsent not vnto synners if they entice the. and saye: come wyth vs, we wyl lay waite for bloude, and Psl.124.a lurcke priuely for the innocent without a cause: we shall ✶ swalow them vp lyke the hell, and deuoure them quicke and hole, as those that go downe into the pit. So shall we fynde all maner of costely ryches, & fyll our houses with spoyles. Caste in thy lotte amonge vs: and let vs haue all one purse. Psl.14.a My sonne, walcke not thou with them: refrayne thy fote frõ their waye. For ✶ theyr feete runne to euyll: and are hastye to shede bloud. But in vayne is the net layde for the C before the birdes eyes: yea, they thē selues laye wayte one for anothers bloud, and one of them woulde slay another. These are the Prou.8.a. wayes of all suche as be couetous, the one woulde rauyshe anothers lyfe. ✶ Wysdome cryeth without, and putteth forth her voice in the stretes. She calleth before the congregacyon in the open gates, and sheweth her wordes thorowe the cytie, sayng: O ye childrē, how long wil ye lone childishnes? howe longe wil the scorners delyte in scornynge, and the vnwyse be ennemyes vnto knowelege? O turne you vnto my correc- Esa.65.b cion: lo, I wil expresse my minde vnto you, Jere.7.a & make you vnderstande my wordes. ✶ I D haue called, and ye refused it: I haue stretched oute my hande: and no man regarded it: but al my counsels haue ye dispised: and sette my correction at naughte. Therefore shal I also laughe in your destruction, and mocke you, when that thynge that ye feare commeth vpon you: euen when the thynge that ye be afrayed of, falleth in sodenlye like a storme, and your misery like a tempest: yea, when trouble & heynesse cõmeth vpõ you. Then shall they call vpon me, but I will not heare: they shall seke me early, but they shall not fynde me. And that because they hated knowledge, and receyued not the feare of the Lorde: but abhorred my counsell, and despysed all my correccion. Therfore shall they eate the frutes of their owne waye, and be fylled with their owne inuencyons: for the turnynge awaye of the vnwise shall slaye them, and the prosperite of fooles shall be their owne destruction. and.xxi.c sonne, marke my wordes, & enclyne thyne eare vnto my sayinges. Let them not departe from thyne eyes, but kepe them euen in the myddest of thyne heert. For they are lyke vnto al those that fynde them, & healthy vnto al their bodyes. Kepe thyne hearte with al dilygence, for there vpon hangeth lyfe. Put away from the a froward mouth, and let the lyppes of slaunder be farre frō

A My sonne, geue hede vnto my wisdō, and bowe thine eare vnto my prū-dence: that thou mayest regarde good counsel, & that thy lyppes may speake knowledge. (Applie not thou thy selfe to Pro.xi.b. the disceatfulnesse of a woman.) * For the and.bvi.a lyppes of an harlot are a droppinge honye combe, & her throte is more glisterynge thē oyle. But at the laste she is as bytter as wormwod, and (her tonge) as sharpe as a B two edged swearde. Her fete go downe vnto death, & here steppes pearse thorow vnto hel. Perchaūce thou dwellinge with her wilt ponder the path of life: so vnstedfast are her wayes that thou cāst not knowe them.
Heare me now therfore (O my sonne) & depart not frō the wordes of my mouth. Kepe thy waye farre from her, and come not nye the dores of her house. That thou geue not thy strength vnto other, and thy yeres to the cruel. That other men be not filled with thy goodes, & that thy labours come not in a straunge house. Yea, that thou mourne not at the last (whē thou hast spēt thy bōdy & lusty grene youthe,) & thē say: C Alas, why hated I nurtoure? why dyd my heart despyse correccion? Wherefore was not I obedyent vnto the voyce of my teachers, and herkened not vnto thē that en-fourmed me? I am come almost fro al mys-fortune in the middest of the multitude & congregacion. Drynke of the water, of thyne owne well, of the ryuers that runne out of thine owne springes. Let thy welles flowe out abroade, that there maye be ry-uers of waters in the stretes: but let them be onely thine owne, & not straūgers with the. Let thy well be blessed, and be glade with the wife of thy youth. Louinge is the D hynde, and frendly is the roo: let her bre-stes alwaye satisfie the, and holde the euer content with her loue. My sonne, why wilt thou haue pleasure in an harlot, & embrace the bosome, of another womā? * For euery Job.xxi.a mans wayes are open in the syghte of the and.xxxiv.c Lorde, and he ponderth all their goynges.
The wyckednes of the vngodly shal catch him selfe, and with the snares of hys owne synnes shall he be trapped. He shal die without amendemente, and for his greate folly shall he go astraye.

In the waye of righteousnesse there is life, and in the same waye there is no death.

¶ The.xiii. Chapter.

A Wise sonne wil harke to his fathers G warning, but he that is scorneful, wil not heare whē he is reproued.

A good man shall enioye the frute of hys mouth, but he that hath a frowarde mind, shall be spoyled.

He that kepeth his mouth, kepeth his life: but who so openeth his lyppes to euel, destroyeth hym selfe.

The slogarde wolde fayne haue, and can not get his desire: but the soule of the diligente shal haue plentie.

A righteous man abhorreth lyes, but the vngodlye shameth borthe other and hym selfe.

Righteousnesse kepeth the innocent in the waye, but vngodlynesse doth ouerthrow the synner.

The deuises of one that is diligent bring plenteousnes: but he that is vnaduised commeth vnto pouerty.

Who so boasteth vp riches wyth the dyscreatfulnesse of his tongue, he is vayne & a foole, & lyke vnto them that seke theyr owne death.

The robberies of the vngodly shalbe theis owne destruccion: for they wyl not do thy thynge that is ryghe.

The wayes of the frowarde are straunge: but ✠ the woorkes of him that is cleane are ryghe.

Pro.25.b ✠ It is better to dwel in a corner vnder the house top pe, then with a braulyng woma in a wyde house.

The soule of the vngodly wisheth euell: & hath no pitye vpon his neighbour.

Pro.19.b ✠ When the scornefull is punyshed, the ignorant take the better hede: and when he seyeth the wise men prospere, he wil receaue the more vnderstandyng.

The righteous man wisely considereth the house of the wicked: and for theyr wyckednes God ouerthroweth the vngodly.

Prou.18.b ✠ Who so stoppeth his eares at the crye nge of the poore: he shal crie him selfe, and not be hearde.

A pleasy reward pacifieth displeasure, and a gift in the bosome stilleth furiousnes.

The iust delyteth in doing thy thing that is right: but ouer the workers of wickednesse hangeth destruccion.

The man that wandreth oute of the waye of wisdome, shal remayne in the congregacion of the deade.

Pro.23.c. He that hath pleasure in banketes, shalbe a poore man.

Who so delyteth in wine and delicates, shal not be ryche.

The vngodlye shalbe geuen for the righteous: and the wicked for the iust.

Eccl.25.f ✠ It is better to dwelle in a wyldernesse, then wyth a chydynge and an angrye woman.

In a wyse mannes house, there is greate treasure and oyle: but a foolyshe body spendeth vp all.

Who so foloweth ryghteousnes and mercy, findeth both life, ryghteousnesse, and honoure.

A wise man wynneth the city of the mighty: and as for the strength that they trust in, he bryngeth it downe.

Pro.21.b ✠ Who so kepeth hys mouthe, & hys tonge: the same kepeth hys soule fro troubles.

He that is proude and presumptuous, is called a scornefull man, which in wrathe dare worcke malycyously.

The voluptuousnes of the slouthfull is his owne deathe: For hys handes wyll not laboure.

He coueteth and desireth all the day longe, but the righteous is alway geuing, and kepeth nothynge backe.

The sacrifyce of the vngodlye is abhominacion: howe muche more when they offre the thing that is gotte with wickednesse?

¶ The ende of the Prouerbes of Salomon.

¶ The boke of the Preacher: otherwiſe called Eccleſiaſtes.

THeſe are the wordes A of the Preacher, the ſonne of Dauid, king of Ieruſalē.

* All is but moſt vayne vanitie (ſaith the preacher) & all is moſt vaine (I ſay) and but playne vanytye. For what els hath a mā of all the labour that he taketh vnder the ſunne? One generacō paſſeth away, an other cōmeth: but the erth abideth ſtyll. The ſunne aryſeth, the ſunne goeth downe, and retyreth to hys place, that he maye there ryſe vp agayne. The wynde goeth towarde the South, and turneth vnto the north, fetcheth his compaſſe, whirleth aboute, and goeth forth, and hys circuite returneth agayne to hym ſelfe. Eccl. 12. b

* All floudes runne into the ſea, and yet the ſea it ſelf not fylled: for loke vnto what place the waters runne, thence they come to flowe agayne. All theſe thynges are ſo harde to be knowē, that no mā can expreſſe them. * The eye is not ſatisfied with ſight: the eare is not fylled with hearinge. * The thynge that hathe bene, commeth to paſſe agayne: and the thing that hath bene done, ſhall be done agayne: There is no newe Iob. 14 b thyng vnder the sunne. Is there any thing wherof it maye be sayde: lo, this is newe? For it was longe agoe in the tymes that haue bene before vs. The thynge that is paste is out of remembraunce: Euen so the thynges that are for to come, shall no more be thoughte vpon amonge them that come after. I my selfe the Preacher was kynge of Israell at Jerusalem, and dyd applye my mynde to seke out and searche for the knowledge of all thynges that are done vnder heauen. Suche trauayle and labour hath God geuen vnto the children of men, to exercyse them selues therin. Thus haue I consydred all the thynges that come to passe vnder the sunne: & lo, they are all but vanitie & vexacion of mynde. The crobed cannot be made streight, nor the thing that is vnperfect, cannot be accõpted with thinges that are perfect. I cõmuned with myne owne hert, saying: lo, I am come to a great estate, & haue gotte more wisedom, then al they that haue bene before me in Jerusalē. Yea, my hert had greate experiẽce of wysedom & knowledge, for there vnto I applied my mynde, that I might know what were wisdome & vnderstandynge: what were errours and folyshnes: and I perceyued, that this also was but a vexacion of minde: for where muche wysedome is, there is also great trauail & disquietnesse: and the more knowledge a mā hath, the more is his care.

¶ The. ii. Chapter.

Then sayd I thus in my hert. Now go to, I wil take myne ease, & haue good dayes. But lo, that is vanitie also: in so much, that I sayd vnto the man geuen to laughter: thou art mad, & to mirth: what doest thou? So I thought in my heart, to gene my flesche vnto wine, & againe to applie my minde vnto wisdome, & to comprehende folyshnesse vntil the time that (amõg al the thinges which are vnder the Sun) I might se what were best for men to do, so longe as they liue vnder heauen. * I made 3. re. 3. 4. 5. 6. gorgious fayre workes. I builded me houses & plãted vineyardes. I made me orchardes and gardens of pleasure, and planted 4. re. 4. 6 trees in thē of al maner of frutes. * I made pooles of water, to water the grene & frutful trees withall. I boughte seruauntes & maydens: and had a greate housholde. As for catell and shepe, I had more substaūce of them, then all they that were before me in Jerusalem. I gathered siluer and golde together: euen a treasure of kynges & landes. I prouided me syngers, and women which could play on instrumẽtes, to make men myrthe and pastyme. I gat me psalteries and songes of musycke. And I was greater, and in more worshipe then all my predecessours in Jerusalem. For wysdome remayned with me: and loke whatsoeuer mine eyes desired, I let thē haue it: & wher in soeuer my herte delited or had any pleasure, I withheld it not from it. Thus my heart reioysed in all that I did: and this was my porciõ of al my trauail. But whē I consydred all the workes that my hādes had wroughte, and all the labour that I had taken therin: lo, al was but vanitye & vexacion of mynde, and nothynge of anye value vnder the Sunne. Then turned I me to consydre wysedome, errour and foolyshnes: (for what is amonge men, that might be cõpared to me, the kynge in such workes?) and I saw that wisedome excelleth foolyshnes, as farre as lyghte doeth darkenesse. For a wyse man hath hys eyes in his head, but the foole goeth in the darkenesse: I perceyued also that they bothe had one ende. Thē thought I in my minde: If it happen vnto the foole as it doeth vnto me, what nedeth me then to labour any more for wysedome? So I confessed with in my heart, that this also was but vanytye. For the wyse are euer as lytle in remembraunce as the foolyshe, for the dates shal come when all shalbe forgotten: yea, the wyse man dyeth as wel as the foole. Thus began I to be werye of my lyfe, in so much the that I could awaye with nothing that is doone vnder the Sunne, for all was but vanitye and vexacion of mynde: yea, I was werye of all my labours, which I had taken vnder the Sunne, because I should be fayne to leaue thē vnto an other man that commeth after me: And who knoweth whether he shalbe a wyse man or a foole? And yet shall he be LORD of all my labours, wherin I with such wisedome haue taken vnder the sunne. This is also a vayne thyng. So I turned me to reckaine my minde from all suche trauayle, as I take vnder the Sunne: for so much as a man should werye him selfe with wysedome, with vnderstandynge, and oportunitie, and yet be fayne to leaue his labour vnto another, that neuer swet for them. This is also a vayne thynge & great miserie. For what getteth a man of all the labour and trauail of hys minde, that he taketh vnder the sunne, but heuinesse, sorowe and disquietnesse all the dayes of his lyfe? In so much, that his hert cā not rest in the night: this is also a vayne thynge. * Is it not better then for a man Eccl. 5. b to eate and drinke, and his soule to be merry in his labour? Yea, I sawe that this also was a gyfte of God. For who wyll eate or go more lustely to his worke then I? And why? God geueth to the man that is good before him, wisedome, vnderstādynge

and gladnesse. But vnto the synner he geueth werinesse and superfluous care, that he maye gather, and heape together the thynge that afterwarde shalbe geuen vnto hym, whome it pleaseth God. This is nowe a bayne thynge: yea, a very disquietnesse and veracion of mynde.

¶ The. iii. Chapter.

A EVery thig hath a time: yea, al that is vnder the heauen hath his conuenyent season. There is a tyme to be borne, & a tyme to die. There is a time to plante, and a time to pluche vp the thinge that is planted. A time to slaye, & a tyme to make hole. A tyme to breake downe, and a tyme to buylde vp. A tyme to wepe, and a tyme to laugh. A tyme to mourne, and a tyme to daunce. A tyme to caste away stones, and a tyme to gather stones together. A tyme to embrace, and a tyme to refrayne from embracynge. A tyme to wynne, and a tyme to lese. A tyme to spare, and a tyme to spende.

B A tyme to cut in peces, and a tyme to sowe Eccl. xx. a 31. d. and xxxi. a. together. * A time to kepe sylence, & a time to speake: A tyme to loue, and a tyme to hate. A tyme of warre, and a time of peace. What hath a mā els (that doth any thing) but werinesse and labour? For as touchig the trauayle and carefulnesse, whiche God hath geuen vnto men, I se that he hathe geuen it them, to be exercised in it. All this hath he ordeyned maruelously goodlye, to euery thynge his due tyme. He hath planted ignoraunce also in the heartes of men, that they shoulde not cōprehende the groūde of his workes, which he doth from the beginnynge to the ende. So I perceiued, that in these thynges there is nothynge better for a man, then to be merye and to do well as longe as he lyueth. For all that a man eateth and drinketh: yea, whatsoeuer a mā enioyeth of all his labour, that same is a gyfte of God. I considred also that whatsoeuer God doeth, it contynueth for euer. And that nothynge can be put vnto it, nor taken from it, and that GOD dothe it to

C the intente, that men shoulde feare hym.
Eccle. i. d * The thynge that hathe bene is now: and the thynge that is for to come, hathe bene afore tyme, for God restoreth agayne the thynge that was paste. Moreouer, I sawe vnder the sunne vngodlynesse in the stede of iudgement, & iniquitie in stede of rygh-teousnesse. Then thought I in my mynde: God shall seperate the righteous from the vngodly, and then shall be the tyme & iudgemente of all counsayles and workes. I communed with myne owne herte also, concernynge the children of men: howe GOD hath chosen them, and yet letteth them appeare, as thoughe they were beastes: for it happeneth vnto men as it dothe vnto beastes: & as the one dieth, so dyeth the other: yea, they haue both one maner of breathe: so that (in this) a man hathe no preemynence aboue a beast, but al are subdued vnto vanitye. They go all vnto one place, for as they be all of dust, so shall they all turne D vnto dust againe. * Who knoweth the spy- Sap. 2. d rite of man that goeth vpwarde, and the breathe of the beast that goeth downe into the earth? Wherfore I perceyue that there is nothynge better for a man, then to be ioyfull in hys labour: for that is hys portion. But who wyll brynge hym to se the thynge that shall come after hym.

SO I turned me, and * considred all the A violente wronge that is donne vnder Abak. 1. B the sunne: & behold, the teares of suche Eccl. 5. b as were oppressed: & there was no man to cōfort thē, or that would deliuer and defende them frō the violence of their oppressiones. Wherfore, I iudged those that are deade, to be more happie then those that be aliue: yea, him that is yet vnborne to be better at ease then they both, because he seeth not the miserable workes that are done vnder the Sunne. Agayne, I sawe that all tra- B uayle and diligence of labour that euery man taketh in hande, was done of enuye agaynste his neighboure. This is also a vayne thynge, and a veracion of mynde. The foole folded his hādes together, and eateth vp his owne flesche. One handefull (sayeth he) is better wyth rest, then bothe the handes full with labour and trauayle of mynde. Moreouer, I turned me, and behold, yet another vanity vnder the Sunne. There is one man, no mo but hym selfe alone, hauing nether childe nor brother: yet C is there no ende of his carefull trauayle: his eyes can not be satisfyed with richesse, [yet doth he not remēbre him selfe, & say:] For whome do I take such trauayle? For whose pleasure do I thus consume awaye my lyfe? This is also a vaine and myserable thynge. Therfore, two are better then one, for they maye well enioye the profyte of their laboure. For yf one of them fal, his cōpanion helpeth him vp again: But woo is him that is aloone, for yf he fall, he hath not another to helpe him vp. Agayne, whē two slepe together, they are warme: but howe can a body be warme alone? One maye be ouercome, but two maye make resistaunce: A thre fold gable is not lightly broken: A poore childe beynge wise, is bet- D ter then an olde kynge that doteth, and can not beware in tyme to come. * Some one Gen. 47. b 1. Re. 16. c. 3. Re. 13. c commeth out of prison, & is made a kynge: and another whyche is borne in the kyng-

4.rr.25.a ceyned, that all men lyuynge vnder the Sunne, goe with the seconde chylde, that shall stande vp in the steade of the other.
As for the people that haue bene before hym, and that come after hym, they are innumerable: And they that come after hym shall not reioyse of him. This is also a vayne thynge and a vexacion of mynde.
When thou cõmest into the house of God kepe thy foote, and drawe nye, that God 1.Re.15.c whiche is at hande may heare: & that thou gyue not the offeryngꝛes of fooles: for they knowe nought, but to do euel.

¶ The.v. Chapter.

A BE not hasty with thy mouth, & let not thine hert speake any thinge rashlye before God. For God is in heaue, and thou vpõ earthe, therfore let thy wordes be fewe. For where much carefulnesse is, ther are many dreames: and where manye wor-Deu.23.c des are, there men maye heare fooles. * If Baru.6.c thou make a vowe vnto God, be not slacke to perfourme it. As for foolyshe vowes he hath no pleasure in them: If thou promyse any thing, pay it: for better it is that thou make no vowe, then that thou shouldest promyse, & not paye. Suffre not thy mouth to cause thy flesshe for to synne, neither saye thou before the aungel, that it is thy ignorannce. For then God wyll be angrye at thy voyce, and destroye all the worckes of thyne handes. And why? where as are many dreames, and manye wordes, there are B also dyuers vanyties: but loke that thou Eccl.4.a feare God. * If thou seeste the poore to Abac.1.a. be oppressed, and wrongfully dealte with-all, so that equyte & the ryghte of the lawe is wrested in the lande, marueyle not thou at suche a thynge, for one greate man re-peth touche with an other, and the mighty men are in auctoryte ouer the poore. The encrease of the earth vpholdeth all thyng, yea, the kynge hym selfe is maynteyned by husbandrye. He that loueth money wyl neuer be satisfyed wyth money: and who so delyteth in richesse, shall haue no profyte therof. This is also a vaine thinge. Where as muche richesse is, there are manye also that spende them awaye. And what pleasure more hathe he that possesseth them, C saue that he maye loke vpon thẽ with hys eyes? A labouringe man sleepeth swetlye, whether it be lytle or muche that he eateth: but the aboundaunce of the ryche, wyll not suffre hym to slepe. yet is there a sore plage, whiche I haue sene vnder the sunne (namely) ryches kepte to the hurte of hym that hathe them in possession. For ofte tymes they perysshe wyth hys greate mysserye and trouble: and yf he haue a chylde, it getteth nothynge. * Lyke as he Job.1.D. came naked oute of hys mothers wombe, i.Ti.vi.b so goeth he thither agayne, and carryed no-thynge away with hym of all his laboure.
This is a mysserable plage, that he shall D go awaye euen as he came. What helpeth it hym then, that he hathe laboured in the winde? All the dayes of hys lyfe, also he dyd eate in the darcke, with great carefulnesse, sickenesse, & sorowe. * Therfore me thynke Eccle.ii.d it a better and a fayrer thynge, a man to eate and dryncke and to be refreshed of all hys laboure, that he taketh vnder the Sunne all the dayes of hys lyfe, whyche God geueth hym, for this is hys portion.
For vnto whõsoeuer God gyueth richesse, goodes and power, he geueth it him to enioye it, to take it for his portion, and to be refreshed of his labour: this is the gyfte of God. For he thinketh not muche howe longe he shal lyue, for so muche as God fil leth his heart with gladnesse.

¶ The.vi. Chapter.

THere is yet a plage vnder the sunne, A and it is a general thynge amõg mẽ: when god geueth a mã riches, goodes and honoure, so that he wanteth not hynge of all that hys harte can desyre: and yet God geueth hym not leaue to enioye the same, but another man spendeth them.
This is a vayne thynge, and a mysserable B plage. If a man beget an hundred childre, and lyue manye yeres, so that hys dayes are manye in numbre, and yet can not enioye his good, neyther be buryed: as for hym I saye: that an vntymely birth is better then he. For he cõmeth to noughte, and spendeth his tyme in darcknesse, and hys name is forgotten. Moreouer, he seeth not the sunne, and knoweth not of it: and yet hathe he more reste then the other. Yea, thoughe he lyued two thousande yeares, yet hathe he no good lyfe. Come not all to C one place? All the laboure that a man taketh, is for him selfe, and yet hys desyre is neuer fylled after hys mynde. For what hath the wyse more then the foole? What helpeth it the poore, that he knoweth to walke with fooles before the lyuynge?
The cleare syghte of the eyes is better, then that the soule shoulde walke after desires of the lust. Howbeit, this is also a vayne thynge, and a disquietnesse of mynde. The thynge that hath bene is named al readie, and knowen that it is euen man him selfe, neither maye he go to lawe wyth him that lyke, whiche is but a shadowe: Or who wil tell a man what shal happen after him vnder the sunne.

¶ The.vii. Chapter.

A *Good name is more worthe, then Pro.22.a *pretyous ointment, and the day of Cāt.1.a death is better thē the day of birth.
It is better to go into an house of mourning, then into a banketting house. For there is the ende of all meane: and he that is lyuynge, taketh it to hert: grauyture is better then to laughe: for when the countenaunce is heuye, the hert is reformed. The hearte of the wyse is in the mournyng house, but Pro.17.a the hearte of the foolyche is in the house of mirth. * It is better to geue eare to the chastenyng of a wyse man, then to heare the B songe of fooles. For the laughynge of fooles is lyke the crackynge of thornes vnder a pot. And that is but a vayne thyng. The wyse man hateth wronge dealyng: and abhorreth the herte that coueteth rewardes. Better it is to consydre the ende of a thyng, then the begynnynge. The pacyent of spirite is better then the hye mynded. Be not hastelye angrye in thy minde, for wrath resteth in the bosome of fooles. Saye not thou: what is the cause, that the dayes of the olde tyme were better then they that be nowe? for that were no wyse question.

Wysedom with inheritaunce is good: yet better is it wyth theym that withoute care maye beholde the sunne. For wysedome defendeth as well as money, and the excellent knowledge and wisedome, geueth life vnto him that hath it in possession. Consydre the worke of God, howe that no mā can make the thinge streight whiche he maketh crooked. Vse well the tyme of prosperite, and remembre the tyme of misfortune: for God maketh the one by the other, so that a man
C can fynde nothynge els. All thynges haue I consydred in the tyme of my vanytie: that the iust mā perisheth for hys eyghteousnes Rom.12.c sake, and the vngodly liueth in his wickednesse. Therfore * be thou neyther to eyghteous, nor ouer wyse, that thou perysh not: be neyther to vnryghteous also, nor to foolyche, lest thou dye before thy tyme. It is good for the to take holde of thys, & not to let that go oute of thy hande. For he that feareth God, commeth forth wyth them al.
Wisdō geueth more courage vnto the wyse,

Job.i.d worde that is spoken, lest thou heare thy seruaunte curse thee: for thyne owne herte knoweth that thou thy selfe also hast ofte tymes spoken euell by other men. All these thynges haue I proued in wysedome: for I thought to be wise, * but the went farther fro me thē she was before: yea, and so depe, that I myght not reach vnto her. I applied my mynde also vnto knowledge, & to seke and searche oute science, wysedom and vnderstandynge: to knowe the foolyshnes of the vngodly, & the errour of dotynge fooles. And I found, that * a womā is bitterer Pro.7.d then death, for she hathe caste abroade her herte as a net, that men fyshe with, and her handes are cheynes. Who so pleaseth God shall escape frō her: but the synner wyl be taken with her. Beholde (sayth the Preacher) this haue I diligētly searched out and proued. One thynge must be considred with an other, that a man maye come by knowledge: which as yet I seke, and finde it not. Amonge a thousande men I haue founde one, but not one woman among al. Lo, this Gene.i.d onelye haue I founde, that * GOD made man iuste and eyghte, but they sought many inuencyons.

¶ The.viii. Chapter.

A Who is wise? Who hathe knowledge to make an answere? A mans wisdō *maketh his face to shyne, but vn-Pro.17.d shamefastnesse putteth it oute of fauoure.
Job.6.d I must kepe the kynges commaundement, & the othe that I haue made vnto God. Be not hastye to go out of his syghte. & se thou continue in no euil thynge, for whatsoeuer it pleaseth him, that doeth he. Like as whē a king geueth a charge, his cōmaūdement is myghty: Euē so * who may say vnto him Job.9.b what doest thou? * Whoso keepeth the com-Le.18.a maūdment: shall fele no harme: but a wise mans hert discerneth the tyme and iudgemēt. For euery thyng wil haue opportunite and iudgemēt, & this is the thing that maketh men full of carefulnesse & sorowe. And B why? a manne knoweth not what is for to come: for who wil tel him? Nether is there any mā that hath power ouer the spirite, to kepe stil the spirite, nor to haue any power in the time of death: is it not he also that cā make an ende of the battayle, nether maye vngodlynes delyuer them that medle withal. All these thynges haue I consydred & applyed my mynde vnto euery worcke that is vnder the sunne: howe one man hath lordshipe vpō another to his owne harme. For Psa.37.c * I haue sene often the vngodlye brought to theyr graues: and yet they haue retorned into the citie againe, and came frō the place of holy men, which in the citie were growē out of memory, as were those also that lyued well. This is also a vayne thyng. Be-
C cause nowe that euell workes are not hastly punished, the hearte of man geueth him selfe ouer vnto wyckednes. But though an euell persone offende an hundred tymes, &

God dyffer genynge him longe lyfe: yet am I sure, that it shal go wel with them that feare God, because they haue hym before their eyes. Agayne, as for the vngodlye, it shall not be well with him, neither shal he prolonge his daies: but euen as a shadow, so shall he be that feareth not God. Yet is there a vanyte vpon earthe. There be iust men, vnto whome it happened, as though they had the workes of the vngodlye. Agayne, there be vngodly, with whō it goeth as thoughe they had the workes of the righteous. This haue I called also a vayne thynge. Therfore I commende gladnesse, because a man hath no better thyng vnder the Sunne, then to eate and drynke, and to be mery: for that shall he haue of his laboure al the daies of his lyfe, whyche God geueth hym vnder the sunne. And so I applyed my mynde to learne wisdome, and to knowe the trauayle that is in the worlde (& that of suche a fashion, that I suffred not myne eyes to slepe, neither daye nor night) I vnderstode of all the workes of GOD, but it is not possible for a man, to attayne vnto the workes that are done vnder the Sunne: and thoughe he bestow his laboure to seke them out, yet can he not reache vnto them: yea, though a wyse mā would vndertake to knowe them, yet shall he not fynde them.

FOr all these thinges, purposed I in my mynde to seke oute. The righteous & wise: yea, & their seruauntes also, are in the hande of god, & there is no man that knoweth ether loue or hate, but al thinges are before them. It happeneth vnto one as vnto another: it goeth with the righteous as with the vngodlye * with the good and cleane, as with the vncleane: and with hym that offereth, as with him that offereth not: lyke as it goeth with the vertuous, so goeth it also with the synner. As it happeneth vnto the periured, so happeneth it also vnto hym, that is afrayed to be forswone. Amonge all thynges that come to passe vnder the Sunne, this is a mysterye, that it happeneth vnto al lyke. This is the cause also that the hertes of men are full of wickednesse, and mad folishnesses in their hertes, as longe as they lyue, vntil they dye. And why? As lōge as a man liueth, he hath an hope: for a quicke dogge (saye they) is better then a deade lion: for they that be liuynge, knowe that they shall dye: but they that be dead: know nothynge, nether deserue they anye more. For their memorial is forgotten, so that they be nether loued, hated, nor enuied: nether haue they any more part in the worlde, in all that is done vnder the Sunne. Go thou thy way thē, eat thy bread with ioye, and drynke thy wyne with a glad harte, for thy workes please God. Let thy garmentes be alway white, and * let thy heade lacke none oyntmente. ✠ Vse thy selfe to lyue ioyfully wyth thy wyfe whome thou louest, all the dayes of thy lyfe, whiche is but vayne, that God geueth the vnder the Sunne, al the daies of thy vanite: for that is thy portion in this life, & al thy laboure and trauayle that thou takest vnder the sunne. ✠ Whatsoeuer thou takest in hande to do, that do with all thy power, for in the graue that thou goest vnto, there is nether worke, councel, knowledge nor wysdome. So I turned me vnto other thinges vnder the Sunne, and I saw, that in runnynge, it helpeth not to be swyfte: in battayle, it helpeth not to be stronge: to fedinge, it helpeth not to be wyse, to ryches, it helpeth not to be suttell: to be had in fauoure, it helpeth not to be connynge: but that all lyeth in tyme and fortune. * For a man knoweth not his tyme, but lyke as the fyshes are taken with the angle, and as the birdes are caught with the snare: Euen so are men taken in the perylous tyme, when it commeth sodenly vpon them. This wisdom haue I sene also vnder the Sunne, and me thought it a great thynge. There was a litle citte, & a fewe mē within it: so there came a great king an besieged it, and made greate bulwarkes against it. And in the cyte there was founde a poore man, (but he was wyse) whiche with hys wysedome delyuered the cyte: yet was there no body, that had anye respecte vnto suche a symple man. Then sayde I: wysedome is better then strengthe. Neuertheles, a symple mans wisdom is despised, and his workes are not heard. A wyse mans counsel is not harde. A wyse mans counsel that is folowed in silēce, is farre aboue the tryinge of a captayne amonge fooles. * For wysedome is better then harnesse: but one vnthryfte alone destroyeth muche good.

A Deade flye doth corrupt swet oyntmēt & maketh it to stinche. Euen so oft times he that is made offor wisdome and honour, is abhorred because of a lytle folyshnes. A wyse mans hearte is vpon the ryghte hande, but a fooles heart vpon the lefte. A foole wyl shewe hym selfe when he goeth by the waye, yet thynketh he that euery mā doth as folyshly as hym selfe. If a principal spirite be geuen the to beare rule, * be not negligent then in thine office: for he that can take cure of him selfe, auoydeth great offences. Another plage is there there, whiche I haue sene vnder the sunne: namely, the ygnorannce that is commenly amonge princes: in that a foole sitteth in great dygnitie, and the ryche are set downe benethe: I haue sene seruauntes ryde vpon horses, and princes goynge vpon their fete as it were seruauntes. * But he that dyg-

Who so remoueth stones, shall haue trauayle wyrhall: and he that heweth wood, shalbe hurt therwith. When an yron is blont, and the point not sharpened, it must be wher agayne, and that with myght: Euen so doeth wisdom folow diligence. A babler of hys tonge is no better, C thē a serpēt that stingeth without hyllyng. The wordes oute of a wyse mans mouthe, are gracyous, but the lippes of a foole wyll destroye hym selfe. The begynnyng of hys talkynge is fooly chnesse: and the last worde of hys mouth is starcke madnesse. A foole is full of wordes, & a man cannot tell what shall come to passe: who will then warne hym of it that shall folowe after him? The laboure of the folysshe is greuous vnto thē, while they knowe not howe to go into the cyte. Wo be vnto the (O thou land) whose D kyng is but a child, & whose princes are early at their banckettes. But well is thee (O thou lande) whose kinge is come of nobles, and whose princes eate in due season, for necessite, & not for lust. Ps. 104 b maketh men to laughe, * and wyne maketh them merry: but vnto money are al thynges obedyent. Wisshe the kynge no euell in thy thought, and speake no hurt of the ryche in thy preuye chambre: for a birde of the ayre shal betray thy voyce, and with her fethers shall she bewraye thy wordes.

A CAy thy breade vpon wete faces, and so shalt thou finde thē after many dayes. Geue part seuen dayes, and also vpon the eyght, for thou knowest not what miserye shal come vpon the earth. Whē the cloudes are full, they powre out raine vpon the earth. And when the tre falleth (whether it be toward the south or north) in what place
B soeuer it fal, there it lieth. He that regardeth the winde, shal not sow, & he that bathe respect vnto the cloudes, shal not reape. Now like as thou knowest not the waye of the breath howe it entreth into the litle body, beynge yet in the mothers wombe: Euē so thou knowest not the workes of God, whiche is the workmaster of al. Cease not thou therfore with thy handes to sowe thy sede, whether it be in the morning or in the euenynge: for thou knowest not whether thys or that shal prosper, and if they both take, it is the better. The light is swete, & a pleasaunt thynge is it for the eyes to lake vpon
C the sunne. If a man lyue many yeares, and be glad in them all, let hym remembre the dayes of darcknesse, whiche shalbe manye: and that foloweth, all thynges shal be but banitie. Be glad then (O thou young man) in thy youth, and let thyne herte be merye in thy younge dayes, folowe the wayes of thyne owne hert, and the lust of thyne eies, D but be thou sure, that God shall bryng the into iudgement for all these thynges.

PVt away displeasure out of thine hert, and remoue euell from thy bodye: for A childehode and youth is but vanitye. Remēbre thy maker the sooner in thy youth, or euer the dayes of aduersitie come, & or the yeares drawe nye, whē thou shalte saye: I haue not pleasure in thē: before the sunne, the light, the moone & starres be darkened, and or the cloudes turne agayne after the raine, whē the keepers of the house shal trēble, & when the stronge mē shal bowe them selues, when the millers stande still, because they be so fewe, and when the syghte of the B windowes shal waxe dymme, when the dores in the stretes shalbe shut, and whē the voyce of the myller shall be layed downe: when men shall ryse vp at the voyce of the byrde, and when all the doughters of musike shalbe brought lowe: when men shall feare in hye places, and be afrayed in the stretes: when the almonde tree shal florisshe and be laden with the grashopper, & when all lust shall passe (because man goeth to his lōge home, and the mourners go about C the stretes.) Or euer the syluer lace be take awaye, and or the golden well be broken. Or the pot be broken at the well, and the whele vpon the cysterne: Then shall the dust be turned againe vnto earth frō whēce it came, and the spirite shall returne vnto god, which gaue it. * Al is but banite (saith Eccle. 1. I the Preacher) al is but playne banite. The D Preacher was yet more wyse, and taught the people knowledge: he gaue good hede, soughte oute the grounde, and set forth many parables. His diligence was to fynd out acceptable wordes, right scripture, and the wordes of trueth. For * the wordes of the Heb. 4. E wyse are lyke prickes and nayles that goe thorowe, wherewith the stuffe gathered is holden vp: for they are geuen of one shepherde onelye. Therfore beware (my sonne) of that doctrine that is besyde this: for to make many bokes, it is an endeles worcke: and to loude cryinge werieth the bodye.

Let vs heare the conclusion of all thynges: feare God, and kepe his commaundementes: For that toucheth all men. For God shall iudge all workes & secrete thynges, whether they be good or euel.

wekednes, I shall laye my hande vpon the, and burne out thy drosse frō the fynest thy iudges againe as they were sometyme and thy Senatours as they were from the shalbe redemed with equite, and they that turne agayne vnto her in rychteousnesse.

For the transgressours and vngodlye, and suche as are become vnfaythfull vnto the Lord, must altogether be vtterly destroyed.
For they shall be ashamed of the goddes that you longed for. And ye shall be put to

¶ The.ii. Chapter.

A THis is the word that was opened vn to Esay the sonne of Amos, vpon Iu-da & Jerusalem. It wilbe also in the last daies that the hil where the house of the lord is builded, shal be the chef among hyl les, & exalted aboue al lytle hilles. And all nations shal preace vnto him, & the multitude of people shal go, speakynge thus one to another: vp, let vs go to the hyll of the lord, & to the house of the god of Jacob: that he may shewe vs his way, & that we may walke in his pathes. For the lawe shall come out of Sion, and the worde of the Lorde from Jerusalem, and shal geue sentence among the heathē, and shal reforme the multitude of people: They shall breake their swearedes also into mattockes, & their speares to make sithes. And one people shal not lift vp a weapen against another, nether shal they learne to fight from thēce forth. Come ye (O house of Jacob) let vs walcke in the lyght of the Lord. But thou hast forsaken thy people, the house of Jacob, because they go farre beyonde the east contreyes in Sorceries (whome they haue as the Philystians had) and in straunge children they thynche them selues to haue ynoughe. Their lande is full of syluer and golde, nether is there anye ende of theyr treasure: Their lande is also full of horses, & no ende is there of theyr chaeets. Theyr lande is also ful of vayne goddes, and before the worke of their owne handes haue they bowed thē selues: yea, euen before the thing that their owne fingers haue made.
There kneleth the man, there falleth the man downe before them, but thou (O Lord) wilt not leaue them vnpunished. And ther fore get the into some rocke, and hyde the in the grounde for feare of the Lorde, and for the glorie of his maiestie: Whyche casteth downe the hyghe lookes of presumptuous personnes, and bryngeth lowe the pryde of man, and the Lorde onely shal be exalted in that daye. For the daye of the Lorde of hostes shal go ouer al pryde and presumpcion, vpon al them that exalte thē selues, and shall bryngе them all downe: vpon all the heighe and stoute Cedre trees of Libanus, and vpon all the okes of Ba-san, vpon al high hilles, and vpō all stoute mountaynes, vpon all costely towres, and vpon all stronge walles, vpon all shyppes of Tharsis, and vpon euery thyng that is glorious and pleasaunt to loke vpon. And it shall bryngе downe the pryde of man, & lay mans presumptuousnesse full low, and the Lorde shall onely haue the victorye in that daye. But the Idols shall vtterlye be roted oute. Then shall creepe into holes of stone, and into caues of the earth, for feare of the Lorde, and for the glorye of his ma-iestye: what tyme as he shall aryse vp to condempne the earth. Then shal man cast awaye hys Goddes of syluer, and hys goddes of golde (whyche he neuertheles had made to honoure them) vnto Molles and Battes: And they shal creepe into the caues and rockes, and into the clyftes of harde stones, for feare of GOD, and for the glorie of his maiestie, whan he ryseth to condempne the earth. Feare not ye then anye man, whose breth is in hys nostrels.
For what is he of reputacion.

¶ The.iii. Chapter.

FOr lo, the lord god of Hostes doth take away frō Jerusalē and Juda, al possessions & power, al meate & drinke, the captayne and the souldior, the iudge and prophete, the wyse and the aged man, the prince of fyftie yeare olde, and the honorable: the Senatours, and men of vnderstandynge: the master of crafters and oratours. And I shall geue them children to be their princes, and babes shall haue the rule of you. The people also shalbe pylled and polled, and one shal euer de doynge violence and wronge to another. The boye shall presume against the elder, and the vyle personne agaynste the honorable.
Yea, one shall take a frende of hys owne kynred by the bosome, and saye: thou hast clothynge, thou shalte be oure heade, for thou mayest kepe vs from thys fall and parel. Then shall he sweare and saye: I cannot helpe you. Moreouer, there is nether meate nor clothynge in my house, make me no ruler of the people. For Je rusalem:

rusalem is ouerthrowen, and Juda muste fall to the grounde, bycause that bothe theire wordes and counceis are agaynst the Lorde, to prouoke the presence of hys maiestie vnto angre. The chaūgyng of theyr countenaunce bewrayeth them: yea, they declare theyr owne synnes them selues, as the Sodomites, and hyde them not. Woo be vnto theyr soules, for they haue rewarded euell vnto them selues. Byd the ryghteous doe well, for they shall enioye the fruytes of theyr studies. But woe be to the vngodly and vnryghteous, for they shalbe rewarded after theyr woorckes. Chyldren are extorcioners of my people, and women haue rule of them. O my people, these that call thee blessed, deceaue thee, and dersaue the waye of thy fote steppes. The Lorde is rysen vp, to commen of the matter, and standeth vp (I saye) to geue iudgement of the people. The LORDE shal come forth to reason with the Senatours, and Prynces of hys people. It is ye that haue burnte vp my vyneyarde, the extorcyon done to the poore is in youre houses. Wherfore doe you oppresse my people, and marre the faces of the poore? Sayeth the Lorde GOD of hoostes? Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde: Seynge the doughters of Sion are become so proude, and come in wyth stretched oute neckes, and wyth wanne wanton eyes: seynge they come in teppynge so nicely with their fete: Therefore shall the Lorde shaue the heades of the doughters of Sion, and shall discouer their shame. In that daye shall the Lord take awaye the gorgiousnes of their apparel, and spāges, cheynes, partelettes, and collarres, bracelettes, and hooues, and goodly floured, wyde, and brodered rayment, brooches, and headebaydes, rynges, and garlandes, holy daye clothes and mayles, kercheifes, and pynnes, glasses and cypresses, boncttes and taches. And in steade of good smel, there shalbe stynche amonge them. And for theyr gyrdles, there shal be lowse bandes. And for well set heere there shalbe baldenes. In steade of a stomacher, a sackeclothe, and for theyr bewty wytherneile, and Sunne burnynge. Youre housbandes and myghtye men shall perysshe wyth the sweorde in batayle. At that tyme shall theyr gates mourne and complayne, and they shall sytte as desolate folke vpon the earthe.

wyues. ¶ The. iiij. Chapter.

THen shall seuen wynes take holde of one man, and saye: We wyl fare alone meate and clothynge together in comen, onelye that we maye be called thy wynes and that thys shamefull reproche may be taken fro vs. After that time shal the braūch of the lord be beautiful & myghty, & the fruite of the earth shall be fayre and pleasaunte, for those Israelytes that shall escape therof. Then shal the remnaūte in Sion, & the remnaūt at Jerusalē be called holy: Namelye al suche as are written amonge the lyuynge at Jerusalem: What tyme as the Lorde shall washe awaye the fylthynes of the doughters of Syon, and pourge the bloude oute frome Jerusalem, with the wynde of hys iudgement, & with fire. Moreouer, vpon all the dwellynges of the hyll of Sion, and vpon theyr whole congregation, shall the Lorde prouyde a cloude and smoke by daye, and the shynynge of a flamynge fyre by nyghte: For all theyr gloyre shalbe preserued. And Jerusalē shalbe a tabernacle for a shadowe, because of hete in the daye tyme, a place and refuge, where a man maye kepe hym from wether and rayne.

NOw wyll I syng, my beloued frende a songe of my frendes, bycause of hys vineyarde. My beloued frende hathe a vineyarde in a verye fruytfull plenteous grounde. Thys he hedged, this he walled rounde aboute, and planted it wyth goodlye Grapes. In the myddest of it he buylded a Tower, and made a wyne pressle therin. And afterwarde when he looked that it shoulde bringe hym grapes, it broughte forthe thornes. Nowe therefore (O ye Citizens of Jerusalem, and whole Juda:) Judge I praye you, betwixte me, and my vineyarde. What mooze coulde haue bene done for it, that I haue not done? Wherfore then hathe it geuen thornes, where I looked to haue had grapes of it? Well, nowe shall I tell you howe I wyll doe wyth my vyneyarde: I wyll take the hedge frome it, that it maye perysshe, and breake downe the walle, that it maye be troden vnder foote.

I wyll laye it waste that it shall neither be digged nor cutte, but beare thornes & briers. I wil also forbid the cloudes that they shal not rayne vpō it. As for the vineyard of the Lorde of hoostes, it is the house of Israel, and whole Juda, his fayre plātyng. Of these he looked for equite, but see there is wronge: For ryghteousnes, lo, it is but miserye. Woe vnto them that ioyne one house to another, and bringe one lande so nygh vnto another, that the poore can get no mooze grounde, and that ye maye dwell vpon the earthe alone. These thynges are in the eares of the Lorde of hoostes: shall not many greater and moze gorgious houses be so waste, that no man shall dwell ioyne hous to house.

in them. And ten akers of vines shall geue but a quarte, and .xxx. buchels of sede shal geue but an Ephe. Wo be vnto them, that ryse vp earlye to folowe dronckenes, and to them that continue so vntyl night, and til they be set on fire with wine. * In thole companies are harpes and lutes, tabrettes and pipes, and wyne. But they regard nōt the worcke of the Lorde, and consydre not the operacion of his hādes. * Therfore cōmeth my folke also into captiuitie, because they haue no vnderstandynge. Their glory is samp shed with hunger, & their pryde is marred for thyrst. Therfore gapeth hel, and openeth her mouth maruelous wyde: that their pryde, boastynge and wealth, with suche as reioyse therin, may wtende into it. * Thus gathe man a kall, and is brought lowe, & the high loke of the proude shalbe layed downe. But the Lorde of hoostes is exalted in iudgemente, and GOD that is holye, is pfayled in ryghteousnes: Then shal the shepe eate in ordre, and the riche mens landes that were layed waste, shall straungers deuoure. Woe be vnto them, that drawe wyckednesse vnto them with cordes of vanyte & synne, as it were wyth a carte roope, Whyche vse to speake on thys maner: let hym make haste nowe, and go forth with his worke, that we may see it. Lette the councell of the holye one of Israell come, and draw nye, that we may know it. * Wo be vnto them that cal euell good, and good euyl, whych make darkenesse light, and lighte darknes, that make sowre swete, and swete sowre.

* Woe be vnto thē that are wyse in theyr owne sight, and thincke the selues to haue vnderstandynge. Woe be vnto them, that are stronge to supp out wyne, and expertē men to set vp dronckenesse. * These geue sentence with the vngodlye for rewardes, but cōdempne the iuste cause of the ryghteous. Therfore, like as fire licketh vp the strawe, and as the flame consumeth the stubble: euē so their rote shalbe as corruption: and theyr blossome shal vanish away lyke dust: for they haue cast away the law of the Lorde of Hoostes, and blaspheined the woorde of the holye maker of Israell. * Therfore is the wrath of the lorde vnder lend also agaynst his people, and he hath stretched his hande at them: yea, he hath smitten, so that the hilles did tremble. And theyr harcases did lye in the opē stretes lyke mire. * And in all thys, the wrathe of God hath not ceassed, but hys hande is stretched out styll. * And he shall geue a token vnto a straunge people: And call vnto them in a farre countre: and beholde, they shal come hastely wythspede. There shall not be one layne nor feble amonge them, no not a slombrynge nor slepery persōne. There shall not one of them put of the girdle from his loynes, nor lowse the lachet of hys shoe. His arowes are sharpe, and al his bowes bente. Hys hoofe hoorse are lyke flynte, and his cart wheles lyke a stormy wynde. Hys crye as it were of a Lyon, and he roareth lyke Lyons whelpes. They shal roare and hanethe vp the praye, and no man shall recouer it, or get it from them. In that daye they shalbe so fearce vpō them, as the sea. And if we loke vnto the lād: behold, it shal be al darkenes & sorow. If we loke toward heauen: beholde, it shalbe darke.

In the same yeare * that kynge Oziah died, I saw the lorde sitting vpō an high and glorious * seate, and his trayne fylled the temple. And about hym stode the Seraphyns, whereof euerye one had syxe wynges. Wyth twayne eche couered hys face, wyth twayne hys fete, and wyth twayne dyd he flye. They cryed also eche one to another, on this maner: * holy, holy, holye, is the Lorde of hoostes. The whole worlde is full of hys glorye: yea, the gates and dozethekes moued at his cryinge, and the house was full of smoke. Then sayde I: O woe is me. For I am lost: in asmuche as I am a man of vncleane lyppis, and dwelle amonge people that haue vncleane lyppes also: For myne eyes haue sene the kynge and Lorde of Hoostes. Then flewe one of the Seraphins vnto me, hauing an hote cole in his hand, which he had taken from the aulter with the tonges, and touched my mouth, and sayde: lo, thys hathe touched thy lyppes, and thyne vnrighteousnes is taken awaye, and thy sinne forgeuen. Also, I hearde the voyce of the Lorde, sayinge on thys maner: Whome shall I sende, and who wyll be oure messaunger? Then I sayde: here am I, sende me. And he sayde: Goe, and tell thys people: * ye shall heare in dede, but ye shall not vnderstande: ye shall playnely see, and not perceaue. Harden the hearte of thys people, stoppe their eares, and shut theyr eyes, that they se not with theyr eyes, hear not with their eares, and vnderstande not with their heartes, and conuerte and be healed. Then sayde I: Lord, howe longe? he answered: vntyll the cityes be vtterlye wasted without inhabitoures, & the houses without men, vtyll the lande be also desolate, and lye vnbuylded. For the Lorde shall take the men farre awaye, so that the lande shal lye waste a longe season, yet in it shall succeade .x. kynges, and the lande shall retourne and be layed waste. And as the the Terebinte tree and oke, in wynter cast their leaues, and yet haue their sappe in them, so shal the holy * seed continue in their substaunce.

Agam. A

IT happened in the time of Ahaz, the sone of Joatham, which was the sonne of Ozias, king of Juda: that * Rasin the kyng of Syria, and Pechah the sonne of Romeliah, king of Israel: went vp towarde Jerusalem to besege it: but Rasin was not able to winne it. Now when the house of Dauid (that is Ahaz) herde wosde therof, that Syria & Ephraim were confederate together: his hert quaked: (yea, and the herte also of his people) lyke as when a tree in the felde is moued with the wynde. Then sayde God vnto Esaye: go mete Ahaz, (thou and thy sonne Sear Jasub) at the heade of the ouer pole, in the fote pathe by the fullers grounde, and saye vnto hym: take hede to thy selfe, and be styll, but feare not, neyther be fainte herted, for these two tayles: that is: for these two smoking fire brandes, the wrathe and furyousnesse of Rasin the Syrian and Romelies sonne: because that the kynge of Syria Ephraim, and Romelies sonne haue wyckedlye conspired agaynste thee, sayenge: We wyll go vp agaynste Juda, vexe them, and bringe them vnder vs, and set a kynge there, euen the sonne of Tabeel. For thus sayeth the Lorde God therto: It shal not so goe forth, neither come to passe: for the heade of Syria is Damascus, but the heade of Damascus is Rasin. And after .lxv. yeare, shal Ephraim be no more a people. And the heed citie of Ephraim is Samaria, but the head of Samaria is Romelies sonne. * If ye beleue not: it commeth of this: that ye are vnfaythfull to God. Moreouer, God spake once agayne vnto Ahaz, sayenge: require a token of the Lorde thy GOD, whether it be towarde the deapth beneth, or towarde the heigth aboue. Then sayd Ahaz: I will requyre none, neyther will I tempte the Lorde. The Lorde answered: Then heare to, ye of the house of Dauid: Is it not ynoughe for you that ye be greuous vnto men, but ye muste greue my God also. And therfore the Lorde shall geue you a token: * Behold, a virgin shal conceaue and beare a sonne, and (thou hys mother) shalte call his name Emanuel. Butter and hony shal he eate, that he maye knowe to refuse the euell, and chose the good. For or euer the chylde come to knowledge, to eschue the euell and chose the good. The lande (that thou so abhorrest) shalbe desolate of bothe her kynges. The Lorde also shall sende a tyme vpon the, vpon thy people, and vpon thy fathers house (such as neuer came lence the tyme that * Ephraim departed from Juda) thorowe the kynge of the Assirians. * For at the same tyme shall the Lorde whistle for the flies that are about the water of Egypte, and for the Bees in the Assirians lande. These shall come, and shal light al in the desolate valeyes, in the holes of stones, vpon all thornye and bushye places. At the same tyme shall the Lorde shaue the heere of the heade and the fete, and the beerde cleane of, wyth the rasoure that he shall hier beyonde the water: namely, with the kynge of the Assirians. At the same time shal a man liue with a kow, and two sheepe. Then, because of the aboundaunce of mylche, he shall make butter and eate it. So that euery one whyche remayneth in the lande, shall eate butter and honye. At the same tyme all vineyardes (thoughe there be a thousande vynes in one, and were solde for a thousande syluerlynges) shalbe turned to breers and thornes. Lyke as they shal come into the lande with arowes and bowes, so shall al the lande become breers and thornes. And as for al hilles that are hewe downe, there shal not come vpon the any feare of breers & thornes. But the catel shall be dryuen thyther, and the sheepe shal fede there.

MOreouer, the Lord sayde vnto me: * Take the a great leafe, & wryte in it, as men do with a penne, make hastye spede to robbe, & hast to the spoyle. And I called vnto me faythfull witnesses to recorde. Uriah the preest, & Zacharias the sonne of Barachiah. After that went I vnto the Prophetesse, that had conceaued & borne a sonne. Ths said the lorde to me: geue him this name: Hedie robber: an hastye spoyler. For why, or euer the chylde shall haue knowledge to crie father, & mother: shal the riches of * Damascus and the substaunce of Samaria be taken awaye by the spoyler, before the king of the Assirians. * The lord spake also vnto me, sayenge: for so much as this people refuseth the stil running water of Silo, & put their delyte in Rasin & Romelies sonne: Behold, the lord shal bring my mighty & greate floudes of water vpo them: namely, the * kynge of the Assirians with al his power: Which shall clyme vp vpon all his floudes, and renne ouer al their banckes. And shal breake in vpo Juda, flowige & increasinge in power, til he get him by the necke. He shall fyll also the wydenesse of thy lande wyth hys brode winges, O Emanuel. lyke a fylthye abhominable braunche: like as dead mens raymente that are thrst thorrowe with the swerde, and go downe to the stones of the depe: as a deade coarse that is troden vnder fete: and arte not buryed with them. Euen because that thou haste wasted thy lande, and destroyed the people.
The generacion of the wicked shalbe with oute honoure, for euer. Let there a waye be loughte to destroye their children, that be in their fathers wyckednes, that they come not vp agayne to possesse the lande, and fyll the worlde full of enemyes. I wil stãde vp against them (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) and roote oute the name and remn-naunte, sonne, and sonnes sonne of Babylon, (sayeth the Lorde) and wyll gene it to the Otters, and wyll make water poddels of it. And I wyll swepe them oute with the besome of destruccion, sayeth the Lorde of Hostes. The Lorde of Hostes hath swoorne an othe, sayenge: It shal come to passe as I haue determined, and shalbe fulfylled as I haue deuised. * So that Assiria shall I destroye in my lande, and vpon my mountaynes wyll I treade hym vnder foote. Where thorow his yocke shall come from them, and his burthen shalbe taken from their shoulder. This deuyce hathe God taken thorowe the whole worlde, and this is hys hande stretched oute ouer all people. For yf the Lorde of hostes determen a thynge, who is able to disanulle it?
And yf he stretche forthe hys hande, who maye holpen in agayne? The same yeare that kynge Ahaz dyed, God thzeatned on this maner: * Reioyce not thou whole Palestina, because the rodde of him that bea-teth the is broken: * for oute of the serpents rote rare, there shal come an adder, and the frute shalbe a fiery flyge worme. But the fyrst borne of the poore shalbe fed, and the symple shal dwel in a safetie. * Thy rote also wil I destroy with honger, and it shal slaye thy remnaunte. Mourne thou porte, wepe thou citye, for (O whole lande of Palestina) thou art layde waste, for there shal come from the North a smoke, that not one alone maye abyde in his place. Who shall then aunswere the messangers of the Gentiles? For the Lorde hath stablyshed Sion, and the poore of his people that be therin, do put their truste in him.

¶ The .xb. Chapter.

THis is the burthen vpon Moab: Ar of Moab was destroyed and ouerthrowen in the nyghte season: Kir also in Moab was destroyed & perished in the nighte. They wente vp to the ydols house, euen to Bibon, to the hie places, to wepe for Nebo, & Moab dyd mourne for Medba: * All their heades were balde, & all their beardes shauen. In their stretes are they girded about with sacke clothe. In all the toppes of their houses and stretes, shalbe nothynge but mournynge and we-pynge. Heshebon and Eleale shal crye, that they: voyce shalbe heard vnto Jahaz.
The worthyes also of Moab shall bleare, oute and crye for verye sorow of their Mín des: Woo shal my hert be for Moabs sake.
They shal flie vnto the citye of Zoar, which is lyke a kayze yonge bullocke of thze yere olde, for they shal go vp to Luith, we-pynge. Euen so by the waye towarde Ho-ronaim they shall make lamentacion for there bitter destruccion. For the waters of Nimrim shalbe dryed vp, by reason wherof the grasse is withzed, the herbes destroyed, & the grene thynges gone. For the relydue that he hath done, they are sor-rie. As for their substãce, the enemies haue eyed them to the bzoke of the wylloes.
For the crye went ouer the whole lande of Moab: vnto Eglaim, & vnto Beer Elim, was there nothynge but mournynge, because the waters of Dimon were full of bloude: for I the Lorde shall sende more bloude vpon Dimon, and lyons vpon the remnaunte of the lande, and on them that are escaped from Moab.

¶ The .xb. Chapter.

SEnde the Lord of the worlde a lambe: from the rocke that lieth towarde the desert, vnto the hil of the doughter Si on. For as for the doughter of Moab, they shalbe as a fremblynge byrde, that is put oute of hernest, for they shal carye the vnes Arnon: gather youre councell, come together in iudgemente, couer vs with your shadow in the mid daye, as the night dothe hyde the chased, and bewraye not them that are fled, let my persecuted people dwel amonge you Moab, be thou their refuge against the destroyer: for the aduersarie is brought to nought, the robber is vndone, the tyraunte is wasted oute of the lande. And in mercye shall the seate be prepared, and he shall syt vpon it in the truth, in the Tabernacle of Dauid, iudgynge and seekynge iudgemẽt, and making haste vnto righteousnes. * We haue hearde of the pryde of Moab, he is verye proude, presumpteous, arrogant, and full of indygnacion, and bayne are hyppyes. Therefore shal Moab make lamētacion, because of the Moabites (that shall be slayne:) yea, they shall wayle altogether. Mourne ye for the foundacyons of the Cytye, that is made of brycke, shall ye complayne: Euen the same people that are left only behynde: For the vynes of Hesebon are cut downe: As for the vyne of Sibma, the Lordes of the Heythen haue broken downe her principall braunches: They are come euē vnto Jezer, they went on wanderynge vnto the wyldernesse. Her goodly braunches were throwen downe, as they wente ouer the sea. Therefore wyll I mourne for Jazer, and for the vyne of Sibma. I wyll poure my teares vpon the, O Hesbon, and Eleale, for the crie of thyne enemies is fallen vpon thy sommer fruites, & vpon thyne haruest. The myrthe and chere is taken awaye oute of the plentyfull felde, and in the vineyardes, there shal be no ioye nor gladnesse. The treader shall treade oute no wyne in the Wozelles, the songe of theyr mervye chere haue I layed downe.

Wherfore, my bowels shal romble lyke an harpe, for Moabs sake, and myne inwarde partes for the cytyes sake, that is made of brycke. And it shal come to passe, that whē it is sene that Moab shalbe wery of his hyll chapels, he shal come to hys temple to praye, but he shall not be able. So then, thys is the sayinge that the Lorde hath spoken concernyng Moab, sens that tyme. But nowe the Lorde hath spoken, sayinge: In thre yeares, whiche shalbe as the yeares of an hired seruaunte: shal the glory of Moab be tourned into confusion, thorowout all his multitude, which is very great. And that whiche remayneth, shalbe very smal and feble.

THis is the heuy burthen vpon Damascus: beholde, Damascus is taken away, to be no more a citie, but shall be an heape of broken stones. The walled city of Aroer shalbe soldes for catel whiche shal lie there, & there shalbe none to fraye thē awaye. Ephraim also shall no more be strong, & Damascus shal no more be a kig dome, and the remnaunt of Syria shall be as the glory of the childrē of Israel, sayeth the Lorde of hoostes. And in that daye it shal come to passe that Jacob shalbe made verye poore, and the fatnes of hys flesche shall ware leane. And he shall be as some that gathereth vp corne in haruest, euen lyke hym whose harme reapeth the eares of corne. He shall be also lyke hym that gathereth eares of corne in the valley of Rephaim. Some gatheryngs in dede shall there be left in it, euē as in the shakyng of an olme tre, there remayne two or thre berries in the toppe of the vppermost bowes, and foure or fyue in the hyode fruteful braūches thereof, sayeth the Lorde God of Israell. Then shall man tourne agayne to hys maker, and hys eyes shall haue respect to the holye one of Israell. As for the altares, whiche are his owne handye worcke, he shall not regarde them, and the thynges that hys fyngers haue made (as groues and ymages) those shall he not cast his eye vnto. In that daye shall theyr stronge cytyes be as the forsaken shrubbes, and braūches, whiche they left because of the childrē of Israel, and the lande shalbe desolate. Because thou haste forgotten God thy sauiour, and hast not bene myndfull of thy stronge rocke, therefore shalte thou set pleasaunt plantes, and shalt graffe the braunche of another mannes vyne. In the daye shalt thou make thy plant to growe, and early in the morning shalt thou make thy sede to florysshe. The haruest shall be gone in the daye of enheritaunce, & there shalbe sorowe without hope of comforte. Wo shalbe to the multitude of muche people, which shal make a soūde like the noise of the sea: And the violence of the nacions, whiche shall rage lyke the enchynge in of many waters: & euē like many waters shal the people rage. God shal rebuke him, and he shal flye farre of. He shall be chaced awaye lyke as dyse strawe vpon the mountaynes, before the wynde, and lyke a thing that turneth before the storme. At euen beholde, there is trouble: And or euer it be morning: lo, he is gone. Thys is the portion of them that oppresse vs, and the lotte of them that robbe vs.

¶ The.xviii. Chapter.

OThat lande that trusteth vnder the shadow of winges, that lāde which is beyonde the waters of Ethiopia: sendyng messagers by the sea, euē in vessels of reedes ouer the water. Get you hence (ye spedie messagers) to a nacion that is scattred abrode, & robbed of that they haue: a fearfull people frō their beginig hitherto: a nacion trodē downe by litle & litle, whose land the floudes haue spoiled. And al ye inhabiters of the worlde, & indwellers of the earth, loke vp when he lifteth vp a token in the mountaynes, and herken when he blowe with the trompe. For so the LORD sayde vnto me: As for me, I wyll take my rest, and loke vpon the matter in myne habitacyon, lyke a fayre heate after the rayne, and lyke a cloude of dewe in the heate of harnest. For afore the haruest, when the braūche is growen, there shall come ripe fruite oute of the floure, and he shall entre downe the entrecate wyth hythes, and the braunches shall he take awaye wyth hookes. Thus shall they be lefte together vnto the fowles of the moun-taynes, and to the beastes of the earthe: for in Sommer the byrdes shall remayne vpon it, and euery beaste of the lande shal be vpon it in the wynter. In that tyme shall there a present be brought vnto the Lorde of hoostes: euen a people that is scattred abrod, & robbed of that they had, that same people which hath bene fearfull from theyr begynnynge hytherto: A nacyon

A THe heny burthen of * Egipt: behold, Jer.46 a the ‡ Lord rideth vpō a swyfte cloude, Eze.29.a and shall come into Egypte, and the Aba.2.b ydoles of Egypte shall tremble at the presence of hym, and the hearte of Egypte agaynste another, and one neyghboure a-gaynste another, cyte agaynst cyte, and realme agaynste realme. The mynde also of Egipte shalbe cleane without councell wythin it selfe, and the deuyce that they take, wyll I destroye, so that they shall seke councel at ydolles, and at sothsayers, at wozchers with spirites, and at sothsayers.

And the Egiptians wil I gene ouer into the hande of a maruelous cruell Lorde, and a myghtye kynge shall haue dominion ouer them, sayeth the Lorde God of hoostes. The waters of the sea shall fayle, and the ryuer shal decrease, and be dried vp. The waters shall be drawen oute: The ryuers of Egipt shalbe emptied and dried vp, the reedes and flagges shalbe cut downe. The grasse in the riuer and by the ryuers banke, and all that groweth by the ryuer shal wither awaye, and be brought al to noughte. The fishers also shall mourne, & they that cast an angle into the water, shall make lamē-tacion, and they that laye for the theyr net beside the waters shalbe rooted out. Moze ouer, they that wozke in flaxe, and make fyne woozckes, shalbe confounded, and so shall they that weaue open woozckes. For their open wozkes shalbe euen destroyed, & all they that make pooles and stewes for fyshe shal come to naught. ¶ Surely the foolysh shal smite Egipte sooze, and heale them a-gayne, and they shalbe conuerted vnto the Lorde, and he shall be entreated of them, & shall heale them. In that daye shall there be a comen waye oute of Egypt into Assiria, and Assiria shal come into Egipt, and Egipt into Assiria, so that the Egiptians and the Assirians, shall serue the Lorde to gether. In that daye shal the nacion of Israel be the thirde with Egipt and Assiria, and they shall be blessed in the myddest of the lande, which land the Lorde of hoostes hath blessed, sayinge: blessed is my people of Egipte. Assur also is the woorke of myne handes, and Israell is myne inheritaunce.

¶ The .xx. Chapter.

IN the yere that Tharta came to Asdod hī) & had fought agaist Asdod & take it.

At the same time spake the lord by the hād of Esay the sonne of Amos, saying: go, and take of the sackcloth frō thy lopnes, & put of thy shue from thy foote. And he dyd so, walkynge naked and bare foote. And the Lorde sayde: lyke as my seruaunte Esay hathe walcked naked, and bare foote for a signe and wonder thre yeres vpon Egipt, and Ethiopia: Euen so shall the kynge of Assyria take awaye oute of Egypte, and oute of Ethiopia, chyldren and olde men, naked and bare foote, with their loynes vncouered to the greate shame of Egypte. They shall be brought in feare also, and ashamed one of another: Ethiopia of Egipte, and Egypte of Ethiopia, consyderynge what glorye they were in afore. And they that dwelle in the same yle, shal saye in that daye: Beholde, thus are we regarded. Whither shal we flye for helpe, that we maye be delyuered from the kinge of Assiria? and howe shal we escape?

¶ The xxi. Chapter.

A THe burthen of the waste sea: euen as the stormye wether that passeth thorrow at the noone day, to come fro the wildernes, fro that horrible lande. A greuous vision was shewed vnto me: Let one disceatefull offender come agaynste another, and one distroyer agaynste another.
Vp Elam, laye syege thou of Media, al their groning haue I layed downe. Therefore are my loynes fylled with sorowe, heupnesse hathe taken holde vpon me, as Esa.13.a the panges of ✶ a woman that is trauay-Jer.13.a lyng. It made me stoupe when I hearde it, and it vexed me when I sawe it. My heart panted, fearefulnesse came vpon me. The nyght of my volupteousnes, hathe he turned agaynste me into feare. Whyle they garnished the table, the watch men loked:
And whyle I was eatynge and drynkynge (it was sayde:) vp ye captaynes, take you to youre shylde. For thus hath the Lorde B sayde vnto me: Goe, and set a watch man, to tell what he seeth. And he sawe a cha-ret, which two horsmen sat vpon, with the carriage of an Asse, and the carpage of a camell: So he loked, and take very dily-gent hede. And the Lyon cryed, Lorde, I stand waytyng all the whole daye, and am appoynted to kepe my watch euery nyght.
And beholde, here commeth a charret of men with two horsmen. And he answered, Jer.51.b and sayde: ✶ Babilon is fallen, it is fallen, Apo.14.b and all the ymages of her goddes hathe he art he whome I must threshe, and thou be-longest to my corne floore. Thys that I hearde of the Lorde of hoostes the GOD of Israell haue I haue shewed vnto you.

Jer.49.b The burthen of Duma: ✶ He calleth vnto me oute of Seir: Watcheman, what hast thou espyed by nyght? Watchman, what haste thou espyed by nyght? The C watchman sayde; The morninge commeth, and so doeth the nyght. If ye will aske anye question, then aske it: retourne and come agayne. The burthen concernyng Arabia: In the pleasaunt grouide of Arabia shall ye tarye all nyght, euen Esa.16.b in the stcates of Dedanim. ✶ The enhabi-tours of the lande of Thema brought forthe water to hym that was thyrstye, they preuented him with their breade that was fled awaye. For because of the swear-des are they become fugityue, euen for the drawen swearde, and for the bente bowe, and because of the greuousnes of warre. For thus hathe the Lorde sayde vnto me: ✶ There is yet a yeare according Jer.49.c to the yeares of an hyred seruaunte, and all the glorye of Cedar shal fayle. And the numbre of them that shall escape from the bowes shall be minished by the myghtye children of Cedar, for so the Lorde God of Israel hath spoken.

to death with swearde, nor dead in battel.
All thy captaynes are fugitiue together, the archers haue taken them prisoners: All they that are founde in thee, are in captiuite together, because they fledde farre Luc.19.f of. Therefore, sayde I: Let me alone and Jere.9.a ✶ I will make lamentacion. Ye shall not be able to comforte me, because of the destruccion of the daughter of my people.
For thys is a daye of trouble, of ruyne, bryng to passe in the valley of vision, brea-kynge downe the cytye, and crienge vnto B mountaynes. Elam bare the quiuer wyth a charet of fote men, and of horsemen, and the citye of Kyr shewed the shylde open.

Thy chiefe valley also was full of charret-tes, and the horsmen set their faces direct-lye towarde the gate. And in that daye Juda, and then dyddest thou loke toward the armoure of the house of the forest. 2.Pet.b.ii Ye haue sene also the brooken places of the ✶ citye of Dauid, howe that they are manye, & ye gathered together the waters of the lower poole. As for the houses of Jerusalē, ye haue numbred them, and the houses haue ye broken downe to make the C wall stronge. A pyt also haue ye made be-twene the two walles, for the waters of the olde pole, and haue not regarded the maker therof, neyther had respecte vnto him that tohe it in hand. And in that daye dyd the Lorde God of hoostes call mē vnto weppynge and mournynge, to baldnesse & gyrding about with heeklothe. And Behold, they haue ioye and gladnes, slayeng oxen, and killing shepe, eating flesh, & drinke wine: * Let vs eate and drincke: for to morowe we shal dye. And it came to the eares of the Lorde of hoostes: Thys iniquite shall not be pourged from you tyll ye dye, saieth the Lorde God of hoostes: Thus saieth the Lorde God of hoostes: Go, get the vnto yonder treasurer, euen vnto * Sebna, whiche is the ruler of the house. What hast thou to do here? and whō haste thou here, that thou shouldest here hewe the out a sepulchre, as it were one that heweth hym out a sepulchre on hye, or that graueth an habytacyon for hym selfe in a hard rocke? Behold, O thou mā, the Lorde shall carye thee awaye into captyuytie, and shall surely couer the with confusion. The Lorde shall turne the ouer lyke a ball with hys handes, (and shal sende thee) into a farre contrey: There shalte thou dye, and there (in steade of the charettes of thy pompe) shal the house of thy Lorde haue confusion, I wyll dryue the from thy place, and out of thy dwellynge shall he ouerthrowe thee. And in that daye shall I call my seruaunte Eliakim, the sonne of Helkias. And wyth thy garmentes will I cloth him, and wyth thy girdle will I strength hym: thy power also wyl I commyt into his handes, and he shalbe a father of suche as dwell in Jerusalem, and in the house of Juda.

Job.12.b apoc.3.b. * And the keye of the house of Dauid wyll I laye vpon hys shoulder, so that he shall open, and no man shall shut. He shall Zach.3.a shut, and no man shal open. * And I wil fasten him as a nayle in a sure place, and he shall be the glorious seate of hys fathers house. Moreouer all generacyons and posteryties shall hange vpon him, al the glory of theyr fathers house, all vesselles bothe greate and smale, and all instrumentes of measure & musycke. In that daye (saieth the Lorde of hoostes) shall the nayle that is fastened in the sure place, depart, be broken and fall, and the burthen that was vpon it, shall be pluckte awaye, for so the Lorde hath spoken.

The burthen of * Tyre: Mourne ye shyppes of Tharsis, for there cōmeth

Jer.47.c Ezec.26.a & 27.28. such destruction, that ye shal not haue an house to entre into: Out of the lande of Cittim haue they knowledge of this plage. Be styl, ye that dwel in the yle, the marchantes of Zidō, and suche as passe ouer the sea, haue mede the plenteous. The corne that groweth by the great waters of Nilus, & the frutes of the tyuer were her bytayles, so that it became a cōmen marte of the nacyons. Be ashamed thou Zidon, for the see (euen the strength of the sea) hathe spoken, saying: I haue not trauayled, nor brought forth children, nor norysched vp younge mē, or brought vp virgins. When tydynges commeth to the Egyppeyans, they shall be sorye for the rumore that goeth of Tyre. Get you to Tharsis, mourne ye that dwell in the Ile. Is not thys that glorious cytie of youres, whyche hathe bene of olde antiquite? Her owne fete shall carye her forthe to be a sogeourner into a farre countrey. Who hathe deuysed thys agaynste Tyre, (that geueth garlandes vnto other cities) whose marchauntes are princes, & whose captaynes are honourable in the worlde? Euen the Lorde of hoostes hathe deuysed this, to put downe the pryde of all suche as be glorious, and to mynyche all them that be proude vpon earth: Get the oute of thy lande vnto the doughter of Tharsis, * seing thou hast no more strength. He that smote the * kyngdomes together, holdeth oute his hande ouer the sea: euen the Lorde him selfe hath geuen a commaūdement agaynst the same comen place of marchandyse, that they shall vtterly destroye the mighte therof. And he sayde: Make no more thy boaste (O virgin thou doughter Zidon) thou shalt be brought downe: Vp, get the ouer vnto Cittim, where neuertheles thou shalt haue no rest. Behold, this people come not of the Caldees, but Assur made them strong with great shippes. They set vp the strong holdes therof, and destroyed his palaces, and he brought it in decaye. Mourne ye shyppes of Tharsis, for your strēgth is brought downe. And in that daye shall Tyre be forgotten seuentie yeares (accordynge to the yeares of one kynge) and after the ende of the seuentie yeares, shall Tyre synge as doeth an harlot. Take an harpe, and go about the citie (thou harlot thou haste bene forgotten) make swete melodye, synge moe songes, that thou mayest be had in remembraunce. And after the ende of the seuentye yeres shal the Lord visite Tire, & she shall conuerte vnto her rewarde, & shall cōmitte fornication with all the kyngdomes of the earth that are in the worlde. * Their occupyng also and their rewarde shall be holy vnto the Lorde. Theyr gaynes shal not be layed vp nor kepte in store, but it shalbe theyrs that dwell before the Lorde, that they maye eate ynough, and haue clothing sufficiente.

Behold

A Beholde, the Lorde maketh the earthe waste and emptie: he turneth it vp side Deut.4.b. downe, & scatreth abrode the inhabytours therof: * And the preest shalbe as the people, & the master as the seruaunt, the mastresse lyke the maid, the seller lyke the byer: he that lendeth vpon vsurye, lyke him that boroweth vpō vsurye: the creditoure as the detter. The world shalbe cleane wasted and vtterly spoiled, for so the lord hath spoken. The earthe is sorye, and consumeth away, the worlde is feble & perisheth, the proude people of the earth are come to naughte.

The earthe also is become vnpryckable vnder the inhabytours therof, whiche haue B transgressed the lawes, chaunged the ordynaunce, broken the euerlastyng couenaūte. Therefore hathe the curse consumed the earth, and they that dwell therein, are fallen into trespasse. Wherefore, the inhabytours of the erth are perished with drouth, and fewe men are lefte behynde. The wyne sayleth: the vyne hath no myght, all they Apo.18.c that haue bene merye of hearte, are come to mourenynge. * The myrthe of tabrettes is layed down, the noyse of such as haue made merye, is ceassed, the ioye of the harpe is at an ende. They shall dryncke no more wyne with mirth, stronge drincke shall be bitter to them that dryncke it. The cytie of banitie is broken downe, euery house is shutte vp, that no man maye come in.

In the streates is there a crying because of wyne, all cheare is banished awaye, the Esa.17.b the world, euen amonge the people, it shall come to passe, as at the shakynge of * Olyues, and as the grapes are when the vyne harueste is done. They shall lyfte vp theyr voyce: and make a merye noyse, and in magnifying of the Lorde, shal they crye out of the weste. Wherefore, prayse ye the Lorde in the valleys, euen the name of the Lord God of Israell in the Iles of the sea. From the vttermost part of the earth haue we hearde prayses and myrthe, because of the righteous. And I sayde: I knowe a thynge in secrete: I knowe a thyng in secrete, wo is me, the transgressours haue offended, the transgressours haue greuously offended. Fraudulnes, the pit and the snare are vpon thee, O thou that dwellest on the earth. It wyll come to passe, that * who so escapeth that

D from an hye are open, and the foundacyons of the earth are moued. The earth is vtterly broken down, the earth hath a sore ruine, the earth quaketh vehemently, The earth shall reele to and fro like a dronckerde, and shalbe moued lyke a tente: of one nyghte is the iniquitie therof shalbe heuy vpon it. It shal fal, and not rise vp again. And in that day shal the Lord visite the host above that is on hie: and the kynges of the worlde that are vpon the earth. And they shalbe gathered together, as they that be in prison: and they shalbe shut vp in ward, and after many dates shal they be visited. * The mone Luc.21.g shal be abashed, and the sunne ashamed, when the Lorde of hoostes shall raigne in mount Sion, and in Ierusalem with worshyp, and in the syght of suche as shalbe of hys counsell.

A Thou art the Lord my God, I will magnifie the, I wyll geue thankes vnto thy name. For thou hast brought wōderful thynges to passe, according to thyne olde councels treuly & faythfullye. * Thou Esa.26 b haste made of a citie an heape of stones, and brought a stronge towne into decaye. The habytacyon of straungers haste thou made to be no cytie, neyther shalt it be builded any more. Therefore shall the myghtye people geue glory vnto the, the cytye of the baleaunt Heithen shal feare the. For thou haste bene a strength vnto the poze, and a succoure for the neadye in his trouble. A refuge against evil weather, a shadow against the heate. For the blaste of ragynge men is lyke a storme that casteth downe a wal. Lyke as thou bringest heate downe out of a drye place, so shalte thou suppresse the noise of alcauntes. The heate is in the shadowe of the cloude: the braunche of the myghtye shall be brought lowe. And in Lu.14.A thys mountayne shall * the Lorde of hoostes make vnto all people, a feaste of pleasteous and delycate thynges, euen of moste pleasaunt and deinte dyshes. And in thys mountayne shall the Lord distroye the couering, that all people are wrapped in, and the hanging that is spred vpon all nacions.

awaye teares from all faces, and the re- and.21.c

this is oure God, we haue wayted for him, Epho.2.B * and he shall saue vs. This is the Lord in whom we haue hoped, we wilbe merye and reioyse in the saluacyon that commeth of him. For in this mountayne shall the hand of the Lorde cease, & Moab shall be threshed vnder him, euen as strawe is thresh-vpon

vpon the grounde. And he shall stretch out his hande in the myddes of thē (as he that swymmeth, casteth oute hys handes to swymme) and wyth the strength of his hā-des shall he brynge downe the pryde. The stronge holde also and defence of thy walles hathe he ouerthrowen and cast downe, and broughte them to the grounde, euen vnto duste.

IN that daye shall this song be songe in the lande of Juda. * We haue a stronge cytie. Saluacyon shall God appoynte vn-to vs for walles & bulwarkes. * Open ye the gates that the righteous people which ke-epeth the trueth may entre in. Their minde is set vpon the, by cause thou preseruest thē * in peace: yea, euen in peace: because they put their truste in thee. Put ye your truste alwaye in the Lorde: for in the Lorde God there is strengthe for euermore. * For he hath brought downe the hye mynded cyte-tens. As for the proud cytie he hath brought it lowe: euen vnto the grounde shal he cast it downe, and bring it vnto duste. The fote, euen the foote of the poore, and the steppes of suche as be in necessyte, shall treade it downe: The pathe of equitye wylte thou graunte vnto the iuste, O thou moste righ-teous, * thou shalt ordre the pathe of hym that is righteous. Yea, in the waye of thy iudgementes, O Lorde, haue we put oure truste in thee. Thy name also: and the re-membraunce of the is the thynge that oure soule longeth for. * My soule hathe lon-ged for the all the nyght, & with my spirite (whiche is wythin me) will I seke the ear-lye in the morning. For when thy Judge-mentes are in the earthe, the inhabytoures of the worlde shall learne ryghteousnes.

Shal the vngodly man be fauoured, which hathe not learned ryghteousnesse, but doth wyckedlye in the earthe, where not wynge ought to be done, but that whych is right-teous? He shal not se the glory of the lord. Lorde, when thy hand is lifte vp to strike, they se it not: but they shall se it, and be con-founded with the zele of the people, and the fyer that consumeth thyne enemyes, shall deuoure them. Lord vnto vs thou shalte ge-nide peace: * for thou also hast wrought all oure workes in vs. O Lorde oure God, other lordes beside the hath rulyed vs, but we wilbe mynded only of the, and of thy name: The deade wyll not lyue, and they that be oute of life will not ryse agayne: therefore hast thou visited and roted them oute, and destroyed all the memorye of them. Thou haste increased the people (O Lorde) thou haste increased the people, and thou art pra-sed: thou hast sent them farre of vnto all the coastes of the earth.

* Lorde in trouble haue they visited the: they powred oute theyr prayer, when thy chastenynge was vpon theym. * Lyke as a woman wyth chyld that draweth nye to-warde her trauel, is sory, and cryeth in her paynes, euen so haue we bene in thy sighte, O Lord. * We haue bene wyth childe, & sul-fred paine, as though we had brought forth wynde. For there is no saluacyō in the erth, neither do the inhabitours of the, wold sub-mitte them selues. * Thy deade men shall lyue, euen with my body shal they ryse a-gayne. Awake and synge ye that dwell in duste. For thy dewe is euen as the dewe of herbes, and the earth shall caste oute them that be vnder her. Come my people, * entre thou into thy chambres, and shutte thy doores about thee: * hyde thy selfe for a lytle whyle, vntyll the indyg-nacyon be ouerpaste. * For lo, the Lorde is commynge oute of hys place, to vysyte the wyckednesse of suche as dwell vpō earthe. The earthe also shall dysclose her bloude, and shall no more hyde them that are slayne in her.

IN that daye, the Lorde wyth hys sore, great, and mightie sweard shall vysyte * Leuiathan the fugitiue serpent, euen Leuiathan that croked Serpente, and he shall slaye the dragon that is in the sea. In that daye, se that ye synge of the con-gregacyon, which is the vyneyarde, that bryngeth the best wyne. Euen I the Lorde do kepe it. In due seasons shall I water it: and leste the enemye do it anye harme, I wyll both nyght and daye preserue it. There is no displeasure in me els, (when the vyneyarde bryngeth me forthe brears and thornes) I would go thorowe it by warre, and burne it vp together. Let it take holde of my strengthe, and it shall be at one wyth me, euen at one shall it be wyth me. * The dayes are commynge, that Jacob shall take roote. Israell shall be greene and florysshe, and the worlde shal be fylled with fruite. Hath he smytten him as sore as he dyd the other that smote hym? Or is he slayne wyth so sore a slaughter as they had that slew hym? In measure doeth he smyte hym, whyle he sendeth vnto him suche chynge, whereby he commeth to his myndе agayne. For in the daye that the caste wynde blowe th sore, it taketh a-waye the frutes. Thus therefore shall the iniquitie of Jacob be reconcyled, & here is all the fruyte of the takynge awaye of his sin, ye he made al the stones of the aulter of idoles, as chalke stones, that are beaten in sunder, that their groues & ymages rise not vp agayne. Els shal the strong cities be desolate, & the habitacion forsaken & left like a wildernes. * There shal the calfe feede, & there shall he lye and eate vp the grasse therof. When the braunches of it are drye, they are broken of, and the women come, and set them on fyre. * For it is a people of no vnderstandinge, and therefore he that made them, shall not fauoure them, and he that created them, shal geue them no grace. And in that daye shall the Lorde make a threshynge from the mydes of the ryuer Eufrates, vnto the riuer of Egypt: and ye children of Israell shall be gathered together one to another. In that daye shal the great trompe be blowē, so that they whiche were lost in the lande of Assiria: & they that were banished into the land of Egipt, shal come & worshippe the Lord in the holy mount at Jerusalem.

WOe be vnto the crowne of pryde, euē * to the dronken people of Ephraim, whose greate pompe is as a floure that fadeth away, vpō the heade of valley of such as be in welth, & are ouer lade with wine. Behold, * ther cometh a vehement & soze daye from the Lord, lyke an vnmeasurable hayle and perelous tempest, euen like the fozce of mighty & horrible waters, that violently beareth downe al thynges. The crowne of the pryde of the dronckē Ephraimites shall be troden vnder foote: * so that the floure of his fayrenes, & bewty, which is the heade of the valley of fatnes, shal fade awye, as doeth an vnrypē rype fygge afore harueste. Which when a man spieth, he loketh vpon it, and while it is yet in his hande, he eateth it vp. In that day shal the lorde of hoostes be the crowne of glorye, & diamonde of bewtye vnto the residue of his people. He wylbe also a spirite of perfyte knowledge to him that sytteth in iudgemente, and strength vnto them that turne awaye the battell to the gate of the enemyes. But they are oute of the waye by reason of wine: yea, farre oute of the way are they thorow stronge drynke. * The preest also and the prophete are gone astraye by the meanes of stronge drynke, they are dronckē with wyne, they go amisse thorowe stronge drynke: They fayle in prophecyinge and stomble in iudgement. For the tables are so ful of vomite & filthines that no place is cleane. Whome then shal he vse to teach knowledge? and whom shal he make to vnderstād the thing that he heareth? For they are as yonge ones as yonge children, that are taken from the milke, and are weyned. For they that be such, muste haue after one lesson, another lesson: * after one commaundement another commaundement, after one rule another rule, after one instruccion another instruccion, there a lytle and there a lytle. For he that speaketh vnto thys people, is euen as one that vseth rudenesse of speache and a straunge language. Yf any man saye vnto them: lo, this is the rest wherewyth ye maye ease hym that is weyre, thys is the refreshynge, they wyll not heare.

* Therefore, the worde of the Lorde (lesson vpon lesson, commaundemente vpon commaundement, rule vpon rule, instruccion vpon instruccyon, there a lytle and there a lytle) shall be vnto them an occasion of stomblynge that they maye goe on, and fall backwarde, be dasshed, tangled, and snared. Wherefore, heare the worde of the LORDE, ye mockers, ye that haue rule of this people, whiche is at Jerusalem. Because ye haue sayd: We haue made a couenaunte with death, and with hel are we at agreemente. And though there goe forth a soze plague, it shall not come vnto vs. For we haue made falsholde oure refuge, and vnder vanite are we hyde. Therefore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: beholde, I laye in Sion for a foundacion, a stone, euen a tryed stone, a precious corner stone, a sure foundacion. Who so beleueth, lette hym not be to hastye. Judgemente also wyl I laye to the rule, and rygh teousnes to the balaunce: So that the hayle shall take awaye youre hope confidence as a broome, and the preuye place of youre refuge shall the waters runne ouer. And thus the couenenaunte that ye made with death, shalbe disanulled: and youre agreement that ye made with hel, shal not stād. yea, when the soze plage goeth forth, ye shalbe troden downe vnder it. From the tyme that it goeth forth, it shall take yow away. For early in the morninge euerye day: yea, bothe daye and nyght shall it goe thorowe: and when the noyse therof is perceaued, it shall gender vexation. For the bed is narowe, and not large: and the couering so smal that a man can not winde hym selfe vnder it. * For the LORDE shal stande, as in mounte Perazim, and shalbe wrathe lyke as in the valley * Gibeō, that he may do his worke, his straūge worke, and bringe to passe hys acte, hys straunge acte. Nowe therefore see that ye be no mockers, lest youre punyshment increase; For I haue heard of the Lorde of hoostes, hoostes, that there shal come a hoyste ende vpon the whole earthe. Heare ye eien, and herken vnto my voyce, considre, and ponidre my speche. Doeth not the husbandman plowe all the daye, and openeth, and breaketh the clottes of hys grounde, that he maye lowe? when he hath made it playne, wyl he not syed abrode the kytches, and sow comin, and cast in wheate by measure, and the appoynted barly, and rye in theyr place? God wyl instructe him to haue discrecio, eus his god wil teach hi. For kytches shal not be thresshed with an harrow: neyther shall a carte whele be broughte ehorowe the comyn: But that kytches are beaten out with a staf, and comin with a rodde. But the seede that breade is made of, is thresshed, thoughyt be not alwaye a threshynge. And the carte whele muste be brought ouer it, lest he grynde it with his eeth. Thys also commeth of the Lorde of hoostes, whiche worketh with wonderfull wisdo, & bringeth excellet workes to passe.

a 2.Re.5.b. WOe vnto the, O Ariel, Ariel, thou city that * Dauid dwelt in: go on fro yere to yere, & let the lambes be slaine. I wyl lay sege vnto Ariel, so that there shall be heuynes and sorow in it: and it shall be vnto me, euen as an altre of slaughter. I wyll belege thee rounde about, and sighte agaynst the thorow a bulwarke: and wyll reare vp hyches agaynst the. Thou shalte be brought downe, and shalte speake out of the grounde, & thy speche shal goe lowe out of the dust. Thy voyce also shal come oute of the grounde lyke the voyce of a witch: and thy talkyng shal whysper oute of the dust. Moreouer, the noyse of thy straunge enemies shalbe like thynne dust, and the multytude of tyrannes shall be * as dry straw that cannot tarye: euen so denlye and in haste shall their blaste goe. Thou shalt be visited of the Lorde of hoostes with thonder, earthquake, and with a great noyse: wyth storme and tempest, and with the flame of a consumynge fire. And the multitude of all nacions that syghte agaynste Ariell shalbe as a dreame sene by night: * euen so shal all they be that make warre agaynst it, & stronge holdes to ouer come it, and that laye anye sege vnto it. In conclusion, it shalbe euen as when an hongry man dreameth that he is eatyng, and when he awaketh, his soule is emptye. Or as when a thrusty man dreameth that he is drinckyng: and when he awaketh, he is yet faynte: and hys soule hathe appetyte. Euen so shall the multytude of all nacions that syghte agaynst Sion. Wonder eyele thynges ouer in youre myndes, and wonder. * Blynded are they them selues, and the blynde guydes of other. They are dronken, but not wyth wyne: they are vnstable, but not throwe strong dryncke. For the Lorde hathe couered you wyth a slombrynge spirite, and hathe closed youre eyes. Youre prophetes also and rulers that shoulde see, them hath he couered. * And the vision of all the Prophetes is become vnto you, as the wordes of a boke that is sealed vp, whyche menne delyuer to one that is learned, sayinge: Reade thou in it. And he sayeth: I cannot, for it is sealed. And the boke is geuen vnto hym that is not learned, sayinge: Reade thou in it, and he sayeth: I am not learned. Therefore, thus hathe the LORD sayde: * For so muche as thys people when they be in trouble, doe honoure me with their mouthe, and with their lyppes: but their heart is farre fro me, & the feare whiche they haue vnto me, proceadeth of a commaundement that is taughte of men. Therfore wyl I do maruels amonge thys people, euen marueloꝰ thynges (I saye) and a wonder. * For the wysdome of theyr wyse men shal perysh, and the vnderstandyng of their wittye men shal hyd it selfe. Woe vnto them that kepe secrete theyr thoughtes, to hyde their councel from the Lorde, and do their workes in darkenesse, sayinge: * who seeth vs? and who knoweth vs? Wontes, youre destruction is (in my handes) in reputacion as the potters clay. And doth the worke saye, of hym that made it, he made not me? And doeth an earthen vessell saye of hym that fashioned it, he hadde no vnderstandynge? Is it not hard at hade, that Lybanus shalbe turned into a lowe felde, & that the lowe felde shall be taken as the wood? And in that daye shall deafe men heare the wordes of the boke, & the eyes of the blynde shall see euen oute of the cloude and out of darkenes. The meke spirited also shalbe merye in the Lord, and the poze amonge them that be lowly, shall reioyce in the holye one of Israell. For he that did violence, is broughte to nought, & the skornefull man is consumed: and they rooted oute that were hastye so soone to bwrighteousnes. Making a man to synne in the worde, and that toke him in a snare, whiche reproued them in the open place: and they that haue turned the cause of the righteous to nought. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde vnto the house of Jacob, euen thus sayeth he that redemed Abraham: * Jacob shal not now be confounded, nor his face pale. But when he seeth his children, the worke of my handes in the myddes of him, they shall sanctifie my name, & sanctifie

A Esa. 8.b. ALas, for those disobediente children (saith the Lorde,) * that they wyll take counsel without me. Alas, that they will take a secrete aduice, and not out of my spirite, & therfore adde they sinne vnto sinne. Euen they that walke to go down into Egypte, and haue asked no question at my mouth: but seke strēgth in the might of Pharao, and truste in the shadowe of Egypte. Therefore shall the strength of Pharao be youre confusyon, and the trust in the shadowe of Egypte youre shame.

4. Reg. 18. b Jer. 17. b Eze. 29. a For his captaynes were at Zoan, and hys ambassadoars came vnto Hanes. * They were all ashamed of the people that coulde do theym no good, and that myghte not helpe them, nor shewe them anye profyte,

B but were their confusion and rebuke. The heauy burthen of the beastes of the south in a lande of trouble and angusshe, from whence shall come the ponge and olde lion, the viper and fyrye serpente, that flyeth against theim that vpon coltes beare theyr ryches, and vpon camels their treasures, to a people that can do theym no good. For vayne and nothynge worth shall the helpe of the Egypcyans be. Therefore haue I cryed vnto Jerusalem. They shall haue strength ynoughe, yf they wyll settle their myndes in quietnes. * Nowe therefore, go thy waye, and wryte this before them in a table, and note it in a booke, that it maye finally remayne and be kepte styll for euer.

For they saye vnto the sears: Se not, and to theim that be cleare of iudgemente: loke not oute ryghte thynges for vs: but speake fayre wordes vnto vs: loke oute errowrs, get you oute of this waye, departe out of thys pathe, and tourne the holye one of Israell from vs. Wherefore thus sayeth the holye one of Israell: Because youre heartes ryse agaynste thys worde, and because ye truste in wrong dealyng and peruerse iudgemēt, and put your confydence therin.

Therefore shall ye haue thys mischefe for youre destruction and fall, lyke as an hye wall that fallethe, because of some ryfte or blast, whose breakynge commeth so dennly. 2. b lye. * And the hurte thereof is lyke an earthen bessell, whyche breaketh whythoute helpe: so that in the burstynge of it, there is not founde one sheurd to fetche fyre in, or to take water whyrhall owte of the pytte.

For thus sayeth the Lorde God, euen the holye one of Israell: In repentaunce and in D

For the LORDE is the GOD of iudgement.

Blessed are all they that hope in hym. If the people remayne in Syon, and at Jerusalem, thou shalte not be in heuynesse: but E at the voyce of thy complaynt shal he haue mercye vpon thee. And when he heareth it, he shall geue thee an answere. And thoughe the LORDE geue you the breade of trouble, and the water of aduersitie, thy rayne shall be no more so shante, but thyne eyes shall se thy rayne. yea, and thine eare shall heare the talckynge of hym that doth speake behynde thee. • This is the waye, Deu. 4. d walcke ye in it. ye shall destroye also the couerynge of youre syluer ymages, and the deckynge of youre golden ydolles. Euen as fylthynes shall ye put them awaye. And thou shalte saye vnto it. Get the hence. Then shal God geue rayne vnto thy seede, that thou halte sowe the grownde wythall: and breade of the increase of the earthe, whyche shall be fatte and derye plenteous. In that daye also, shall thy catell be fed in large pastures The oxen lykewyse, and the ponge asses, that eate the grounde, shall eate cleane prouender, whyche is purged wyth the wynde and the fanne. errour in the chawes of the people. And ye shall synge, lyke as in the nyght, when the holye solempnitie begynneth. And ye shall haue gladnesse of hearte , lyke as when one commeth wyth a pype vnto the hyll of the Lorde, and to the mooste myghtye one of Jsraell. And the Lorde shall cause his glaryous voyce to be hearde, and shall declare his stretched out arme with a terryble cō tenaunce, and with a flame of a consumyng fyre, with noysome lyghtenyng, with a shower, and with hayle stones. For throwe the voyce of the Lorde, shal + Assur be destroyed, whiche smote other men wyth the rodde. And it shall come to passe, that whi-chesoeuer he goeth, the rodde shal cleue vnto him, which the Lord shall ley vpon him, with tabrettes and harpes: and with great warre shall he fyghte agaynste his hoaste.

+ For the fire of payne is ordeyned from the begynnynge: yea, euen for kynges is it pre pared. This hath the Lorde set in the depe, and made it wide: the burnynge whereof is fyre and muche woode . The breath of the Lord, which is a ryuer of brymstone, doeth kyndle it.

tes, because they be many, and in horsmen, because they be lusty & stroge. But they regard not the holy one of Jsrael, & they aske no question at the Lorde. Where as he ne-uertheless (beyng wisest of all) plageth the wycked, and yet goeth not from hys word, when he steppeth forth, & taketh the bicce-te agaynst the housholde of the frowarde, & agaynst the helpe of euel doers. Now the Egipcians are men, and not God, and their horses flesh, and not spirite. And as sone as the Lorde stretcheth out his hande, the shall the helper fall, & he that should haue bene helped, and they shall all together be destroyed. For thus hath the Lorde spoken vnto me: Like as the + lyon or lyons whelpe roareth vpon the pray that he hath gotte, and is not afrayed, though the multitude of shepherdes crye out vpon him, neyther adathed for all the heape of them. So shall the Lorde of hoostes come downe to fyghte for mount Syon, and defende hys hyll.
¶ Lyke as byrdes flotre about their nestes, + so shall the Lorde of hoostes kepe, saue, defende and deliuer Jerusalem. Therfore, O ye childrē of Jsrael, tourne agayne from that vnfaythfulnesse, wherin you drowned your selues. + For in that daye euery man shall caste oute hys ydolles of syluer, and hys ydolles of golde, whiche ye haue made wyth your owne handes vnto your synne.
+ Assur also shalbe slayne with the swerde, not wyth a mannes swearde, neyther shall the swearde of anye manne deuoure hym: And he shall fle from the slaughter, and his seruauntes shalbe discomfited in their her-tes. Ye shall go for feare to hys stronge holdes, and hys princes shall fle from hys badge . Thus hathe the Lorde spoken, whose lyghte burneth in Sion, and hys fire in Jerusalem.

¶ The. xxxii. Chapter.

BEhold, a kyng shal gouerne after the rule of righteousnes, and the princes shall rule, accordyng to the balaunce of equitie. And that man shalbe vnto men as a refuge for tempest: lyke as a ryuer of water in a thirsty place, and the shadow of a great rocke in a dry lande . The eyes of the seynge shall not be dym, & the eares of the that heare, shal take diligent hede. The hert of the vnwise shall attayne to knowledge, & the vnperfect tōg shal speake plain ly and distinctly. Then shal the foly chyncle gard be no more called gētle, nor the churle liberal. But the nigarde will be nygardlye minded, and his hert will worke euel, and playe the ypocrite, and ymagine abhomina-cyons agaynst God, to make the hongrie leane, and to wythholde drynche from the thyrstye. These are the perelous weapons of the churlishe, these be hys shamefull counselles: that he maye begyle the poore wyth vngodly wordes: yea, euen there as he shoulde geue sentence wyth the poore.
+ But the liberall persone ymagyneth honest thynges, & commeth vp for liberalitie vnto promocyō. Vp (ye rychē & welwoms) herken vnto my voyce . Ye careles cyties, marke my wordes. After yeares and dayes shall ye be vrought in feare, O ye careless, cities. For harueste shalbe oute, & the grape gatheryng shal not come. O ye rythe ydell cyties, ye that feare no parell. Be abashed, you that lyue in abounduance tremble: you that lyue careless, caste of youre rayment, make your selues bare, put sacke clothe a-boute you . For as the vnfaythfull wepe when their mothers fetes are vsed: so shal you weape for youre fayre feldes and frutefull wyneyardes. Thy peorles felde shall bryngе thornes and thystles: and so shall it be euen in euery house of dolynteousnesse, and in euery cytye that reioyseth.
The palaces also shall be forsaken, and the greatly greatly occupied clyped desolate. The tow res & bulwarckes shall become dennes for euermore, the pleasure of mules shalbe tur ned to pasture for theyr: vnto the time that the spirit be powred vpon vs from aboue.

Thē shal the wilderines be a fruitful felde, & the plenteous felde shalbe reckened for a wod. Thē shal equitie dwel in the desterte, Rom. 5.a & righteousnesse in a fruceful lande. * And the rewarde of righteousnesse shalbe peace, Jere. 23.c & her frute rest & quietnes for euer. * And my people shal dwel in the innes of peace, & in sure dwellynges in safe places of cōfort, Hyle. And when the hayle fallech, it shall fall in the wodde, and the citie shalbe set lowe in the valleye. O howe happie shal ye be, whē ye shall sakelye sowe youre seed beside all waters. and dryue thither the fete of youre e Jen and asses.

with the blonde of them. All the starres of heauen shal wast, & the heauē shal fold together lyke a roule, and all the starres therof shal fal, lyke as the leaues fal, from the vines and figtrees. For my swerde shalbe bathed in heauen, and shall immediatlye come downe in iudgement vpon Idumea, and vpon the people, which I haue curssed for my vengeaunce. And the Lordes swerd shalbe ful of bloude, & be rustye with the fatnes & bloude of lambes & goates, with the fatnes of the kidneys of wethers. For the Lorde shall kyll a greate offeryng in Bozra, and a greate slaughter in the lande of Idumea. There shall the Vnicornes falle with them, and the Bulles with the giauntes: and their lande shalbe dronken with bloude, and their grounde corrupted with fatnes. Vnto thee also, O Sion, shall come the daye of the vengeaunce of God, and the yeare when thine owne iudgementes shall be recompensed. And his stouddes shal be turned to pytche, and hys earth to brymstone: And ther with shal the land be kindled, so that it shal not be quenched day nor nyght: but smoke euermore, and so forth to lye waste. And no man shall goe thorowe it for euer. But pellicanes, storckes, great oules and rauens shal haue it in possession, and dwel therin. For God shall spred oute the lyne of desolation vpon it, and weye it with the stones of emptynes. When kinges are called vpon, there shall be none, and all princes shalbe away. Thornes shall growe in their places, neteles and thystles in their strong holdes, that the dragons may haue their pleasure therein, and that they maye be a couet of estriches. Ther shal straunge beastes and Monsterous beastes mete one another, and the wylde bepe companye together. There shall the Lamia rye, and haue her lodgynge. There shall the oule make her nest, buylde: be there at home, & bring forth his yonge ones. Ther shal the Kytes come together eche one to his fyke. Seke thorowe the scripture of the Lorde and reade it. There shall none of these thynges be lefte oute, there shall not one nor such lyke fayle. For what hys mouthe commaundeth, that same doeth, his spirite gather together, or fulfilleth. For the glozye of Libanus, the bewtye of Charmell and Saron shall be geuen her. These shall knowe the honoure of the Lorde, and the maiestye of oure god. * And therefore strengthe the weake handes, and confozte the feble knees. Saye vnto them that are of a fearefull hearte. Be of good chere, and feare not. * Beholde, youre God cometh to take vengeaunce: and you shall se the rewarde that God geueth: god commeth his owne selfe, and wyll delyuer you. * Then shall the eyes of the blynde be lightened, and the eares of the deafe opened. Then shall the lame man leape as an harte, and the dome mans tonge shall geue thankes: * In the wyldernesse also there shalbe welle sprynges, and floudes of water in the desert. The drye grounde shall turne to riuers, and to the thirsty spriges of water: Where as dragons dwelt afore, there shall growe swete floures and grene ruches. There shall be fote pathes and common streates, whyche shall be called the holye way. No vncleane person shal go thorowe it: for the Lorde him selfe shal go with the that waye, & the wayfarer nor ignorannte shall not erre. There shalbe no Lyon, and no rauenyng beastes shal come therin, nor be ther, but mē redemed shal go ther fre & safe. And the redemed of the Lorde, I saye, shal conuert and come to Sion with thanksgeuinge. Euerlastynge ioye shall they haue, pleasure and gladnes shalbe amonge them. But ye thou wouldest saye to me: we truste in the Lorde oure GOD. A godlye God in deade: Whose hie places & aulters Hezekia tooke downe, and commaunded Juda and Jerusalem to worshippe only before the aulter. Nowe therfore, delyuer hoostages, that thou rebelle nomore against my lorde the kynge of Assirians. And I will geue the two thousande horses: yf thou be able to sette men vpon them. Howe dareste thou resiste the power of the smallest prynce, that my Lorde hathe? howe dareste thou truste in the charettes and horsmen of Egipte? Moreouer, thynkest thou that I am come vp hyether to destroy thys lande without the lordes will? The Lorde sayde vnto me: goe vp into the lande, that thou mayest destroye it. Then sayde Eliakim, Sabna, and Joah vnto Rabsaketh: Speake to vs thy seruauntes, (we praye thee) in the Syrians language, for we vnderstande it well. And speake not to vs in the Jewes tonge, least the folcke heare, which lieth vpon the wal. Then answered Rabsaketh: Thyncke ye that the kinge sente me to speake thys onelye vnto thy Lorde and the? Hath he not sent me to them also that lye vpon the walle? That they maye be compelled to eate their owne dounge, and drincke their owne stale with you? And Rabsaketh stode vpright, and cryed C with a loude voyce in the Jewes tongue, and sayde: Howe take hede how the great kynge of the Assirians geueth you warnyng: Thus sayeth the kyng: Let not Hezekias deceaue you: for he shal not be able to delyuer you. Moreouer let not Hezekias comfort you in the Lorde, when he sayeth: The Lorde without doubte shall defende vs, and shal not geue ouer thys cytye into the handes of the kyng of the Assirians, beleue him not. But thus sayeth the kyng of Assiria: optayne my fauour, encline to me, so maye euerye man eniope his vineyardes and figge trees, and drincke the water of hys cesterne, vnto the time that I come my selfe, and bringe you in to a lande that is lyke your owne: wherin is wheate & wine, whiche is both ful with fede, and planted with vineyardes. Let not Hezekias deceaue you whē he sayeth vnto you: the lord shall delyuer vs: & wyghte the Goddes Esa. 37. b of the Gentyles kepe euerye mans lande, frome the power of the kynge of the Assirians? Where is the God of Hemath and Aephad? Where is the GOD of Sepharaim? And who was able to defende Samaria oute of my hande? for whiche of all the Goddes of these landes hath delyuered theyr countrey oute of my power? Is the Lorde in dede able to delyuer Jerusalē from my hande? Vnto this Hezekias messaungers helde their tonges, and aunswered not one worde, for the kynge had charged them that they shoulde giue him none answere. So came Eliakim Helkias sonne the presydent, Sobna the scribe, and Joah Asphas sonne the secretary vnto Hezekia, with rent clothes, and tolde hym the wordes of Rabsaketh.

WHen Hezekias hearde that, he rente his clothes, & put on a sackecloth & went into the temple of the lorde but he sent Eliakim the presydent, Sobna the Scribe, with the eldest priestes clothed in sackecloth, vnto the prophet Esay the son of Amoz, & they sayd vnto him: thus sayth Hezekias: This is the daye of trouble, of plage & of blasphemye: for the children are come to the place of birthe: but there is no power to bring the forth. The lord thy god (no doubte) hath well considered the wordes of Rabsaketh, whō hys Lord the kyng of the Assirians hathe sente to defye and blaspheme the lyuynge God: Wyth suche wordes as the Lorde thy God hath hearde right wel. And therfore lyft vp thy prayer for the remnaunte, that yet are lefte. So the seruauntes of the kinge Hezekias came to Esay. And Esay gaue the this answere: Say thus vnto your Lorde, thus sayeth B the Lorde: Be not afrayed of the wordes that thou hast hearde wherwith the kynge of the Assirians seruauntes haue blasphemed me. & Beholde, I will cause a wonder to goe ouer him, assoone as he heareth the Esa. 31. b rumour, he shal goe againe into his countre: ther wyl I destroy him with the sworde in his owne lande. & Nowe when Rabsaketh retourned, he founde the kyng of Assiria layinge syege to Libnas, for he had vnderstande that he was departed from Lachis. For there came a rumour that Tharaka kynge of Ethiopia was come for to warre agaynste hym. And when the kynge of Assiria hearde that he sent other messaungers to kyng Hezekias with this commaundement: Speake thus to Hezekias kynge of Juda. Let not thy god dysceaue the, in whom thou hopest, and sayest: Jerusalē shall not be geuen into the handes of the king of Assiria. one pece in the fyre. I haue baked breade with the coales therof, I haue rosted flesh withall, and eaten it: shall I nowe of the reſidue make an abhominable ydoll, and fall downe before a rotten pece of woode? Thus he doeth but lose his laboure, and his heart, which is diſceaued, doeth turne him a syde: so that none of them can haue a fre conſcience to thinke: may not I erre? Conſider this (O Jacob, and Jſrael) for thou arte my ſeruaunte. I haue made the, that thou myghteſt ſerue me. O Jſraell, forget me not. * As for thyne offences, I haue dryuen them awaye lyke the cloudes, and thy ſinnes as the miſt. Turne the agayne vnto me, for I haue redemed thee. Be glad ye heauens, whom the lorde hathe made, for the lorde hath dealte graciouſlye with his people, let all that is here beneth vpon the earth be ioyful. Reioyce ye mountaines & woodes, withall the trees therof: for the Lorde hathe redemed Jacob, and wyl shewe his glorye vpon Jſraell. Thus ſayeth the Lorde thy redemer, euen he that fashioned the frome thy mothers wombe: * I the Lorde, doe all thynges my ſelfe alone. Concernynge Jeruſalem, he ſayeth: It ſhall be inhabited. And of the citeyes of Juda: They ſhall be buylded agayne, and I wyll repayre their decayed places: He ſayeth to the grounde: Be drye. And I will drye vp thy water floudes. He ſayeth of Cyrus. He is myne herdeman: ſo that he ſhal fulfil al thiges after my wyl. * Oute of the northe ſhal come a plage vpō all the dwellers of the lande. For lo, * I will cal al the kinredes of the kingdomes of the northe (ſayeth the Lorde:) And they ſhal come, and euerye one ſhal ſet his ſeate in the gates of Ieruſalem, and in all theyr walles rounde aboute, & in al the cyties of Juda. And thorow them ſhal I declare my iudgemēt, vpon al the wickednes of thoſe men that haue forſaken me: that haue burnt incenſe vnto ſtraūge goddes, & worſhipped the workes of their owne hādes. * And therefore girde vp thy loynes, aryſe and tell them all, that I gyue them commaundemente: Feare them not, leſte I deſtroye the before them. * For beholde, this daye do I make the a ſtrōge defended towne, an yron pyller, and a braſen wall againſt the hole lande, agaynſt the kynges and myghtie men of Juda, againſt the prieſtes and people of the lande. They ſhal fyght againſt the: but they ſhal not be hable to ouercome the, for I am with the, to deliuer the, ſayeth the Lorde.

MOreouer, the worde of the lord came vnto me, ſayinge: Go thy waye: crie in the eares of Ieruſalē, and ſaye: Thus ſaieth the lord: I remēbre the for the kindnes of thy youth, & because of thy tred faſte loue at the time of thy eſpouſynge, in that thou folowedſt me thorow the wildernesſe, in an vntilled lande. Iſrael was an halowed thyng vnto the lord, & ſo was his firſt frutes. * All they that deuoure Iſrael ſhal offēde: miſchefe ſhal cal vpō the ſayeth the lorde. Where haue we lefte the Lorde, that brought vs oute of the lāde of Egypt. * that led vs thorow the wildernes, thorow a deſerte and roughe lāde, thorow a drie & a deadly lāde: yea, a lande that no man had gone thorow, and where in no man had dwelt. * And whē I had brought you into a pleſaunte well buylded lande, that ye might emoye the frutes and all the commodities of the ſame: ye went & defyled my lande, and brought myne herytage to abhominacion. The prieſtes them ſelues ſayde not: Where is the Lorde? They that had the law in their hādes, knew me not; The ſhepherdes offended againſt me. A Comenly, * when a mā putteth awaie deu.24.a his wife, & she goeth frō him, & marrieth with another, thēthe question is: should he resorte vnto her anye more after that? Is not this felde then defyled & vn- Osee.ii.a. clene? * But as for the: thou haste played the Ezec.16.b harlot with many louers: yet tourne again to me, sayeth the Lord. And from that tyme forthe, they shall folowe no more the imagination of theyr owne frowarde heerte. Then those that be of the house of Juda shall go vnto the house of Israel: * and they shall come together out of the Northe, into the same lande that I haue geuen youre fathers. I haue chewed also how I toke the vp beynge but a chylde, and gaue the a pleasaunte lande for thyne heritage: yea, and a goodly hoost of the heythen, and howe I commaunded the, that thou shouldest * cal me father onely, & not to shrynke fro me. So do we also slepe in oure confusion, and shame couereth vs: * for we and oure fathers frō our youth vp vnto this day, haue synned against the lord our god, & haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lord our God.

O Israel, if thou wilt tourne the, then turne vnto me, saith the lorde. And if thou wilt put awaye thine abhominacīōs out of my sighte, thou shalte not be moued: * And shalt sweare: The lord liueth: in trueth, in equitie & righteousnesse & al people shalbe fortunable and ioyfull in him. For thus saith the lord, to al Juda and Jerusalem, plow youre lande, and sowe not among the thornes. * Be circūcised in the lorde, & cut awaye the foreskinne of youre hertes, al ye of Juda, and al the indwellers of Jerusalem: * that my indignacīō breake not out like fire, and kindle, so that no mā may quenche it, because of the wyckednesse of your imaginacions. * Declare in Juda & Jerusalem, crie ofte and speake: blowe the trompettes in the lande, crie that euery mā may heare, gather together, & saye: Gather you together, & we will go into the stronge cities. Set vp the token in Sion, spew you, and make no tarynge: * for I wyll bryng a greate plage, and a greate destruccyon from the northe. For the spoyler of the Gentiles is broken vp from his place, as a Lion out of his denne, that he maye make thy lande waste, and destroy the cityes, so that no man maye dwel therin. Wherfore, girde youre selues about with sacke clothe, mourne, and wepe, for the feareful wrathe of the Lorde is not withdrawen from vs. At the same tyme (sayeth the Lorde) the herte of the kynge and of the princes, shal be gone, the priestes shalbe astonished, and the Prophetes shalbe sore afrayed. Then sayde I: O Lorde God, hast thou then deceyued this people and Jerusalem, sayinge: * ye shall haue peace, and nowe the swearde goeth thorowe theyr lyues? Then shall it be sayde to the people & to Jerusalem: * a stronge wynde in the hye places of the wyldernesse commeth thorowe the waye of my people, but neyther to fan, nor to cleanse. After that, shal there come vnto me a stronge wynde from those places, and then wyll I also gyue sentence vpon them. For lo, he commeth downe lyke as a cloude, and his chariottes are lyke a stormye wynde: * Hys horsemen are swyfter then the Egle. Woo vnto vs, for we are destroyed. O Jerusalem, * washe thyne herte from wyckednesse, that thou mayest be helped. How longe shall thy noysome thoughtes remayne with the? For a voyce from Dan and from the hil of Ephraim speaketh out, and telleth of a destruccion. Remembre the heythen, & geue Jerusalem warnynge, and preache vnto her, that watchers one her, are cōmynge frō far countreys. They haue cried out against the cityes of Juda. And they haue beset her about in euerie place, lyke as the watchmen in the felde: * For they haue prouoked me to wrathe, sayeth the Lorde. * Thy wayes and thy thoughtes, haue brought the vnto thys, suche is thine owne wyckednesse and disobedience: and because it is a bitter thing, it hath stryken the to the hert. Ah my helpe, ah my helpe, (shalte thou crye) howe is my hert so sore? my hert panteth within me: I can not be styl, for I haue herde the cryinge of the trompettes, & peales of warre. They crye: murther vpon murther, the hole lande shal perysshe. Immediatlye, my tētes were destroyed destroyed, and my hangynges in the twinkelynge of an eye. Howe longe shall I se the tokens of warre, and heare the noyse of the trompettes? Neuertheleſſe, thys shall come vpon theym, * because my people is become foolyſche, & hath not knowen me. * They are the chyldren of foolyſchneſſe, and wythoute anye diſcretion. To do euyll, they haue wytte ynoughe: but to do well they haue no wyſedome. I haue loked vpon the earth, and se: it was waſte and voyde. I loked towarde heauen, and it hadde no chyne. I behelde the mountaynes, and loe, they trembled, and all the hylles were in a feare. I loked aboute me, and there was no bodye, and all the byrdes of the ayre were awaye. I marked well, and the plowed felde was become waſte: yea, all theyr cyties were broken downe at the preſence of the Lorde, and in dyſpleaſure of hys wrath. For thus hath the Lorde ſayde: The whole lande ſhalbe deſolate, yet will I not then haue done. And therefore, that the earth mourne, and the heauen be ſory aboue: for the thynge that I haue ſpoken to the Prophetes, and taken vpon me to do, ſhall not repent me, and I will not go from it.

The whole lande ſhall flye, for the noyſe of the horſemen and bowemen: they ſhall runne into dennes, into woddes, and clime vp the ſtonye rockes. All the cyties ſhall be voyde, and no man dwellynge therein.

What wylte thou nowe do, thou beyng deſtroyed? * For thoughe thou clotheſt thy ſelfe wyth ſcarlette, and decketſt the wyth golde: * thoughe thou paynteſt thy face wyth colours nowe, yet ſhalt thou trimme thy ſelfe in vayne. For thoſe that hitherto haue bene thy greate fauourers, ſhall abhorre the, and go aboute to ſlaye the. For I heare a noyſe, lyke as it were of a woman trauelyng, or one labourig of her firſt child, Euen the voice of the doughter Sion, that calleth out her armes, & ſwowneth, ſaying: Ah woo is me, how ſore vexed and faynt is my hert, for feare of the murtherers?

RUnne thorowe Jeruſalem, beholde and ſe Seke thorowe her ſtretes alſo wythin, if ye can fynde one man that doeth equal & ryght, or ſeketh for the truth, and I ſhal ſpare that cytie (ſaith the Lord.) * For though they cā ſay: the Lorde liueth, yet do they ſweare to diſceiue. Where as thou (O Lorde) loueſt onely vpon fayeth and trueth. Thou haſt ſcourged theym, but they toke no repentaunce: thou haſte corrected theim for amendemente, but they refuſed thy correction. They made theyr faces harder then a ſtone, and woulde not amende.

Therefore I thoughte in my ſelfe: peraduenture they are ſo ſymple and foolyſche, that they vnderſtande nothyng of the Lordes waye, and iudgementes of oure God. * Therefore, wyll I go vnto theyr heades and rulers, and talcke wyth theym: for they knowe the waye of the LORDE and the iudgementes of our God. But theſe (in like maner) haue broken the yocke, and burſte the bondes in ſondre. * Wherefore, a Lion out of the woode hathe hurt them, and a wolfe in the euenyng ſhall deſtroy them. The Leoparde doeth lye lurkyng by their cytyes, to teare in peces all theym that come therevnt. For theyr offences are multyplied, and theyr departynge awaye is encreaſed. Shoulde I then for all thys haue mercye vpon thee? Thy chyldren haue forſaken me, and * ſwoone by theym that are no goddes. And albeit, that I fedde them to the full, yet they fall to aduoutrye, and haunte harlottes houſes. In the deſyre of vncleanly luſte, they are become lyke the ſtoned hoſſe, * euerye manne neyeth at his neyghbours wyfe: Shoulde I not correcte this, ſayeth the Lorde? Shoulde I not be auenged of ſuche people, that is lyke vnto thys? Clyme vp vpon theyr walles, beate them downe, but deſtroy them not vtterly, take awaye theyr forcetrelles, by cauſe they are not the Lordes: For vnfaythfully hath the houſe of Iſraell and Juda forſaken me, ſaieth the Lorde: * They haue denyed the Lorde, and ſayde: it is not he that loketh vpon vs * Tuſh, there ſhall no miſſortune come vpon vs: we ſhall ſee neyther ſweard nor hunger. * As for the warnynge of the Prophetes, they take it but for winde, yea, there is none of theſe whiche wil tell them, that ſuch thinges ſhall happen vnto them. Wherefore, thus ſayeth the Lorde God of hoſtes: becauſe ye ſpeake ſuche wordes; beholde: * The wordes that are in thy mouth will I turne to fyre, & make the people to be woode, that the fire maye conſume them. * Loe, I wyll bryngе a people vpon you from farre, O houſe of Iſraell (ſayeth the Lorde) a myghtye people, an olde people, a people whoſe ſpeache thou knoweſt not, neyther vnderſtandeſt what they ſaye. Theyr arowes are ſodayne deathe: yea, they them ſelues be verye gyaunnes. This people ſhall eate vp thy frute, & thy meate, yea, they ſhall deuoure thy ſonnes and thy doughters, thy ſheepe and thy bullockes. They ſhall eate vp thy grapes, and fygges. As for thy ſtronge and well defenſed cyties, wherein thou vpoldeſt truſte, they ſhall bryngе to pouertye, and that throwe the ſweарde. * Neuertheleſſe I wyll not then haue done with you, ſayeth the Lorde.

me incense from Saba, and swete smelling Calamus from farre countreys: your burnt offerynges displease me, and I receyve not in your sacrifices. And therfore thus saieth the Lorde: beholde, I will make this people fal, and there shal fal from among them the father with the childe, one neyghbour shal perysshe wyth another. Thus saieth the Lord. * Beholde, there shal come a people from the North, & a great people shall aryse from the endes of the earth, with bowes & with dartes shal they be weapened. Jer. 1.c and. b.c Habac. i. c. They are a rough & fearce people, & an unmerciful people, their voice roreth lyke the sea, they ryde vpon horses wel appointed to the battaile against the, O doughter Sion. The crie of the have we heard. Oure armes are feble, heuinesse and sorow is come vpō vs, as vpon a woman travelynge with childe. Let no man go forthe in to the felde, let no man come vpō the hie streete: for the swearde and feare of the enemy is on euery syde. Wherfore, girde a sacke clothe about the (O thou doughter of my people) sprynkle thy selfe with asshes, * mourne and wepe bitterly as vpō thy only beloued sone. For the destroyer shal sodenly fal vpō vs. Thee have I set for a stronge tower (o thou prophete) and a well fensed wall amonge my people, to seke out and to trye their waies. * For they are al stubburne apostates, and fallen away, walkynge dysceytfully, they are cleane drasse and yron, for they hurte and destroye euery man. The bellous are brente in the fyre, the leade is not molten, the melter melteth in vayne, for the euel is not taken awaye from them. ¶ The. vii. Chapter.

These are the wordes that God spake vnto Jeremie: saying. * Stande vnder the gate of the Lordes house, and crie out these wordes there with a loude voyce, and say: Heare the worde of the Lord all ye of Juda, that go in at this dore, to worship the Lorde. Thus saieth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israell, * Amende your wayes and your counceils, and I wil let you dwel in this place. Trust not in false lyinge wordes, saynge: here is the temple of the Lorde, here is the temple of the Lorde, here is the temple of the Lorde. But rather in dede amende your wayes and counceils, * and iudge right betwyxte a man and his neyghbour: oppresse not the straunger, the fatherles, and the widdow: shede not innocēt bloud in this place: cleue not to straunge goddes to youre owne destruccion: then will I let you dwell in this place: yea, in the lande that I gaue afore tyme vnto your fathers for euer. But take hede: ye trust in lyinge tales, that begyle you, and do you no good. For why? ye have stollen, murthered, committed aduoutrie, and periurye. When ye have offered vnto Baal, folowinge straunge & unknowen goddes, shall ye be punished? & yet then come ye, & stād before me in this house, * which hath my name geuen vnto it? & say: Truly, we are delolued, saynge, thoughe we have done al these abhominacions. * What? thinke you this house that beareth my name, is a denne of theues? * And yet I se what you thinche, saieth the Lorde. Go to my place in Silo, * where vnto I gaue my name a fore tyme, and loke wel what I did to the same place for the wyckednes of my people of Israel. And nowe, thoughe ye have done al these dedes (saieth the Lorde) and I my selfe rose vp euer by tymes to warne you, & to cōmen with you, yet would ye not heare me. * I called, ye would not answere. Therfore, * euē as I have done vnto Silo, so wil I do to this house, that my name is geuen vnto (and that ye put your trust in) yea, vnto the place that I have geuē to you, and your fathers. And I shall thruste you out of my sight, * as I have cast out al your brethrē the whole sede of Ephraim. Therfore, thou shalte not praye for this people, thou shalte nether gene thankes, nor byd prayer for them: thou shalte make no intercession to me for them, for in no wyse wyl I heare the. Sest thou not what they do in the cityes of Juda, and in the stretes of Jerusalē? * The children gather stickes, the fathers kyndle the fire, the women knede the doughe, to bake cakes for the quene of heauen. They poure out drinckofferynges vnto straunge goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrathe. Howbeit they hurt not me (saieth the lorde) but rather confounde, and shame them selues. And therfore thus saieth the Lorde God: beholde, my wrathe and my indignacio shalbe poured out vpō this place, vpon men & catel, vpō the trees of the felde and frute of the lande, and it shall burne so that no man may quēch it. Thus saieth the Lorde of Hostes, the GOD of Israell: Heape vp youre * burnte offerynges with youre sacrifyces, and eate the flesh. * For when I brought youre fathers oute of Egypte, I spake no worde vnto them of burnte offringes and sacrifyces: but this I commaunded them, saynge: * herken and obeye my voyce, and I shalbe your God, and ye shal be my people: so that ye walcke in al the wayes, whiche I have cōmaūded you, that ye maye prospere. * But they were Jer. 44. a Jer. 17. b and. 26. a Esai. i. c Jere. 26. c Ero. 22. f Zach. 8. a Leu. 29 g Job. 23. a Esa. 1. a * deu. 5. a Esa. 43. a Ex. 19. a. They shal nether be gathered together nor buried, but shal lye as donge vpō the erth, to theyr shame & defylinge. * And all they Luc.23.a that remayne of thys wycked generacyon, shall desyre rather to dye the to lyue, whersoeuer they remayne, and where as I scatred them, sayeth the Lorde of hoostes. Thys shalt thou say vnto them also. Thus sayeth B the Lorde. Wo men fall so, that they aryse not by agayne? Or ye Israell repente, wyll not God turne againe to them? Wherefore then is thys people, and Jerusalem gone so farre backe, that they turne not agayne? They are euer the lōger the more obstinat, and wyll not be conuerted. * For I haue Eze. xx.f loked, and consydred: but there is no man that speaketh a good word: there is no man that taketh repentaunce for his synne, that will so much as say: wherfore haue I done thys? But euery mā (as soone as he is turned backe) runneth forth styll, lyke a wilde horse in a battaile. The Storke in the ayer knoweth hys appoynted tyme, the Turtle C Esai.i.a. boye, the Swalowe and the Crane, consydre the tyme of theyr trauayle, * but my people wyll not knowe the tyme of the punishment of the Lorde. Howe dare ye saye then, we are wyse, we haue the lawe of the Lorde amonge vs? True ye in dayne hath he prepared hys pēne, and daynly haue the wryters wrytten it, therfore shall the wise be confounded, they shalbe afrayed and taken: for lo, * they haue cast oute the worde Deut. 4.a of the Lorde: what wysedome can then be psa. xiv.a amonge them? Wherfore, I wyl geue their wyues vnto Aleauntes, and their feldes to D destroyers. * For from the lowest vnto the Eze.vii.b hyest, they folowe all thyr lucre: and frō the Prophete vnto the Prieste, they deale all with lyes. * Neuertheles, they heale Ezay 56.c the hurte of my people very slenderlye, say- Jere.vi.b inge: peace, peace, where there is no peace Eze.13.b at all. Fye for shame, howe abhominable thynges do they? and yet they be not ashamed: yea, they knowe of no shame.

* Wherefore, in the tyme of theyr vysitacion, they shal fal among the deade bodies, Jere.7.b and be ouerthrowen sayeth the LORDE. Moreouer, I wyll consume them in dede (sayeth the Lorde) so that there shall not be one grape vpō the vine, nether one figge E vpon the frygge tree, and the leanes shalbe plucte of. And the thynge that I haue geuen them shalbe taken frō them: why prolonge we the tyme? Let vs gather oure selues togethre, and go vnto the strong cytie, there shall we be in rest.

For the Lorde our God hath put vs to sylence, & geuen vs water mixte with gall to Jer. 14.b drinke: because we haue synned agaynste hym. * We loked for peace, and we fare not F the better, wayted for the time of healthy, & lo, here is nothyng but trouble. The noise of of hys hoostes is heard frome man, the whole lande is afrayed at the reuenge of hys stronge hoostes: for they are come in: and haue deuoured the lande, with al that is in it: the cytyes, and those that dwell therein. * Moreouer, I will sende Cockatrices and serpentes amonge you (whyche will not be charmed) and they shall bite you, sayeth the Lorde. I would haue had comfort agaynst sorowe: but sorowe is come vpon me, and heuynesse vexeth my hearte: for loe, the voyce of the cryenge of my people is heard for feare of theym, that come seome a farre countrey. Is not the Lorde in Syon? Is not the kyng in her? Wherfore then haue they grened me (shall the Lorde say) with their ymages, and foolish straūge fashions of a foreyne god? The haruest is gone, the Sommer hathe an ende, and we are not holped. I am sore vexed, because of the hurte of my people. I am heuye & abashed, is there no triacle at Gilead? Is there no physicio there? Why the is not the helth of my people recouered?

A O Who * wyl gene my heade water ynough, and a wel of teares for mine eyes: that I may wepe night & day: for the slaughter of my people? Would God, that I had a cotage seme where farre from folck, that I might leaue my people, and go frō them: for they be all aduouterers and a shyncking sorte. They bende their tonges like bowes, to shote out lies. They ware stronge vpon earth. As for the trueth, they may nothyng away with al in the worlde. Therefore, thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes: Beholde, I will melte them, and trye theym, for what shoulde I elles do to my people? * Their tonges are lyke sharpe arowes, to speake deceate. With their mouthe they speake peaceably to their neyghboure, but prpuely they laye wayte for hym. * Shoulde I not punyshe them for these thynges, sayeth the Lorde? ¶ The. xiii. Chapter.

A Thus sayeth the Lord vnto me: go thy way, and get the a linnen bzeche, and gyrde it about thy loynes, and let it not be wet. Then I got me a bzeche, accordynge to the commaundement of the Lord, and put it about my loynes. After this the seconde tyme, the Lorde spake vnto me agayne. Take the bzeche that thou hast prepared, & put about the, and get the vp; and go vnto Euphrates, and hide it in a hole of the roche. So wente I, and hyd it at Euphrates, as the Lorde commaunded me.
And it happened longe after this, that the Lorde spake vnto me. Vp, and get the to Euphrates, and fet the bzeche from thence: which I cōmaunded the to hide there. The vessell that the Potter made of clay, brake amonge his handes: So he began a newe, and made another vessel accordinge to his mind. Then said the Lord thus vnto me. + Maye not I do with you as this Potter doeth, O ye house of Israell sayeth the Lorde? Beholde, ye house of Israell, ye are in my hande, euen as the claye in the Potters hande. + When I take in hande to roote oute, to destroye, or to waste away anye people or kyngdome: yf that people (against whom I haue thus bended) conuerte frō their wickednes: I repent of the plage, that I deuised to bring vpon the. + Againe, when I take in hande, to builde, or to plāte a people or a kyngdome: if the same people do euell before me, and heare not my boyce: I repent of the good, that I deuysed to do for them: Speake now therefore vnto whole Juda: and to theym that dwell at Jerusalem. because of all the houses, in whose parlers they dyd sacrifyce vnto all the Hoost of whome I neuer sent, nor cõmaunded the.

They shall do this people greate harme, sayeth the Lorde. If this people, ether anye prophet or priest aske the, and saye: what is the burthen of the Lorde? Thou shalt saye vnto them, what burthen? Therfore wyl I caste you fro me, (sayeth the Lorde) because ye youre selues are a (burthen.) And the prophete, priest or people that vseth this terme (the burthen of the Lord) him wyll I visit, and his house also. But thus shall ye saye, euery one to another, and euery man to his brother. What an-swere hathe the Lorde geuen? or what is the Lordes commaundemente? And as for the burthen of the Lorde, ye shall speake no more of it: for euery mans owne worde is his burthen because ye haue altered the wordes of the lyuynge GOD, the Lorde of Hostes oure God. Thus shall euerye man saye to the Prophetes: what answere hath the Lorde geuen the? Or what sayeth the Lorde? And not once to name the burthen of the Lorde. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde. For so muche as ye haue vsed this terme (the burthen of the Lord) where as I not wythstandynge sent vnto you, & forbad you to speake of the Lordes burthen. Be-holde therfore, I wyl repute you as a burthen, and wil cast you oute of my presence: yea, & the citye also, that I gaue you and youre fathers: and wyll bringe you to an euerlastinge cõfusion, & into such a shame, as shal neuer be forgotten.

¶ The. xxiiij. Chapter.

THe lord shewed me a vision: Behold, there stode two maundes of figges before the temple of the Lord, after that * Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon had led awaye captyue Jechonias the sonne of Jehoakim kynge of Juda, the nughty men also of Juda, with the worcke maisters, and connynge men of Jerusalem, vnto Babilõ.
In the one maunde were very good figges, euẽ lyke as those that be fyrste rype. In the other maunde were verye naughty fygges, whiche myght not be eaten, they were so euell. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: what seyst thou Jeremye? I sayde * fygges, wherof some be verye good, and some so euell, that no man maye eate them. Then came the worde of the LORDE vnto me, after this maner: Thus saieth the Lorde the God of Israel: lyke as thou knowest the good fygges, so shall I knowe the men led awaye, whome I haue sent oute of thys place into the lande of the Caldees, for their profyte: and I wil set myne eyes vpõ them for the beste, for I wyll bringe them agayne into this lande: I will builde them vp, & not breake them downe: I wil plante them, and not rote them out. * And I wyl geue them an herte, to knowe howe that I am the Lorde. They shalbe my people, and I wyl be their God, for they shall returne vnto me with their whole herte. * And lyke as thou knowest the naughtie figges, whiche maye not be eaten, they are so euel: Euen so wil I (sayeth the Lorde) let Zede-kias the kynge of Juda, (ye and all hys princes, and the residue of Jerusalem, that remayne ouer in this lande, and them also that dwell in Egipte) to be vexed and pla-ged in all kyngdomes and landes. And wil make them to be a * reproffe, a common by worde, a laughynge stocke and shame, in all the places, where I shal scatre them.
I wil sende the swearde, honger and pestilence amonge them, vntyl I haue cleane consumed them oute of the lande, that I gaue vnto them and their fathers.

¶ The. xxv. Chapter.

A Sermon that was geuen vnto Jere my, vpon al the people of Juda. In the fourth yere of Jehoakim the son of Josias kig of Juda that was in the fyrste yeare of Nabuchodonosor king of Babilõ.
Whiche sermon, Jeremy the prophet made vnto all the people of Juda, and to all the inhabitours of Jerusalem, on this maner.
From the thirtene yere of Josias the sonne of Amon kynge of Juda, vnto this presente daie (that is euẽ. xxiii. yere) the word of the lord hath bene cõmitted vnto me. * And so I haue spoken to you, I haue risen by ear-lye, I haue geuen you warning in season, but ye would not heare me. * Thoughe the lord hath sent his seruauntes, al the prophetes vnto you in season. Yet would ye not obey, ye wouldenot enclyne youre eares to heare. He said: * turne again euery mã fro his euel waie, & frõ your wicked ymaginations, and so shall ye dwell for euer in the lande, that the Lorde promysed you and your forefathers. And go not after straũge goddes, serue thẽ not, worshyp thẽ not, & anger me not wyth the worckes of youre handes: then wyll not I punysshe you.
Neuertheles, ye would not heare me (saieth the Lorde:) but haue defyed me wyth the worckes of youre handes, to youre owne prophecyed of all people: so that they also Job.34 b shall be subdued vnto dyuerse nacions and great kynges: *for I wyl recompense thē, therof, they maye be mad, and out of theyr wittes, when the swearde commeth, that I wyll sende amonge them. Then toke I the cuppe from the Lordes hande, and made all people to drincke therof, vnto whome the Lorde had sent me. But fyrste, the citie of Jerusalem, and all the cytyes of Juda, theyr kynges and prynces, to make them desolate, waste, dispised, and hyssed at, and cursed, accordynge as it is come to passe E this daye. Yea, and Pharao the kynge of Egypte, hys seruauntes, hys prynces and hys people al together, one with another and all kynges of the lande of Hus, all kynges of the Philystines lande, Ascalon, Azah, Accaron, & the remnaunte of Azoot, the Edomites, the Moabytes and the Am-monytes, al the kynges of Tirus & Sidō: the kynges of the Iles that are beyonde the sea: Dedan, Thema, Buz and all them that dwell in the vttermoste partes of the worlde: al the kinges of Araby & (generally) al the kinges that dwell in the deserte: all the kinges of Zamri, al the kinges of Elā, al the kynges of the Medees, al the kinges towarde the North, whether they be farre or nye, euery one against hys neyghbours: yea, and all the kyngedomes that are vpon the whole earthe. The kynge of Sezach sayde he, shal drincke wyth them also.

Therfore saye thou vnto thō: This is the F commaundemente of the Lorde of hoostes, the God of Israell: Drincke and be dronc-ken, spewe and fall, that ye neuer ryse, and that thorowe the swearde, whyche I wyll sende amonge you. But yf they wyl not receaue the cuppe of thy hande, and drincke it, then tell them: Thus doth the Lorde of hoostes threate you: drincke it ye shall, and Jer.49.b that shortely. For lo, *I begynne to plage Ezec.9.b the cytye, that my name is geuen vnto: 1.Pet.4.a thincke ye then that I wyll leaue you vnpunished? ye shal not go quyte, for why? I call for a swearde vpon all the inhabitours of the earthe, sayeth the Lorde of hoostes.
Therefore, tel them all these wordes and Joel.4.c. saye vnto them. * The Lorde shal crye frō Amo.1.b. aboue, and let hys voyce be herde from hys holy habitacion. With a greate noyse shall he crie frō his courte regall. He shall gene a greate voyce (lyke the grape gatherers) and the sounde therof shalbe herde vnto the endes of the worlde. For the Lorde hath a iudgemente to gene vpon all people, & wyll holde his courte of iustyce with al flesche, & punysche the vngodly, saieth the Lord. For thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes: * Be- G holde, a myserable plage shal go from one Jer.xxxb people to another, & a greate stormie water shall aryse from al the endes of the earth.
And the same daye shall the Lord him selfe slaye them, from one ende of the earthe to another. There shall no mone be made for any of thē, none gathered vp, none buried but shall lye as dunge vpon the grounde.
Mourne (O ye shepherdes) & crie: sprinkle youre selues with ashes, O ye Rammes of the flocke: for the tyme of youre slaughter is fulfylled, that ye shal slaye one another, and ye shalbe scattered, & ye shall fall lyke pl. 142.a beastes cunnyngly made for pleasure. * The shepherdes shall haue no waye to flie, and the rammes of the flocke shall not escape.
Then shall the shepherdes crye horribly and the rammes of the flocke shal mourne: for the Lorde hath consumed their pasture, and their beste feldes lye deade because of the horrible wrath of the Lord. They haue forsaken their foldes lyke as a Lyon: For theyr lande is wast, because of his furious cruelte, and of his fearful indignacion.

¶ The.xxbiii. Chapter.

BVt in the fourth yeare of the raygne A of Zedekiah kinge of Juda in the.v. moneth, it happened that Hananiah the ſonne of Azur the prophete of Gibeon ſpake to me in the houſe of the Lozd, in the preſence of the prieſtes, & of al the people, & ſayde: Thus ſayeth the Lozd of hoſtes, the God of Iſraell: I haue bzoken the yoke of the king of Babilon, * and after two yere, wyll I bzinge agayne into thys place: Jer.27.d chayne from the prophete Jeremies necke, and bzake it, and with that ſayde Hana-niah, that al the people might heare. Thus hath hathe the Lorde spoken: Euen so wyll I breake the yoke of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylō, from the necke of all nacyons: yea, and that wythin thys two yeare. And so the Prophete Jeremye wente his waye.

Nowe after that Hananiah the Prophete hadde taken the chayne from the Prophete Jeremies necke, and broken it: The worde of the Lorde came vnto the Prophete Jeremye, saying: So, and tell Hananiah these wordes. Thus sayeth the Lord: Thou hast broken the chayne of woode: but in steade of wood thou shalt make chaynes of yron.

D For thus sayeth the Lorde of Hoostes the God of Israell: I wyll put a yocke of yron vpon the necke of all thys people, that they maye serue Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon: yea, and so shall they do. And I wyll gene hym the beastes in the felde.

Then sayde the prophete Jeremy vnto the prophet Hananiah: * Heare me Hananiah: The Lord hath not sent the, but thou bringest thys people into a false belefe. And therefore thus sayeth the Lorde: beholde: I wyll sende the oute of the lande, and within a yeare thou shalte dye, because thou haste falsely spoken agaynste the Lorde. So Hananiah the prophet dyed the same yeare in the seuenth moneth.

THese are the wordes of the boke, that Jeremie the prophet sent frō Jerusalē vnto the prisoners, the senatours, prestes, prophetes, and al the people, whō Nabuchodonosor had led from Jerusalē vnto Babylon: after the tyme that kyng Jechoniah and hys quene, his chāberlaynes, the princes of Juda and Jerusalē, the worcke-masters of Jerusalem were departed thyther. Whyche booke Elasah the sonne of Saphan, and Gamariah the sonne of Helkiah dyd beare, whome Zedekiah the kyng of Juda sent vnto Babilon, to Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon: these were the wordes of Jeremies boke. Thus hathe

For why * they preache you lyes in my name, and I haue not sent them, sayeth the Lorde. But thus sayeth the Lorde: * When ye haue fulfylled.lxx. yeares at Babylon, I wyll bringe you home, and of myne owne goodnesse I will carye you hyther agayne into thys place. For I knowe what I haue deuysed for you, sayeth the Lord. My thoughtes are to geue you peace, and not trouble (whyche I gyue you alreadye,) and that ye myghte haue hope agayne. * Ye shall crye vnto me, ye shall go and call vpō me, and I wyll heare you. * Ye shall seke me, and finde me. yea, yf so be that ye seke me with your whole hert, I will be founde of you, sayeth the Lorde, and wyll delyuer you oute of prysone, and gather you together agayne oute of all places, wherein I haue scattered you, sayeth the Lorde: and wyll bryng you agayne to the same place, from whence I caused you to be caryed away captyue. But where as ye saye, that God hath rayseb you vp prophetes at Babylon. Thus hath the Lorde spoken to the kynge that sitteth in the throne of Dauid, and to all the people that dwell in thys Cite, youre brethren * that are not gone with you into captyuitye. Thus (I saye) speaketh the Lorde of Hoostes. Beholde, * I wyll sende a swearde, hunger, and pestylence vpon them: and wyll make them lyke vnthryfty frygges, that maye not be eaten for vnthryftynesse. And I wyll persecute them with the swerd, with hunger, and pestylence. I wil delyuer them vp to be vexed of all kyngdomes, to be cursed, abhorred, laughed to scorne, and put to confusyon of all the people, amonge whome I haue scatred them: and that because they haue not bene obedyent vnto my cōmaundementes, sayeth the Lorde, whiche I sent vnto them by my seruauntes, the prophetes. * I stode vp early, and sent vnto them: but they wold not heare, sayeth the Lorde: Heare therfore the worde of the LORDE, all ye prysoners, whom I sent from Jerusalem vnto Babylon. Thus hath the Lorde of Hoostes the GOD of Israell spoken of Ahab, the sonne of Colaiah, and of Zedekyah the sonne of Maasiah, whyche prophecye lyes vnto you, in my name. Beholde, I wyl delyuer them into the hande of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, that he maye slaye theym before your eyes. And all the prysoners of Juda, that are in Babylon, shal take vp thys terme of cursynge, and saye: Nowe God do vnto thee, as he dyd vnto Zedekiah and Ahab, whom the king of Babylon rosted in the fire, because they

but also preached lyenge woordes in my name, which I haue not commaunded them.
This I testifie, and assure, saith the Lord.
But as for Semeiah, the Nehelamite, thou shalte speake vnto him. Thus saieth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israell: Because thou haste sealed letters vnder thy name, vnto all the people that is at Jes rusalem, and to Sophoniah, the sonne of Maasiah the priest: yea, and sent theym to all the Priestes: wherein thou writest thus vnto him: The Lorde hath ordeyned chiefe in the house of the Lorde, aboue all Prophetes, and Preachers, and that thou mightest set them vpon the pyllorye, or in the stockes. Howe happeneth it then, that thou haste not reproued Jeremye of Ana-dure: that we shoulde buylde vs houses to dwel therin: and to plante vs gardes, that we maye enioye the frutes therof. Whiche letter Sophoniah the priestе redde, and let G Jeremye the prophete heare it. Then came the woorde of the Lorde vnto Jeremye, sayinge: Sende word to al them that be in captiuitie, on this maner: Thus hath the Jer.28.c Lord spoken concerning Semeiah the Ne-helamite: * Because that Semeiah hath prophecyed vnto you without my commyt sion, & brought you into a false hope, therfore thus the Lord doeth certifie you: Be-holde, I wyll visit Semeiah the Nehela-mite and his sede: so that none of his shall remayne amonge thys people, and none of them shall se the good, that I wyll do for this people, saieth the Lorde. For he hathe preached falsely of the Lorde,

Jer.xxx.c THese are the woordes, that the Lorde sheweth vnto Jeremy, saying: Thus saith the Lord God of Israell: * write vp diligentlye all the woordes, that I haue spoke vnto the, in a boke. For lo, the tyme cometh, saieth the Lord, that I wil bryng agayne the prisoners of my people of Israell & Juda, saieth the Lorde. For I will restore the vnto the land that I gaue to their fathers, & they shal haue in it possessiō. Againe, these woordes spake the Lord, cōcer-ning Israel & Juda: Thus saith the Lord: We haue heard a terrible crie, feare & dys-quietnesse. For what els doth this signifie that I se? Shamelye that all stronge men Alas for thys daye, whiche is so dreadfull B that none maye be lykened vnto it: and alas for the time of Jacobs trouble, frome the whiche he shal yet be delyuered. For in that day, saith the Lord of hoostes, I wyll take this yoke from of thy necke, & breake thy bondes: And straungers shall no more serue hym: but they shall do seruyce vnto Ezr.34.d God theyr Lorde, and to * Dauid theyr kynge, whome I wyl rayse vp vnto them.

* And as for thee, O my seruaunte Jacob, Jer.46.g feare not saieth the Lorde, & be not afraied, O Israel. For lo: I will helpe the also from farre, and thy sede from the lande of theyr captiuitie. And Jacob shall turne agayne, he shall be in rest, and haue a prosperous lyfe, and no man shall make hym afrayed.
For I am with thee, to helpe the (sayth the Lorde. * And thoughe I shall destroye all Amo.ix.b

There is no man to medle wyth thy cause, or to laye plaster vpon thee, or to bynde vp

All thy louers haue forgotten thee, & care C cruel stroke, & chastened the roughly: and that for the multytude of thy mysdedes:

thole that robbe the, wil I make also to be robbed. For I will geue the thy healeth a-gayne, & make thy woundes whole, (sayeth the Lorde: because they reuiled thee, as one cast away and despised. Spon (saide they) thus (sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, * I wyll D

The cytye shall be buylded in her olde estate, and the houses shall haue their right

I wyll multiplye them, and they shall not be fewe. I shal endue them wyth honoure, neth ouer his herte to come vnto me, sayth the lorde? * Ye shalbe my people also, & I wil Jer. 13.b be youre God. e Beholde: on the other syde and.24.b shal the wrath of the Lord breake out: as a xxxi.f. stormie water, as a mighty whirle wynde shall not leaue of, vntyll he haue done, and Jer. 23.c. performed the entẽ of his hert, * which in the latter dates ye shal vnderstande. At the same time, saieth the lord, shal I be the god of all the generations of Jsrael, & they shal be my people.

¶ The. xxxi. Chapter.

A Thus sayeth the lord: * The people of Num. 13.c. Jsrael, whiche escaped in the wyldernesse, frõ the swerde, founde grace to John.6 b come into their rest. Euen so shal the Lord nowe also appere vnto me frõ far, & say: * I lone the with an euerlastinge lone, therfore by my mercye I haue drawen the to me. I wil repaire the againe, O thou doughter of Jsrael, that thou mayest be faste and sure.
Thou shalte take thy tabrets againe, & go forth with thẽ, that leade the daunce. Thou B shalt plant vines againe vpon the hyls of Samaria, & the grape gatherers shal plãt, & commonly eate of it. For the dayes shall esai. ii. a come when the watchmen vpõ the mounte of Ephraim shall crye, * aryse, lette vs go vp vnto Sion, to oure Lorde God, for thus sayeth the Lorde: Reioyce with gladnesse because of Jacob: crye vnto the heade of the Gẽtiles: speake out, singe & say: O lord saue thy people, the remnaunte of Jsraell, & make thẽ whole. Beholde, I wyl bringe thẽ againe frõ out of the north lande, & gather thẽ from the endes of the world, with the blynde, and lame, that are amonge thẽ, with the wemen that be great with childe, & suche as be also deliuered: & the cõpanye of thẽ that come again shalbe great. They shall come weppynge, & with mercyful pitie wyl I bringe thẽ hither again. I will leade them to the ryuers of water in a strayghte Deu.32.a. waye, where they shall not stumble. * For & Ge.47 D I am Jsraels father, & e Ephraim, is my first borne. Heare the worde of the Lorde, O ye Gentyles, preache in the yles, that lye farre of, and saye: he that hathe scatred Js-rael, shal gether him together agayne, and kepe him as a shepherd doth his flocke.
For the Lorde hathe redemed Jacob, and rid him from the hande of the violente, and they shall come, and reioyse vpon the hyll of Sion, and shall haue plenteousnesse of goodes, whiche the Lorde shal gene them.
Namely: wheate, wyne: oyle, yonge shepe, and calues. And their conscience shalbe as C a wel watred garden, for they shal nomore be hungerye. Then shall the mayde reioyce in the daunce: yea, both yonge and olde toi-kes. For I wyll turne their sorowe into gladnesse, and wil cõforte them from their sorowes: and make them ioyfull. I wyll powre plenteousnesse vpon the hearetes of the prestes, and my people shalbe satysfied wyth my goodnes sayeth the Lorde.
Jere. iii.c Thus sayeth the Lord: * The voyce of he-matth.ii.a uynesse, weppynge, and lamentacyon was hearde on hye: euen of Rachel mournynge for her chyldren, and wouldе not be conforted, because they were away. But nowe saieth the Lorde, leaue of frõ weppynge and crepinge, withholde thine eyes frõ teares, for thy labour shalbe rewarded: saith the lord.
And they shal come agayne out of the lãde of their enemyes: yea, euẽ thy posterite shal haue consolaciõ in this, saieth the lord, that thy children shall come againe into theyr owne lande. Moreouer, I heare Ephraim, that was led away captiue, complayne on Eze.xx.c this maner. * O lord, thou hast correct me, & thy chastenynge haue I receaued, as an Tren.v.c vntamed calfe. e Conuerte thou me, and I Zach.i.a shalbe conuerted: for thou art my lord god: Yea, allone as thou turnest me, I shall re-tourne my selfe, and when I vnderstande, I shall smyte vpon my thighe. For verely I haue commytted shamefull thinges. For D I haue borne the reprofe and confusion of gen.48.b my youth. Vpon this cõplaunte, I thought thus by my selfe: * is not Ephraim my dere sonne? Is he not the chylde, with whõ I haue had all my myrthe and pastyme?
For sence the tyme that I fyrste commened wyth hym, I haue hym euer in remembraunce: therfore, my herte herte dyuerth me vnto hym, gladlye, and louyngly wil haue mercye vpon hym: sayeth the Lorde.
Set the watchmen, prouyde teachers for the: set thyne hearte vpon the ryght waye, that thou shouldest walke, and turne a-gayne. O thou doughter of Jsraell, turne E agayne to the cityes of thyne. Howe longe wylt thou go astraye, O thou vnkynge doughter? For the Lorde wyll worche a newe thynge vpon earthe. A woman shall compasse a man. For thus sayeth the Lord of hoostes the God of Jsraell: Jt wyll come thereto, that when I haue brought Juda oute of captyuite, these wordes shal be heard in the lande, and in hys cityes.

Esa.42.a The Lorde, whiche is the * fayre brydegrome of rightcousnes, make thee fruite-full, O thou holy hyl. And there shal dwell Juda, and all her cities, the shepheardes, mat.b.a. and husbandemen. For I * shall fede the and.11.c hongrye soule, & refreshe all faynte heartes. When I heard this, I came agayne to my selfe, I mused, lyke as I had bene waked oute of a swete slepe. Beholde, sayth the Lord: the dayes come that I wyl sowe the house of Israell, and the house of deu.28.g Juda, with men and wyth catell. * Yea, it Jer.32.c shal come therto, that lyke as I have gone Zacy.8.c about in tymes passe to rote them oute, to scatre them, to breake them doune, to de-stroye them, and chasten them. Euen so wil I also goe diligently about, to buyld them & bp agayne, and to plante them, sayeth the Ezc.18.a Lorde: * Then shall it no mooze be sayde, the fathers have eaten a sower grape, and the childres teeth are set an edge: for euery one shal dye for his owne misdede, so that Hebr.8.b who so eateth a sower grape, hys teth shall be set on edge. * Beholde, the dayes come, sayeth the Lorde, that I wyl make a newe conenaunt with the house of Israell, and with the house of Juda: Not after the couenaunt that I made with their fathers, when I toke them by the hande, and ledde them oute of the lande of Egypte. Whyche couenaunt they brake: yea, euen whē I, as Heb.10.b an husband had rule ouer them, sayeth the Lorde. * But this shalbe the couenaunte Esa.51.b that I wyl make with the house of Israel, after those dayes, sayeth the Lord: * I will plante my lawe in the inwarde partes of Jer.24.b them, and wryte it in their heartes, * and and.30.b wylbe their god, and they shall be my peo-F ple. And from thence forthe, shall no man teache his neyghboure or his brother, and saye: knowe the Lorde. But they shall all knowe me from the lowest vnto the hyest, sayeth the Lorde. For I wyll forgeue their misededes, and wyll neuer remembre theyr synnes anye moze. Thus sayeth the Lorde Gen.1.b. whiche gaue the * sunne to be a lyghte for the daye, and the moone & starres to shine in the night, which moueth the sea, so that the floudes therof waxe fearce: Hys name is the Lorde of hoostes. Lyke as thys or dinaunce shall neuer be taken oute of my G syght, sayeth the Lorde: So shall the sede of Israel neuer ceasse, but alwaye be a people before me. Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde: lyke as the heauen aboue cannot be measured, and as the foundacions of the Ro.11.a. earth beneth, may not be sought out. * So wil I also not caste oute the whole sede of Israell, for that they haue commyted, sayeth the Lorde: beholde, the dayes come, sayeth the Lorde: that the citie of the lorde shalbe enlarged fromne the * towre of Hananell, vnto the gate of the corner walle.
From thēce shal the right measure be take before her vnto the hyll toppe of * Gareb, and shall come aboute Gaath, & the whole valley of the dead carkasses, & of the ashes, and all the feldes vnto the brooke of Cedron: and vnto the corner of the horsegate towarde the east, where as the sanctuarye of the Lorde also shalbe sette. And when it is nowe buylded, and sette vp of hys fashion, it shall neuer be broken nor caste doune any moze.

¶ The.xxxii Chapter.

THese wordes spake the lorde vnto Jeremy, in the.x. yere of Zedekiah kyng of Juda, which was the.xviii. yere of Nabuchodonosor, what time as the kig of Babilons hoost laid sege vnto Jerusalē: but Jeremy the prophet lay bounde in the court of the prison, which was in the king of Judas house: wher Zedekiah the king of Juda caused him to be layde, because he had pro-phecied of this maner, thus sayth the lord:
* Beholde, I wyll deliuer thys cytye into the handes of the kyng of Babilon, whiche shal take it. As for Zedekiah the kynge of Juda: he shall not be able to escape the Chaldees: but surely he shall come into the handes of the kynge of Babylon, whyche shal speake with him, mouth to mouthe: & one of them shal looke another in the face.
And Zedekiah shalbe caried vnto Babilō, and there shal he be, vntyl the tyme that I visite him, sayeth the Lorde: But yf thou takest in hande to fight agaynst the Chaldees, thou shalt not prosper. And Jeremye said: thus hath the Lord spoken vnto me.
Behold, Hananeell the sonne of Selum thyne vncles sonne, shal come vnto thee, & require the to redeme the lande that lyeth in Anathoth vnto thy selfe: * for by reason of kynred it is thy right to redeme it, and to bye it out. And Hananeell mine vncles sonne, came to me in the court of the prison, according to the worde of the Lorde, and sayde vnto me: bye my lande, I praye thee: that lyeth in Anathoth, in the countreye of Benjamin: for by heritage thou hast right to loose it oute for thy selfe, therfore redeme it. Then I perceyued that this was the commaundemente of the Lorde, and so I bought the lāde from Hananeel, of Anathoth, myne vncles sonne, and waied hym there the money: euen seuen syeles and ten siluer pence. I caused him also to make me a writing, and to seale it: and called recorde therby, and waied hym there the moneye vpon the weyghtes. So I toke the euidēce with the coppy when it was orderly sealed.

and red ouer, and I gaue the euidẽce vnto C Baruch the ſonne of Neriah, the ſonne of Maaſiah in the ſyghte of Hananeell my coſyne, & in the preſence of the witneſſes, that be named in the euidence: and before all the Jewes that were therby in the courte of the priſon. I charged Baruch alſo before them, ſaying: The Lord of hooſtes, the God of Jſraell, commaundeth thee to take this ſealed euidence with the coppye: and to laye it in an earthen veſſell, that it maye longe contynue. For the LORD of Hooſtes, the God of Jſrael hath determined, that houſes, feldes, and vineyardes ſhall be poſſeſſed agayne in thys lande.
Nowe when I had deliuered the euidence vnto Barnch the ſonne of Neriah, I be-ſought the Lorde, ſaying: O Lorde GOD, Gene.1.a * it is thou that haſte made heauen and Jere.x.b. earth, with thy great power and hie arme, a Ex.34a and there is nothing hid from the. * Thou ſheweſt mercy vpon thouſandes, thou recompenſeſt the wickednes of the fathers, into the boſome of the chyldren that come D after them. Thou art the great & myghty God, whoſe name is the Lorde of hooſtes: great in councell, and excellent in worcke.
Roma.2.a Thyne eyes looke vpon all the wayes of mens chyldren * to rewarde euerye one after his waye: and accordinge to the fruites Exo.7.a. of hys inuencions. * Thou haſte done vnto the. great tokens and wonders in the lande of 35.chap. Egypt, as we ſee thys daye, vpon the people of Jſrael, and vpon thoſe men, to make thy name greate, as it is come to paſſe this daye: Thou haſte brought thy people of Jſrael out of the lande of Egypt with tokens, with wonders, with a mighty hand, with a ſtretched out arme, and with greate terribleneſs, and haſt geuen thẽ this land, lyke as thou haddeſt promiſed vnto theyr fathers. Namely, that thou wouldeſt geue them a lande, that floweth with mylke and Jud.2.3. honye. * Nowe when they came therein, 4.6.8. and poſſeſſed it, they folowed not thy a Heſh.5b boyce, and walcked not in thy lawe, a but all that thou commaundeſt them to doe, that haue they not done, and therfore come E all theſe plagues vpon them. Beholde, there are bulwarckes made now agaynſte the citie to take it: and it ſhal be wonne of the Chaldees that beſege it, wyth ſwearde, with hongre, and death, and loke what thou haſte ſpoken, that ſame ſhall come vpõ them. For lo, al theſe thyngs are preſent vnto the. yet (ſayeſt thou vnto me, O Lorde God) and commaundeſt me, that I ſhall looſe a pece of lande vnto my ſelfe, and take witneſſes thereto: and yet in the meane ſeaſon the citye is deliuered into the power of the Chaldees. Then came the worde the Lorde vnto me, ſayinge: Beholde, I am the LORDE GOD of all fleaſh, is there any thyng then to hard for me? Therfore, thus ſayeth the LORDE: * Beholde, I ſhal deliuer thys Cytye into the power of the Chaldees, and into the Je.xxb.b power of Nabuchodonoſor: The kynge 39.b. of Babilon, they ſhall take it. For the Chaldees ſhal come, and winne this citye, and ſet fire vpon it, and burne it: with the gorgeouſe houſes, in whoſe parlers they haue made ſacrifyce vnto Baall, & powred drincheofferinges vnto ſtraunge Goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrath. For ſeyng the chyldren of Jſraell, and the chyldren of Juda, haue wrought wickednes before me euer from theyr youth vp, what haue they els done, but prouoked me wyth the wor-kes of theyr owne handes? ſayeth the lord: For what hathe thys citye bene els but a prouokynge of my wrathe, euer ſence the day that they builded it, vnto this houre? wherin I caſte it out of my ſyghte, becauſe of the greate blaſphemies of the chyldren of Jſraell and Juda, which they haue done to prouoke me: yea, they, theyr kynges, their princes, their prieſtes, their prophetes, the men of Juda, and the cityzyns of Jeruſalem. * When I ſtode vp earlye, Jere.2.b. and taughte them and inſtructed them, they tourned theyr backes to me, and not their faces. They woulde not heare, to be reformed and correcte: * But ſet theyr Jere.7.d F pooles in the houſe, that is halowed vnto my name, to defyle it. They haue buylded hye places for Baall, in the valleye of the chyldren of Hennom, to bowe their ſonnes and doughters vnto Moloch, whiche I neuer commaunded them: Neyther came it euer in my thoughte, to make Juda ſynne with ſuch abhompnacion. And nowe therfore, thus hathe the Lorde God of Jſraell ſpoken, concernyng thys cytye, which (as ye youre ſelues confeſſe) ſhall be deliuered into the hande of the kynge of Babilon, when it is wonne with the ſwearde, with Deut 30.a hongre, and with peſtylence. * Beholde, I wyl gather them together from all landes, wherin I haue ſcatred them in my wrathe, in my feareull and greate diſpleaſure: And wyll bringe them agayne into thys place, where they ſhall dwelle ſafelye. And they Jer.11.c ſhalbe my people, and I wyl be their god. G
* And I wyll geue them one heart and one waye, that they maye feare me all the dayes of theyr lyfe, that they & theyr chil- Eze.36.a dren after them maye proſpere. * And I wyl ſet vp an euerlaſting conenaunte with them. Namely, that I wyll neuer ceaſe to do thẽ good, and that I wyll put my feare in their hearte, ſo that they ſhal not rũne awaye from me. * Yea, I wyll haue a luste & pleasure to do the good, and faythfullye to plant them in this land with my whole hearte, and with all my soule. For thus sayeth the Lorde: Lyke as I haue brought all this great plage vpon this people, euen so wil I also bringe vpon the all the good, that I haue promysed them. And men shal haue their possessions in this land: wherof ye saye nowe, that it shal neither be inhabited of people nor of catell: but be deliuered into the handes of the Chaldees.

Yea, lande shalbe bought for money, & euidences made there vpon, and sealed before witnesses in the countreye of Ben Jamin, and rounde about Jerusalem, in the cities of Juda, in the cityes that are vpon the mountaynes, and in them that lye beneth: yea, and in the cities that are in the south. For I wyll bringe theyr prisoners hither agayne, sayeth the Lorde.

MOreouer, the woorde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremy on this maner, whē he was yet bounde i the court of the prison. Thus sayeth the lord, which fulfilleth the thig that he speaketh: the lord which performeth the thig that he taketh i hād, euē he whose name is the lord: * crie vnto me, & I wil answeere, & shewe the great & hie thinges, which were vnknowē vnto the. Thus (I saye) spake the Lorde God of Israel, concerning the houses of this citie, and the houses of the kynges of Juda, that they are broken thorowe the ordynaunce and the sweard. Because the inhabytones of this cytye haue come to fyghte agaynst the Chaldees: and they are filled with the deade carkases of men, whome I haue slayne in my wrathe and displeasure: when I tourned my face from thys cytye. because of all her wyckednesse. Beholde, sayeth the Lorde, I wyl repayre and heale theyr woundes, and make them whole: I wyl open them the large treasure of peace and reuth. And I wil retourne the captiuitie of Juda and Israell: and wyll set them vp agayne as they were afore. * From all mysdedes, wherin they haue offended against me, I will clense them: And all theis blasphemies, whiche they haue done against me, whē they regarded me not, I wil forgeue them. And this shall gette me a name, a praise, & honor amonge al the people of the earthe, whyche shall heare all the good, that I wyll shewe vnto them: yea, they shall be afrayde: and astonyed at all the good dedes and benefites that I wyll doe for them. Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde: * In thys place wherof ye saye that it shalbe a wildernesse: wherin neyther people nor cattell shall dwelle: In lyke maner in the cityes of Juda, and without Jerusalem (which also shalbe so voyde, that neyther people nor cattell shall dwelle there) shall the voyce of gladnesse be hearde agayne, the voyce of the bridegrome and of the bryde, the voyce of them that shall synge: * Prayse the LORDE of hoostes, for he is louyng: and hys mercye endureth for euer: and the voyce of them that shall offre vp gyftes in the house of the Lorde. For I wyll restore the captiuitye of thys lande, as it was afore: sayeth the LORD. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes: Ye shall come yet thereto, that in thys land, whiche is voyde from men and catell, and in all the cyties of the lande, there shalbe set vp thepeherdes cotages: in the Cyties vpon the mountaynes: And in the cytyes that lye vpon the playne, and in the cities of the southe. In the lande of Ben Jamin, in the feldes of Jerusalem, and in the cytyes of Juda shall the shepe be numbred agayne, vnder the hande of him, that telleth them, sayeth the Lorde: * Beholde, the tyme commeth, sayeth the Lorde: that I wyl performe that good thyng, whiche I haue promysed vnto the house of Israell, and to the house of Juda, in those dayes and at the same tyme, I wyll bringe forth vnto Dauid, the braunche of righteousnesse, and he shal do equite and righteousnesse in the lande. In those dayes shall Juda be helped. * And Jerusalem shall dwelle safe, and he that shall call her, is euen God our ryghteousnesse. For thus the Lorde promyseth. * Dauid shall neuer wante one to syte vpon the throne of the house of Israell: * Neyther shall the priestes and Leuytes want one to offre alway before me burntoffrynges, to kyndle the meatoffringes, & to prepare the sacrifices. And the woorde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremy after this maner. Thus sayeth the Lorde: If aye the couenaunte * whiche I haue made with day and nyght be broken, that there shuld not be day & night in due season: Then may my couenaunte also be broken, which I made with Dauid my seruaunte, and so he not to haue a sonne to raygne in hys throne, * so shall also the priestes and Leuites neuer fayle, but serue me. * For lyke as the starres of heauen maye not be numbred: neyther the sand of the sea measured: so wyll I multiplye the seed of Dauid my seruaunt, and the Leuites my ministers. Moreouer, the woorde of the Lorde came to Jeremye, sayinge: Consyderest thou not what this people speaketh: Two kynredes (saye they) had the Lorde chosen, and those same two hathe he caste

THese are the wordes which the Lorde spake vnto Jeremye * what tyme as Nabuchodonosor, the kynge of Babilō, & al his hostes (out of al the kyngedomes that were vnder his power) and al his people, fought against Jerusalem, & al the cities therof. Thus saieth the Lord God of Israel: God, & speake to zedekiah the kinge of Juda, & tel him. The Lorde sendeth the this word: Beholde, * I will deliuer thys citie into the hanw of the king of Babilon: he shal burne it, & thou shalt not escape his hādes, but shalt be led away prisoner, and deliuered into his power. Thou shalt loke the kinge of Babilon in the face, & he shall speake with the mouth to mouth: and then shalt thou go to Babilō. Yet heare the word of the Lord, O zedekiah, thou kinge of Juda: Thus saieth the Lorde vnto the. mourenynge they shall saye: Oh Lorde. For thus haue I determined, sayeth the Lorde. Then spake Jeremy the prophet all these wordes vnto Zedekiah, kynge of Juda, in Jerusalem: what tyme as the kynge of Babilons hoost besieged Jerusalem, and the remnaunte of the cities. Namely, Lachis & Azecah, whyche yet remayned of the * stronge fenced cities of Juda. These are the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy the prophet, whē Zedekiah, was agreed with all the people at Jerusalem, that there shoulde be proclamed * a lyberteye: so that euery man shoulde let hys seruaunte and handmayde go free: Hebrue, and Hebruesse, and no Jewe to holde hys brother as a bondeman. Nowe as they had consented, al the Princes, and all the people whyche had gathered vnto this agreemente that euery man should set at liberte hys bondeseruaunte, and bondewomen, and no longer to holde them bounde, euen so they were obedyente, and let them go free. whome they had let go free, and so made thē bonde again. For the which cause the word of the Lorde came vnto Jeremye from the Lord him selfe, saying: Thus saith the lord God of Israel: * I made a couenaūte wyth your fathers, when I brought them out of Egipte, (that they should nomore be bōdemen) sayinge: When seuen yeares are oute, euery man shall let hys boughte seruaunt and Hebrue go free, if he haue serued him syxe yeares. But youre fathers obeied me not, and herkened not vnto me. As for you, ye were now turned & did right before me, in that ye proclamed euery man to let his neyghbour go free, & in that ye made a couenaūt before me, in the tēple that bereth my name. But yet ye haue tourned youre selues agayne, & blaspheмed my name. In this, that euery mā hath requyred his seruaūt & hādmaidē again, whō ye haue let go quite & free: and compelled them to serue you againe, & to be your bondemen, & bōdewemen. And therfore thy sayeth the Lorde: ye haue not obeyed me, euery mā to proclayme freedome vnto his brother, and neygbour: wherfore, I will call you vnto a fredome, sayeth the Lord: euen vnto the swearde, ro the pestilēce, & to hūger, & will make you to be plaged in al the kyngdōes of the earth. Yea, those men that haue broken my couenaunte, and not kept the wordes of the appoyntmente whiche they made before me: * when they hewed the calfe in two, & whō there went thorowe the two halues therof: The paynces of Juda, the paynces of Jerusalem, the gelded men, the prestes, and all the people of the lande, whiche wente thorowe the two sides of the calfe. Those men will I geue into the power of theyr enmies, and unto the handes of them that folowe vpon theyr lyues. * And their deede bodyes shalbe meate for the foules of the ayre, and beastes of the felde. As for Zedekiah, the kynge of Juda, and hys Princes, I will deliuer them in to the power of theyr enemyes, and of them that desyre to slaye them, and into the hande of the kynge of Babilons hooste * whyche nowe is departed from you: But thorowe my commaundemente (sayeth the Lorde) they shall come agayne before this cytye, they shall fyght against it, wynne it, and burne it: Moreouer, I will laye the cytyes of Juda so waste, that no man shal dwel therin.

THe wordes which the lord spake vnto Jeremie, in the raigne of Jehoadz the son of Josiah kinge of Juda are these: Go vnto the house of * the Rechabites, & cal them oute, and bringe them to the house of the Lorde into some cōmodious place, and

gyne them wyne to dryncke. Then toke I Jazaniah, the sonne of Jeremye, the sonne of Habazinniah, and his brethrē, and all hys sonnes, and the whole housholde of the Rechabites: and broughte them into the house of the Lorde into the closette of the children of Hanan, the sonne of Jegedaliah, the man of God, whyche was by the closet of the Prynces, that is aboue the closet of Maasiah, the sōne of Selū, which is the treasuree. And before the sonnes of the kynred of the Rechabytes, I set pottes full of wyne, and cuppes, and sayde vnto them: Dryncke wyne. But they said: we will dryncke no wine for Jonadab, the sonne of Rechab oure father, commaunded vs, saying: ye & your sōnes shall neuer drinke wyne, * buylde no houses, sowe no seede, plante no vynes: yea, ye shall haue no vineyardes: but for all youre tyme, ye shall dwell in tentes, that ye maye lyue longe in the lande wherin ye be straungers. Thus haue we obeyed the commaundemente of Jonadab, the sonne of Rechab oure father, in all that he hath charged vs, and so we drinke no wyne al oure lyfe longe: we, nor our wiues, our sonnes, and our doughters. Neither buylde we any house to dwel therin, we haue also amonge vs neyther vineyardes, nor cornelande to sowe: but we dwell in tentes, we obey, and do accordyng vnto all, that Jonadab oure father commaunded vs. But nowe, that Nabuchodonosor, the kynge of Babylon, came vp into the lande, we sayd: come, let vs go to Jerusalē, that we maye escape the Hoost of the Chaldees, and the Assirians: & so we dwel nowe at Jerusalem. Then came the word of the Lorde vnto Jeremy, sayinge: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israell: Go and tell the men of Juda, and the inhabitours of Jerusalem: Wyll ye not be reformed to obeye my wordes, sayeth the Lorde? The wordes whyche Jonadab, the sonne of Rechab commaunded his sonnes, that they should drinke no wine, are fast & surely kepte: for vnto this day they drincke no wyne, but obey their fathers cōmaūdemente. But as for me, * I haue stande vp early, I haue spoken vnto you, and geuen you earnest warnynge: and yet haue ye not bene obedyente vnto me. Yea, I haue sente my seruauntes al the prophetes vnto you, I rose vp earlye, & sente you word, sayinge: O turne you nowe euerye man from hys wycked waye: amende your lyues, and go not after straunge goddes to worshyp thē: that ye maye continue in the lande, which I haue geuen vnto you and youre fathers: but ye would neyther heare me, nor bowe me. The chyldren of Jonadab, Rechabs sonne haue stedfastlye kepte theyr fathers cōmaūdement, that he gaue them, but this people is not obediente vnto me. And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes, the God of Israel: Beholde, I wil bring vpon Juda, and vpon euerye one that dwelleth in Jerusalem, all the trouble that I haue deuysed agaynst them. * For I haue spoke vnto thē, but they would not folow: I haue called vnto them, neuerthelesse, they would geue me no answere. Jeremye spake also vnto the housholde of the Rechabytes: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel. For so muche as ye haue obeyed the commaundemente of Jonadab youre father, and kepte all hys precepte, & done accordynge vnto all that he hathe bydden you. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israell: * Jonadab the sōne of Rechab shal not faile, but haue one out of his stocke, to stāde alwaye before me.

IN the fourth yere of Iehoakim the sonne of Josiah the kynge of Juda, came the word of the lord vnto Jeremye, sayinge: * Take a boke, and wryte therein all the wordes, that I haue spoken to the agaynst Israel, against Juda, & against al the people, frō the time that I began for to speake vnto the (in the raygne of Josiah) vnto this daye. That when the house of Juda heareth of the plage, whyche I haue deuysed for thē: they maye peraduenture * turne, euery man from hys wycked waye: that I maye forgeue theyr offences and synnes. Then dyd Jeremye call Baruch the sonne of Neriah, * and Baruch wrote in the booke at the mouthe of Jeremy, al the wordes of the Lord: which he had spoken vnto him. And Jeremie commaunded Baruch, sayinge: I am in prysion, so that I maye not come into the house of the Lorde: therfore go thou thither, and reade the boke that thou haste written at my mouth: namely, the wordes of the Lorde: and reade them in the Lordes house vpon the fasting daye, that the people, whole Juda, and all they that come out of the cities may heare. Peraduenture, they wyll praye mekely before the face of the Lorde, and turne euerye one from hys wycked waye. For great is the wrath and displeasure, that the Lord hath taken against this people. So Baruch, the sonne of Neriah, dyd accordynge vnto all that Jeremy the prophet commaunded him, readynge the wordes of the LORDE oute of the boke, in the Lordes house. And this was done in the fift yere of Iehoakim, the sonne of Josiah, kynge of Juda, in the ix. moneth, * when it was commaunded, that all the people of Jerusalem shoulde

C house of the Lorde: out of the treasurye of Jer.26.8 Gamarias, the sonne of Saphā the scribe, which is beside the hyer lofte of the *newe doze of the lordes house: that all the people might heare. Now whē Michcah, the sonne of Gamariah, the sōne of Saphā, had heard al the wordes of the Lorde out of the boke, he wēt downe to the kinges palace into the Scribes chābres, for there al the Prynces were set, Elisama, the scribe Dalaiah, the sonne of Semei, Elnathan, the sonne of Achboz, Gamariah, the sonne of Saphā, Zedekiah, the sonne of Hananiah, with al the Prynces. And Michcah, tolde them all the wordes, that he hearde Baruch reade oute

Then all the Pynces sent Jehudi, the sōne of Nathamah, the sōne of Selamiah, the sōne of Chusi, vnto Baruch, saying: Take in thyne hād the booke, whereoute thou haste red before all the people, and come. So Baruch, the sōne of Neriah, toke the boke in his hande, and came vnto them. And they sayde vnto him: Sit downe, and reade the boke, that we maye heare also. So Baruch, red that they might heare. Nowe when they had herde al the wordes, they were abashed one E vpō another, and sayde vnto Baruch: We wyll certyfye the kynge of al these wordes. And they examined Baruch, saynge: tell vs, howe dyddest thou wryte all these wordes oute of hys mouth? Then Baruch, answered them: He spake all these wordes vnto me wyth hys mouth, and I wrote thē in the boke. Then sayde the Pynces vnto Baruch: Go thy way, & hyde the wyth Jeremye, so that no man knowe where ye be: And they went in to the king to the courte. But they kept the boke in the chambre of Elisama, the Scrybe, and tolde the king al the wordes, that he might heare. So the kynge sente Jehudi, to fet hym the booke, which he brought out of Elisama, the scribes chambre: And Jehudi, red in it, that the kynge and al the pynces which wer about him, might heare. Nowe, the kynge sat in the wynter house, for it was in the .ix. moneth, and there was a fire before hym. And when Jehudi, had red thre or foure leaues therof, he cut the boke in peces with a pen-

Neuertheleße, Elnathan, Dalaiah, and Gamariah, besought the kyng, that he would not burne the booke: notwithstandynge, the kynge would not heare them, but commaunded Jerahmael, the sōne of Amalech: Saraiah, the sōne of Ezriel, and Selamiah the sōne of Abdiell, to laye handes vpon Baruch the Scribe, and vpon Jeremye the Prophete: but the LORDE kepte them oute of sight. After now that the king had brent the boke, and the sermons which Baruch, wrote at the mouthe of Jeremye. The worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremye, saying: Take another boke, and wryte in it all the former sayd sermons: that were wrytten in the first boke, whiche Jehoakim, the

Why hast thou written therein, that the kynge of Babylon shall come, and make this lande wast: so that he shal make bothe people and cattell to be out of it?

Thē toke Jeremy an other boke, and gaue it Baruch, the Scribe, the sonne of Neriah, whiche wrote therein out of the mouthe of Jeremye: all the sermons that were in the fyrste boke, which Jehoakim, the kynge of Juda dyd burne. ¶ The. xxxviii. Chapter.

SAphatiah the sonne of Mathan, Godeliah, the sonne of Phashur, Jucal the son of Semeliah & Phashur the sone of Melchia perceyued the wordes, that Jeremye hadde spoken vnto all the people, namely, on this maner: Thus saith the lord: * Whoso remayneth in this cytye, shall Jere.21.b perish, either with the sweard, with hūgre. and.27.a or with the pestilence. But whoso falleth vnto the Chaldees, shal escape, wynnyng his soule for a praye, and shall lyue. * For Jere.22.a thus sayeth the Lorde. Thys cytye (no doubte) muste be deliuered into the power of the kynge of Babylon, and he also shall wynne it. Then sayd the Princes vnto the kyng: Syr, we beseche you, let this mā be put to death. For thus he discourageth the handes of the soulyers that be in this cytie, and the handes of all the people, when B he speaketh suche wordes vnto thē. Thys man verely laboureth not for peace of the people, but myschefe. Zedekiah the kynge answered, and sayde: lo, he is in your handes: for the king maye denye you nothing. Then toke they Jeremye, & caste him into the dūgeon of Melchiah the sonne of Hamelech, that dwelt in the fore entrye of the prison. And they let downe Jeremye wyth coordes into a dongeon, where there was no water, but myre. So Jeremy stack faste in the myre. Nowe when Abedmelech the Mori, beyng a chāberlayne in the kinges courte, vnderstode that they had caste Jeremie into the dongeon: he went out of the kynges house, & spake to the kyng. (which then satte vnder the porte of Benjamin)

Then the kynge commaunded Abedmelech the Mohian, and sayde: Take from hence. xxx. men whom thou wilt, and draw vp Jeremye the Prophete oute of the dongeon, before he dye. So Abedmelech toke the men with him, and wēt to the house of the kynge, and there vnder the treasury he gatte old ragges and worne cloutes, and let them downe by a coarde, into the dongeon to Jeremye. And Abedmelech the Then Jeremy answered Zedekiah: yf I be playne vnto the, thou wilt cause me to suffre deth. yf I geue the counsayle, thou wilte not folowe me. So the kynge swore an othe secretly vnto Jeremye, sayinge: As truly as the Lorde lyueth, that made vs these soules, I will not slaye the, nor gyue the into the hades of them that seke after thy lyfe. Then sayd Jeremye vnto Zedekiah. Thus

Jer. 27.c Israell. * yf case be, that thou wylte goe forthe vnto the kynge of Babylons princes, thou shalt saue thy lyfe, and this cite shall not be brente: yea, both thou and thy housholde shall escape with youre lyues. But yf thou wilt not go forth to the kyng of Babilons princes, then shall thys cytie be delyuered into the hades of the Chaldees, whiche shal set fire vpon it, and thou shalt not be able to escape the. And Zedekiah said vnto Jeremye. I am afraied for the Jewes, that are fled vnto the Chaldees, lest I come in their handes, and so they to haue me in derysyon. But Jeremie answered: No, they shall not betraye the: O hearken vnto the voyce of the LORD (I beseche the) whiche I speake vnto thee, so shalt thou be well, & saue thy lyfe. But F yf thou wylt not go forth, the Lorde hathe tolde me this playnely: Behold, al the women that are lefte in the kynge of Judaes house, shalbe led forth out to the kig of babilōs princes. And they shall say, that thou art disceyued: & that the men in whō thou diddest put thy trust, haue gotte the vnder, & set thy fete fast in the myre, & gone theyr waye frō the. Therfore all thy wiues with their children, shal they lede forth vnto the Chaldees: and thou shalt not escape their handes, but shalt be the kyng of Babilōs prisoner, and this cytie shalt thou cause to be brente. Then sayde Zedekiah vnto Jeremye: loke that no bodye knowe of these G wordes, and thou shalt not dye. But yf the princes perceyue, that I haue talked with the, and come vnto the, saynge: O speake, what sayde the kinge to the? hide it not frō vs, and we will not put the to death. Tell vs (we praye thee) what sayde the kynge to the? So thou gyue theym this answere: I haue humbly besought the kynge, that he wyll let me lye no more in Jehonathans house, that I dye not there. Then came all the princes vnto Jeremy, & asked him. And he tolde them, after the maner as the king bad him. Then they held their peace, and let him alone, for they perceyued nothing.
* So Jeremye abode stil in the fore entrye Jer.39.c. of the prison, vntyl the daye that Jerusalē was wonne.

Thē al the princes of the king of Babilon, came in, & sat thē downe vnder the porte: Nereegell, Sarezer, Samgarnebo, Sarsechim, Rabsaris, Nereegel, Sarezer, Rabmage, with all the other princes of the kynge of Babylon. * And when Zedekiah the kyng Jer.34.a of Juda with his souldiers saw them, they fled, & departed out of the cytie by nyghte, thorowe the kinges garden, and thorowe the porte that is betwene the two walles, and so they went towarde the wyldernes. B
But the Chaldees hoost folowed fast after them, and toke Zedekiah in the felde of Jericho, and brought him prisoner to Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babylon vnto Reblath, that lieth in the lāde of Hemath, where he gaue iudgemēt vpō him. So the kyng of Babylō caused the chyldren of Zedekiah, & al the nobles of Juda, to be slaine before his face at Reblath. A Jere. 43 a

THis is the worde that the lorde spake vnto Jeremy, *when Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayne had let him go free from *Ramath, whither he had ledde hym Jos. 18. d. bounde amōg al the prisoners that were caried frō Jerusalē & Juda, vnto Babilō. The chiefe captayne called for Jeremy, and sayde vnto him: The Lord thy God spake mightely before, of the misery vpon thys place: Nowe the Lorde hathe sente it, and performed it, as he hath promised. For ye haue synned agaynste the Lorde, and haue not bene obedient vnto hys voyce: therfore commeth this plage vpon you. Beholde, I lose the bandes from thy handes this day: yf thou wilte nowe go with me vnto Babilon, vp thē: for I will se to thē, & prouyde for thee. But if thou wylte no go with me vn to Babilon, then remayne here. *Behold, B all the landes is at thy wyll, loke where gen. 13. d thou thinckest couenient and good for thee Tobi. 1 b to abyde, there dwell. For as yet he was not gone backe agayne to Godoliah, therfore he sayde to him: Goe backe to Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam, the sonne of Saphan: * whome the kynge of Babylon 4. kk. 25. c hath made gouernour ouer the cyties of Juda, and dwell with him amōge the people, or remayne whersoeuer it pleased thee. So the chiefe captayne gaue him his expēses with a rewarde, and let him go. * Jere. 39 c Then went Jeremy vnto Godoliah the sonne of Ahicā, to Mizpa, and dwelt ther with him amonge the people that were lefte in the lande. Nowe when the captaynes of the hoofte of Juda (whiche with their folowes were scatred abroade on euery syde in the C land) vnderstod that the kyng of Babylon had made Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam gouernour in the lande, and that mā, wife, and childe: yea, and the poore men in the lande (that were not led captyue to Babilon) shoulde be vnder hys iurisdiction: They came to Godolyah, vnto Mizpa: Namely, Ismaell the sonne of Nathaniah Johanan & Jonathan the sons of Careah, Sareah, the sonne of Thanhometh, the sonnes of Ophay the Netophathyte, Jesenias the sonne of Maachati, with their cōpanions. And Godoliah the son of Ahicā, the son of Saphā sware vnto thē, & their folowes in thys maner. * Be not afrayed 4. kk. 25. e to serue the Chaldees, dwell in the land, & do the kinge of Babilon scruyce, so shal ye prosper. Beholde, I dwell at Mizpa to be an officer in the Chaldees behalfe, and to satisfie suche as come to vs. Therfore, gather you wine, corne and oyle, & kepe them in youre ware houses, and dwell in youre cities that ye haue in keppnge. yea, all the D Jewes also, that dwelt in Moab vnder the Ammonites, in Idumea, and in all the cōtres, when they hearde that the kynge of Babilon had made Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam the sonne of Saphan, gouernour, vpon them that were lefte in Juda. All the Jewes (I saye) retourned out of all places, where they were fledde vnto, and came into the land of Juda, to Godoliah vnto Mizpa. and gathered wine and other fruites, and that very muche. Moreouer, Johanan the sonne of Careah, and all the captaynes of the hoofte, that were scatred on euerye syde in the lande, came to Godoliah in Mizpa, and sayde vnto him: knowest thou not that Baalis the kyng of the Ammonites hathe sent Ismaell the son of Nathaniah to slaye the? But Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam beleued them not. Then sayde Johanā the sonne of Careah vnto Godoliah in Mizpa these wordes secretlye: Let me go, I pray the, and I wyll slay Ismael, the sonne of Nathaniah, so that no bodye shal knowe it. Wherfore wyll he kyl thee, that al the Jewes, which resort vnto the, might be scatred, & the remnaunt in Juda perishe? And Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam sayde to Johanā the sonne of Careah. Thou shalte not do it, for they are but lyes, that thou sayest of Ismael.

BVt in the. vii. moneth it happened, A *that Ismael the son of Nathaniah 4. kk. 25 b the son of Elisama (one of the kinges blond) came with thē that were greatest about the king, & ten men that were swoorne with him: vnto Godoliah the son of Ahicā to Mizpa, and they did eate together. And Ismaell the son of Nathaniah, with those ten men that were swoorne to him, starte vp and smote Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam, the sonne of Saphan, with the swerde, and slewe him, whome the kynge of Babylon had made gouernour of the lande. Ismaell also slewe all the Jewes that were wyth Godoliah

Godoliah at Mizpa, and all the Caldees that he founde there waytynge vpon him, and those that were able to fyght, he slewe with hym. The nexte daye after that he had slayne Godoliah (the matter was yet vnknowen) and there came certayne men frome Sichem, from Siloh and Samaria, to the numbre of.lxxx. whiche had shaven their beardes, rente their clothes: and were all heule, dryngynge meate offrynge, and incense in theyr handes, to offre it in the house of the Lorde. And Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah wente forthe of Mizpa Ecc.12.e * weppynge, to mete theym. Nowe when he mette them, he sayde: Go youre waye to Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam. And when they came in the myddes of the cytye, Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah (with theym that were swoorne vnto him) slewe theym, euen at the myddest of the pytte. Amonge these foure scoze men, there were ten, that sayde vnto Ismael: Oh slaye vs not, for we haue yet a greate treasure in the felde, of wheate, barly, oyle and honye. So he spared them, and slew them not with their 3.re.25.c brethren. Nowe the * pytte where in Ismael dyd cast the dead bodies of the menne (whome he slewe bycause of Godoliah) had kynge Aza caused to be made, for feare of Baasa the king of Israell, and the same pytte dyd Ismael fyll wyth slayne men.

As for the remnaunte of the people, the kynges doughters, and all the people that were yet left at Mizpa, vpon whom * Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayne had made 4.re.25.c Godoliah the sonne of Ahican gouernour: Ismaell the sonne of Nathaniah caryed theym awaye pryseners towarde the Ammonites. But when Johanan the sonne of Careah, and all they whiche had bene captaynes ouer the kynges hoost wyth hym, hearde of all the wyckednesse that Ismaell

i.re.29.b toke their companions, and went out for to fyghte wyth Ismaell the sonne of Nathaniah, and founde hym by the greate waters that are in Gibeon. Nowe when all the people, whome Ismaell led captyue, sawe Johanan the sonne of Careah, and all the other captaines of the host, they were glad. So all the people that Ismael had caried awaye from Mizpa, were bronghte againe. And when they returned, they came to Johanan the sonne of Careah. But Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah fledde from Johanan with eyghte of his swoorne companyons, and went to the Ammonites. Then Johanan the sonne of Careah and all the captaynes of the hooste that were wyth hym, toke all the remnaunte of the people, whome Ismaell the sonne of Nathaniah had led awaye. (When he hadde slayne Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam) whome they also had rescued from him: fightynge men, women and children, and gelded men, whō they bronghte agayne frome Gibeon: and wente from thence, and sat them downe at Geruth Camaam, whyche lyeth beside Bethlehem, * that they myghte go into Jere.42.b Egipt for feare of the Chaldees: of whome they were afrayed, because that Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had slayne Godoliah Jer.xl.a Ahicammes sonne, * whome the kynge of Babylon hadde made gouernoure in the lande.

¶ The.xlii. Chapter.

SO all the captaynes, and Johanan the sonne of Careah, Jezaniah the sonne of Osaiah, came with all the people from the least vnto the most, and sayd vnto Jere- a thy god, namely, for al the remnaunt wher of there be very few of vs left of many, as thou seist vs: that the Lorde thy God, may shewe vs a way to go in, & tel vs what we should do. Thē Jeremie the prophete sayde vnto thē: I haue herde you. Behold, I wil pray vnto God your Lorde as ye haue requi red me: & loke what answere the Lorde gyueth you, I shal certifie you therof, & kepe nothynge backe from you. And they sayde Josu.i.e vnto Jeremie: * The Lorde of trueth and all that the Lorde thy God commaundeth b vs, whether it be good or euell. We wyll herken vnto the voyce of the Lorde God, to whome we sende thee, that we may prosper, when we haue folowed the voice of the Lorde our God. And after ten dayes came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremy. Thē called he Johanan the sonne of Careah, and all the captaynes of the people that were with hym: yea, and all the people from the least to the most, & sayd vnto them: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel vnto whom ye sent me, to laye forthe your prayers before him: * If ye wil dwel in this lande: I Jere.21.b shal build you vp, & not breake you downe: I shal plante you, and not roote you oute: for I repent, as cōcernyng the trouble that I haue done to you. Feare not the kyng of Babylon, of whome ye stande in awe: O be not afrayed of hym, sayeth the Lorde: for I wylbe with you, to helpe you, & delyuer you from his hande. I wil pardon you, I wyll haue mercye vpon you, & cause him to pytye you, and bryngе you agayne into c your owne lande. Neuertheles, if ye purpose not to dwel in this lāde, nor to folowe the voyce of the Lorde youre God: but will saye thus, we will not dwel here, but go in heare the noyse of the trompet, nor suffre hungre, there wyll we dwell. Wherfore, heare nowe the worde of the Lorde, O ye Jere.27.a remnaunte of Juda. ✶ Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes, the God of Jsraell: Jf ye be wholy purposed to goe into Egipt, and to be there as straungers: ✶ The swearde Jer.41.c that ye feared, shal ouertake you in Egipt, and the hungre, wherof ye be here afraied, shal hange vpon you, and folowe you into Egipt, & there shall you dye. And all they, that of sette purpose vndertake to goe into Egypte, to soiourne there, shall perysche with the swearde, with hungre & pestilẽce: not one of them shall remayne, there shal none escape the plage, that J wyll bryngе 10 vpon them. For thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes, the God of Jsraell: Lyke as my wrath and indignacion is moued agaynst the inhabitours of Jerusalem, so shall my displeasure be kyndled agaynste you also, yf ye go into Egipte: And there ye shal be reuyled, abhorred, brought to shame, and confusion: & as for this place, ye shal neuer se it moore. The Lorde forbydeth you (O ye remnaunte of Juda) that ye shal not go into Egypte. And forget not that J haue warned you earnestlye thys daye, for ye Jer.42.a haue dissembled with me. ✶ For ye sent me vnto the Lorde youre God, and sayde: O praye thou the Lorde our God for vs: and loke what answere the Lorde oure God geneth the, that bringe vs agayne, & we shal do thereafter. Nowe haue J shewed, & declared vnto you, but you haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lorde youre God, for the which cause he hath sent me to you. Now deu.28.c therfore: ✶ Jf ye wyll not folowe it, be sure that ye shal perisshe with the swerd, with hongre & pestilence: euen in the same place, where youe lust is to go, and dwel.

NOw when Jeremy had ended all the wordes of the lord his god vnto the people, which to declare the Lorde their god had sent him to thẽ (euen al these wordes, J say:) Azariah the son of Oziah, & Johanã the sonne of Kareah with al stub& cary vs away prisoners vnto Babylon.

So Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captaynes of the hooste, and all the people folowed not the cõmaũdemẽt of the Lorde: Namelye, to dwelle in the lande of Juda: But Johanan the sonne of Kareah, and all the captaynes of the hooste caryed awaye all the remnaunt in Juda, ✶ that were come together agayne from al the heythẽ (amõg Jer.61.c, Godeliah the sonne of Ahikam, the sonne of Saphan. They caryed awaye also the prophet Jeremy, Baruch, the sonne of Neriah, and so came into Egipt: for they were not obedient vnto the commaundement of god. Thus came they to Taphnis. And in Taphnis the worde of the Lord happened vnto Jeremy, saynge: Take greate stones in thyne hand, and hyde themin the bricke walle, vnder the doze of Pharaos house in Taphnis, that al the men of Juda may se, and saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the lorde of hoostes, the God of Jsrael. ✶ Beholde, Jer.46.f J wyll sende, and call for Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon my seruaunte, and wyll sette hys seate vpon these stones w that J haue hydde, and he shall spred hys tent ouer them. And when he commeth, he shall smyte the lande of Egipt: some wyth slaughter, some with prisonmente, & some with the swearde. He shall set fyre vpõ the temples of the Egiptians goddes, & burne them vp, and take them selues prysoners.

Moreouer, he shall araye him selfe wyth the lande of Egipte, lyke as a shepeherde putteth on hys coate, and shall depart his

THis is the worde that was shewed to Jeremye concerninge all the Jewes, J which dwelt in Egipt: at Migdol, at Taphnis, at Noph, & in the lande of Patures. Thus sayeth the Lord of hoostes, the god of Jsraell: ye haue sene al the miserye, that J haue brought vpon Jerusalẽ, & vp-

and wrath was kyndeled, and it brent vp the cytyes of Juda, the feldes with the ſtre tes of Jeruſalem, ſo that they were made waſte and deſolate, as it is come to paſſe thys daye.

Nowe therfore, thus ſayeth the Lorde of hoſtes, the God of Jſrael: Howe happeneth it, that ye do ſo great euil vnto your owne ſoules: thus to deſtroye the men and we men, children and babes of Juda: ſo that none of you is lefte, becauſe ye prouoke me vnto wrathe with the workes of youre owne handes: when ye offre vnto ſtraunge goddes in the lande of Egypte, where as ye be gone to dwell. That ye myght be rooted out, and that ye myghte be reuiled, and ſhamefully intreated of all nacyons. Or haue ye nowe forgotten the wickednelle of your forefathers, the wickednelle of the kynges of Juda, and theyr wiues, the wickednelle that ye youre ſelues and youre wyues haue done in the lande of Juda, in the cytye, and in the ſtretes of Jeruſalem. Yet are ye not ſorye vnto thys daye, ye feare not, neither walcke ye in my lawe, and in my commaundementes, that I haue geuen vnto you, and youre forefathers. Therfore thus ſayeth the Lorde of hoſtes, the God of Jſrael: I am ſtedfaſtlye aduyſed and determyned to punyſhe you, and to rote out all Juda. As for the remnaunte of Juda, that purpoſely went into Egipte, there to dwell, I wyll take them, Jere.13.c and they ſhall all be deſtroyed. In the and.43.a lande of Egipt ſhall they perylſhe, beynge conſumed with the ſwerde and with honger. For frome the leaſt vnto the mooſte, they ſhall perylſhe wyth the ſwearde and with honger. Moreouer, they ſhalbe reuyled, abhorred, ſhamed, and confounded. For I wyll vyſet theym that dwell in Egipte, Jer.39.a as I haue vyſited Jeruſalem, wyth the ſwerde, with honger, and with peſtilence. So that none of the remnaunte of Juda, whiche are gone to dwell in Egypte, ſhal be lefte to come agayne into the lande of Juda, although they thyncke to come thyther agayne, and to dwell there. For none ſhall come agayne, but ſuche as are ſtedde awaye. Then all the men whyche knewe that their wiues had offred vnto ſtraunge goddes, and a greate ſorte of wyues that ſtoode there: yea, and all the people that dwelte there in Egipt, in the cytye of Patures, anſwered Jeremye, and ſayde: As for the wordes that thou haſt ſpoken vnto vs, in the name of the Lorde, we wyll in no wyſe heare them: but what ſo euer goeth oute of oure owne mouthe, that we wyll Jer.7.b. do. We wyll do ſacrifyce and offre obla cyons vnto the quene of heauen, * lyke as we and oure forefathers, oure kynges and our hedes haue done in the cityes of Juda, and in the ſtretes and feldes of Jeruſalem. For thē had we plenteouſnes of vytayles, then were we in proſperitie, and no miſfor tune came vpon vs. * But ſence we lefte to t.mac.1.b burne incenſe, and to do ſacrifice vnto the quene of heauen, we haue hadde ſcarcenelle of all thynges, & perithe with the ſwearde and honger: Laſte of all, when we women dyd ſacrifice and offered vnto the quene of heuen, dyd we make her cakes, and powre vnto her drynckofferynges, euen to that ymage dyd we ſacrifice & ſeruice, wythout oure huſbandes willes? Then ſayde Jere mye vnto all the people, to the men, to the women, and to all the folcke, whiche had geuē him that anſwere: Dyd not the Lorde remembre the ſacrifices that ye, your fore fathers, youre kynges and rulers, with all the people, haue offered in the cytyes of Juda, in the ſtreates and lande of Jeruſa lem? and hath he not conſydered this in his mynde? Inſomuche that the Lorde myghte no longer ſuffer the wyckednelle of youre inuencions, and the abhominable thinges, which ye dide? * Is not youre lande deſo Eſay.1.a late and boire: yea, abhorred and accurſed, ſo that no man dwelleth therein any more, as it is come to paſſe thys daye? * Dyd 3.re.18.b not all thys happen vnto you, becauſe ye Jere.2.c. made ſuche ſacrifices to ydols, and ſinned 3.c.9.5.c. agaynſte the Lorde. * Ye haue not folowed, * Bar.3.a his voyce, to walke in his law, in his ordi nances and ſtatutes. Yea, this is the cauſe, that all miſfortune happened vnto you, as it is come to paſſe thys daye. Moreouer, Jeremye ſpake vnto all the people, and to all the wemē. Heare the worde of the Lord all Juda, ye that be in the lande of Egipt. Thus ſayeth the Lord of hoſtes, the God of Jſrael. And they shal cut downe her wod, saieth the Lord. They shalbe innumerable: for they shalbe mo in numbre then the grashoppers, so that no man shalbe able to tell them. The doughter of Egipte is confounded, & delyuered into the hādes of the people of the nozthe. Thus sayeth the Lozde of hostes, the God of Israel. Beholde, I wil viset that restles people of Alexandria, Pharao, and Egipt: yea, bothe their goddes and theyr kynges: euen Pharao, and all them that put theyr truste in him. ¶ The. xlvii. Chapter.

A These are the wozdes, that the Lozde spake vnto Jeremye the prophete, against the Philistines, before that Pharao smote the citye of Azab. Thus sayeth the Lozd: Behold, there shall waters arise out of the nozth: & shall growe to a great floude, runnynge ouer & coueringe the lād, the cities, & thē that dwel therein. And the mē shal crie, & al they that dwel in the lād, shal mourne at the noyse & stampynge of

The fathers shall not looke to theyr chyldren, so feable & wery shal theyr handes be: at the same tyme when he shall be there, to destroye the whole lande of the Philystines. He shall make waste bothe Tirus, Sidon, & all other that are swoine vnto them. For the Lozde wil destroye the Philystines, the remnaunte of the yle of Chaptoz, Baldenelle is come vpon Azah, Ascalon with her other valleyes shal kepe her peace, Howe longe wylte thou slaye, O thou swearde of the Lozde? at hande. All her neyghbours shal mourne for her, and al they that knowe her name, shall saye, O howe happeneth it, that the stronge staffe, and the goodly rodde is thus broken? And thou doughter Dibon, come downe from thy glorye, and syt in thyrste. For he that destroyeth Moab, shall come vp to the also, and breake downe thy stroge holdes. And thou that dwellest in Aroer, get the to the strete, & loke about the: aske them that are fledde, and escaped, and saye: what thing is happened? Oh, Moab is cõfounded, and ouercome. Mourne, and crye, tel it out at Arnõ, that Moab is destroyed. For iudgement shall come vpon the plaine lande: Namely, vpon Holon, and Jahazah, vpon Mephaath, and Dibon, vpon Nabo, and the house of Beblathaim, vpon Cariathiarim, and vpon the house of Gamal, vpõ the house Maon, and Carioth, vpõ Bozrah and all the cytyes in the lande of Moab, whether they lye farre or neare. The horne of Moab is smytten downe, and her arme broken, sayeth the Lord. Make her dronken, for she magnifyed her selfe aboue the lord, that men maye clappe their handes at her dompte, and that she also maye be laughed to scorne. O Israel, thou halte not laughe hym to scorne, when he is taken amonge theues. * Yea, because of thy wordes that thou haste spoken against hym, thou shalt be dryuen awaye. Ye Moabites shall leaue the cytyes, and dwell in rockes of stone, & become like doues, that make their nestes in holes. * As for Moabs pryde, we haue hearde of it: she is verye hie mynded. I knowe her stoutnes, her boastynge, her arogancye, and the pryde of her stomache, saieth the Lorde. I know (saieth the Lord) her indignacion, she dothe not ryghte, her wordes are lyes, and they haue not delte truelye. Therefore shall there mournynge be made for Moab, and euery mã shal crie for Moabs sake: a lamentacyon shalbe made to the men that stande vpon the wal. So wyll I mourne for the also, O Jazer, and for the, O thou vyneyarde of Sabamah. Thy wyne braunches shall come ouer the sea, and the braunches of Jazer, but vnto the sea: the destroyer shal breake into thy harneste, and grape gatherynge: myrthe and cheare shalbe taken awaye from the fyrmbye felde, and from the whole lande of Moab. There shall be no swete wyne in the prelle, the treaders shal haue no stomache to crye: yea, there shalbe none to crye vnto hym: whiche afore tyme were hearde from Heshebon, to Eleale and Jahaz, whyche lyfted vp their voyce from Zoar vnto Horonaim, that bullocke of thre yeare olde shal go mournynge. The waters also of Nemrim shalbe dried vp. Moreouer, I wil make Moab cease, saieth the lord, from the offerynges, and censynge, that she hath made vnto her goddesin hie places. Where fore my hearte mourneth for Moab, lyke a crowde plainge on heupe longe: and for the mennes sake of the fyrcke wall my hearte mourneth also: euen as a ppe that pipeth a doleful songe: for they shalbe deye feawe, and destroyed. * All heades shalbe shauen, and al beerdes clypped of: al hãdes bounde, and loynes girded about with sacke clothe. Vpon al the house toppes & stretes of Moab, there shalbe lamentable mournynge. For I wyll breake Moab lyke an vnprofitable vessel, saieth the Lord. O howe is she destroyed? O howe mourneth she? O howe boeth Moab hange downe her heade, & is ashamed? Thus shal Moab be a laughige stocke: and had in derision of all them that be rounde aboute her. * For thus saieth the Lorde: Beholde, the enemye shal come flyinge as an egle: and shrede dys wynges vpon Moab. They shall clyme ouer the walles, and wynne the stronge holdes. Then the mightye mens hartes in Moab shalbe like the heart of a womã trauelinge with chylde. And Moab shalbe made so desolate: that she shall no more be a people: because she harthe set vp her selfe agaynste the Lorde. * Feare, pytte, and snare shal come vpon the, O Moab, saieth the Lord. Who so escapeth the feare, shall fall in the pytte: and who so getteth oute of the pyt, shalbe taken in the snare. For I wyll bringe a yeare of visitacyon vpon Moab, saieth the Lord. They that are able to flie, shall stande vnder the shadowe of Heshebon. For there shal go a fyer oute of Heshebon, and a flame from Sion, and shall burne vp that proude people of Moab, and the toppe of those seditious children. Wo be vnto the, O Moab, for thou people of Chamos shalt perish. yea, thy sonnes, and doughters, shalbe leade awaye captyue. Yet at the laste, wyl I bringe Moab out of captiuite againe, saieth the Lorde. Thus farre is of the plage of Moab.

and the Israelites shalbe lordes ouer those that had e them in possession afore, sayeth the Lorde. Heshebon shall mourne, for he shalbe roted out of the grounde, sayeth the Lorde: The cities of Rabath shal crye out, & girde them selues with sacke cloth: they shall mourne, and runne about the walles for their king shalbe led awaye prysoner: yea, hys priestes and princes wyth hym.
Wherefore trustest thou in the valleye? thy valleye hathe flowed awaye, O thou fearce doughter, and thynkest thou that thou are so safe, by reason of thy treasure, that no man shall come to thee? Beholde, I wyll bringe a feare vpon the, sayeth the Lorde God of hostes: from al those that be about the: so that ye shall be scatered euerye man frō another, and no man shal gather them together agayne that be fledde. But after that, I wyll bringe the Ammonytes also out of captiuitie agayne. * Vpon the Edomites hathe the Lorde of hostes spoken on this maner: Is there no more wildome in Themā? Is there no more good councel amonge hys people? Is their wisdom them turned clene to naught? Gette you hence, tourne youre backes, creepe downe into the depe, O ye citezins of Dedan. For I wyll bring destruccion vpon Esau: yea, and the daye of his visitation. If the grape gatherers came vpon the, shoulde they not leaue some grapes? If the nyghte robbers came vpon the, shoulde they not take so muche as they thought were ynoughe? but I wil make Esau bare, and discouer his secretes, so that he shall not be able to hyde them. His seed shalbe wasted away: yea, his brethren and his neyghbourtes, & he him selfe shal not be left behynde. Thou shalt leaue thy fatherlesse chyldren behynde thee, and I wyl kepe them, and thy widowes shall take their comforte in me. For thus hathe the Lorde spoken. * Beholde, they that men thought were bounde to drinke of the cup, haue dronken with the fierst: and thinkest thou thē to be free? No, no, thou shalte nether be quite nor free: but thou must drinke also. For why? I haue swoorne by my selfe, sayeth the Lorde, that Bozrah shal become a wyldernes an open shame, a laughynge stocke, and curslinge: and al her city shalbe a continuall desert. For I am perfectelye informed of the Lord, that he hathe sent a message al readye vnto the heythen. Gather you together, and go for the agaynste them: make you ready to the battraple: for lo, * I wyll make the but small among the heythen, and lytle regarded amonge men. * Thy hie stomache, and the pryde of thy heart haue disceaued the, because thou wylt dwell in the holes of stony rockes, and haue the hie mountaines in possession. Nevertheles, thoughe thy nestle were as hye as the Egles, yet wyll I caste the downe, sayeth the Lorde: Moreouer, Idumea shall be a wyldernes: * whoso goeth by it shalbe abashed, and wonder at al her myserable plagues. * Lyke as Sodome, Gomorra, & al the citeyes that laye ther about were turned vp side downe, sayeth the lord: so shall no body dwel in Idumea, and no man shall haue his habitacyon there. Beholde, like as the Lion, so shall a destroyer come vp frome the pleasaunte medowes of Jordan, vnto the stronge dwellyng place: and when I haue made him quiet, I wyll make him to flee from her: And all chosen men, wil I set in araye agaynste her: Who is lyke vnto me? What is he that wyll stryue wyth me? What shepehearde maye stande in my handes? * Therefore, heare the councell of the Lorde that he hathe taken vpon Idumea: And his purpose that he hath deuysed vpon the citezyns of Theman. The leest of the flocke shall teare them in peces: and loke what fayre thinge they haue, they shal make it waste: & them selues also. At the noyse of their fall, the earthe shall quake, the crye of their voyce shalbe heard vnto the redde sea. Beholde, * the enemye shal come and flie vp hyther, lyke as it were an Egle, & spreade his winges vpon Bozrah. Then shall the heartes of the worthies of Edom be as the heart of a woman trauelynge of chylde. * Vpon Damascus, Hemath, and Arphad, shall come confusion: for they shall heare enyll tydynges: They shall be tossed to and fro lyke the sea that cannot stāde styl. Damascus shalbe sore afrayde, and shal flie, trembling shal come vpon her. Sorow & payne shal ouertake her, as a woman trauelyng of childe. But howe should so worthyfull and glorious a citye be forsaken? Neare therefore, her younge men shall fall in the stretes, & all her men of warre shalbe take awaye in that tyme, sayeth the Lorde of hostes. I wyll kindle a fyre in the walles of Damascus, which shal consume the palace of Benhadad. * As for Cedar, and the kyngdome of Hazor, whom Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon smote downe, the Lorde hathe spoken thus vpon them: Aryse, and get you vp vnto Cedar, and destroye the people towarde the easte. Their tētes & their flockes shal they take away: yea, their hangynges & their vessels. Their camels also shal they carry away with the. Thyr shal crye to them. Feare is on euery syde. Flee, get you sone awaye, creape into caues, that ye may dwel there, O ye inhabitters of Hazor, sayeth the Lord: for Nabuchodonosor

Aryse, and get you vp agaynste ponder riche & careles people (sayeth the Lorde) whyche haue neither gates nor dooze barres, but dwell alone. Their camels shall be stollen, and the droues of their cattell dryuen awaye.

Moreouer, those will I scatre towarde all the wyndes: and bring them to destructiō: yea, and that thorow their own familiers, sayeth the Lorde. Yasor also shalbe a dwellyng for dragons, and an euerlastyng wildernesse: so that no bodye shall dwell there: and no man shal haue there his habitatiō.

Ese.32.d Dan.8.a

These are the wordes that the Lord spake to the prophet Jeremie, concernyng * Elā, in the begynnynge of the raygne of Zedekiah kyng of Juda. Thus saieth the Lorde of hoostes: Beholde, I wyll breake the bowe of Elam, & take away their strōgth: and vpon Elam I wyll bryngе the foure wyndes, from the foure quarters of heauē, and wyl scater them against the same foure wyndes. And there shall be no people, but some of Elam shall flie vnto them. For I will cause Elam to be afrayed of their enemyes, and of theym that seke theyr lyues: and wil bringe vpon them the indignatiō of my wrath, sayeth the Lorde. And I will persecute them, with the swearde, so longe tyll I haue brought them to naught. I wil set my throne in Elam, I wil destroy both the kynge and the princes frō thence, saith the Lorde. But in processe of tyme, I wyll bryngе Elam out of captiuite againe, saith the Lorde.

For oute of the Northe there doethe come a people agaynste her: whyche make her lande so waste, that no bodye dwell therin, neither man nor beaste: for they flye and departe from thence. * In those dayes, and at that tyme, sayeth the Lorde: the chyldren of Israell shall come, they and the children of Juda, weppynge and makynge haste, and shall seke the Lorde theyr GOD. They shall aske the waye to Syon, thyther shal they turne theyr faces, sayinge: Come and we wyll cleaue to the Lorde, in a conenaūt that neuer shalbe broken.

My people hath bene a lost * flocke, my shepherdes haue disceaued them, and haue made them go astraye vpon the hilles. They haue gone frō the mountayne to the litle hyl, and forgotten their folde. All they that came vpon thē, haue deuoured thē: and theyr enemies saide: We haue made no faute againste them: for they haue displeased the Lorde: yea, euen the Lorde, whiche is the bewtie of their righteousnes, and that wedded their fathers. Yet shall ye flie from Babylon, and departe out of the lande of the Chaldees, and be ye as the rammes that goe before the flocke. * For lo, I wyll make vp an hoste of people frome the Northzen lande, and bryngе theym vpon Babylon: these shall lape sege to it, and wynne it. Theyr arowes shall not misse, ythe as a connynge archer shooteth not wronge. And the Chaldees shall be spoyled, and all they that spoyle them, shall be satisfyed, sayeth the Lorde, * although ye were so chearefull and gladde, to treade downe myne heritage, and fulfylled youre pleasures, as the calues in the grasse, & triumphed ouer thē like the bulles, when ye had gotte the victory. your mothers shalbe sore confounded, & they that bare you, shall come to shame. She shalbe the least set by among the nacyons: bare, wasted, and dried vp. No mā shalbe able to dwell there, for the feare of the Lorde, but she shall be whole desolate.

Beholde, I speake vnto thee, O thou proude, sayth the Lorde God of hoostes: for thy daye shall come, euen the tyme of thy vysytacyon. And the proude shall stomble and fall, and no manne shal helpe him vp. I will burne vp his cyties with fyre, and it shall consume all that is rounde aboute him. Thus sayeth the Lord of hoostes: The chyldren of Israell and F Juda, suffre vyolence together. All they that haue theym in captyuitie, kepe them faste, and will not let them go, but theyr auenger and redemer is myghtye, whose name is the LORDE of Hoostes: he shall

The swearde shall come vpon the Chaldees, sayeth the Lorde, vpon them that dwell in Babylon, vpon their paynces, and vpon theyr wise men. The swearde vpon their sothsayers, as for those, they shall become fooles.
The swearde vpon theyr worthies, so that they shall stande in feare. The sword vpon their horsemen & charettes & vpon all the commen people that dwell vnder theym: so that they shall all become lyke women.
The swearde vpon their treasure, so that it shall be stollen awaye. A drought vpon theyr waters, so that they shalbe dried vp. ¶ The.li. Chapter.

Thus hath the Lord sayd: * behelde, I wyl rayse vp a peeceleus wynde agaīst Babilon and her cytezens, that beare enyll wyll agaynst me. I wil sende also into Babylon fanners, to fanne her out, and to destroye her lande: for in the daye of her trouble, they shall be about her on euerye syde. Moreouer, the Lorde hathe sayde vnto the bowe men, and to them that clime ouer the walles in brest plates. Ye shall not spare her yong men: hyll downe all her hoste. Thus the slayne shall fall downe in the land of the Chaldees, and the wounded in the stretes. * As for Israell & Juda, they shall not be forsaken of theyr God, of the Lorde of hostes, for the holy one of Israels sake: no, thoughe they haue fylled al theyr lande full of synne, * Flye away from Babylon, euerye man saue his lyfe, that ye be not rooted out with her wyckednesse: for the tyme of the Lordes vengeaūce is come: yea, he wyll rewarde her agaynst, Babilon hathe bene in the Lordes hande, * a golde cuppe that maketh al landes droncken. Of her wine haue all people dronckē: therfore, are they out of their wyttes. * But sodēlie is Babilon fallen, and destroyed. Mourne for her, bringe plasters for her woundes, yf she maye paraduenture be healed agayne.

We would haue made Babylō whole, saye they: but she is not recouered. Therefore wil we let her alone, and go euery mā into hys owne countreye. For her iudgemente is come into heuē, & is gone vp to the cloudes. The Lorde hathe brought forth oure righteousnes. And therfore come on, we wil shewe Sion the worcke of the Lorde oure God. Make sharpe the arowes, and multiplye youre shyldes: * for the Lorde shall rayse vp the spirite of the kynge of the Medees, whiche hathe al ready a desyre to destroye Babylon. This shall be the vengeaunce of the Lorde, and the vengeaunce of hys temple. Set vp tokens vpon the walles of Babylon: make youre watche stronge, set youre watchmen in araye: yea, holde pleuye watches: and yet for al that shall the Lorde go forthe wyth the deuyce, wherwyth he hathe taken vpon theym that dwell in Babylon. O thou that dwellest by the great waters, O thou that haste so greate treasure and ryches, thyne ende is come, and the reckening of thy wynninges. * The Lorde of hoostes hathe swoorne by hym selfe, that he wyll ouerwhelme thee with menne, lyke grethoppers in number: whiche with a courage shall crye, alarum, alarum, agaynste thee. * yea, euen the Lorde of Hoostes, that wyth hys power made the earthe, wyth hys wysedome prepared the rounde worlde, and wyth hys discretion spred out the heauens. As soone as he letteth hys voyce be heard, the waters in the ayre ware fearce.

* He drayweth vp the cloudes from the endes of the erth. He turneth the lightninges to rayne, he bringeth the wyndes oute of theyr secrete places. If they be esteemed by theyr wysedome, all menne are become fooles. * Confounded be all the casters of ymages: for the thynge that they make is but disceate, and hath no breath. Vayne is it, and an erronyouse worcke: and in the tyme of visitacion it shall perisshe. Neuertheles, the portiō of Jacob is none such, but he that made al thinges, whose name is the Lorde of hoostes, he is the rodde of his enherytaunce. Thou hast bene myne hammer and weapons for warre: for with thee haue I broke the people in peces: and with thee haue I destroyed kyngdomes. Thorowe thee I haue beaten to poulder hosse, and horseman: yea, the charettes and suche as satte vpon them. Thorowe thee, I haue broken man and woman, olde and yonge, bacheler and mayden. Thorowe thee I haue destroyed the shepherde & hys flock, the husbandeman and his cattel, the prynces and the rulers. Therfore wyl I reward the cytie of Babylon, and all her cytezins, the Chaldees with all the euil which they haue done vnto Sion: yea, that ye youre selues shall see it, sayth the Lorde: Beholde, I come vpon the, thou noysome hyl, saieth the Lorde: thou that destroyest all landes: I wyll stretche out my hande ouer the, and caste the downe from the stony roches: and wyll make the a brente hyll: so that neither corner stones, nor pinacles, nor foundaciōs of stones shalbe take any more oute of the, but waste and desolate shalte thou lye for euermore, sayeth the Lorde: Set vp a token in the lande: blowe the trompettes among the heythen: prouoke the nacyons against her, call the kyngdomes of Ararat, Mennis and Aschanes agaynste her. Set the prince agaynste her: bring as great a sorte of terryble horses agaynste her, as yf they were gresshoppers. Prepare agaynste them the people of the Medes with theyr kinges, prynces, and al their chiefe rulers: yea, and the whole lande that is vnder hym. The lande also shall shake, and be afrayed whē the deuyse of the Lorde shall come forthe agaynste Babylon: to make the lande of Babylon so waste, that nohman shal dwel any more therin. The worthyes of Babilō shall leaue the batayle, and kepe thē selues in strong holdes, their strength hath failed them, they shalbe like wemen. For the destroyers shall come vpon her (euen vpõ Babilon) which shal take theyr weapõs, and breake their bowes: for God is

Yea, sayeth the Lorde: I wyll make theyr princes, their wise men, their chefe rulers, and all their worthies dronken: So that they shall slepe an euerlastynge slepe, and neuer wake. Thus sayeth the kyng, whose name is the Lorde of Hoostes. Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde of Hoostes, The thicke wal of Babylon shalbe broken, and her hie gates shalbe brent vp. And the thig that the Gentyles, and the people haue wrought with great trauayle and laboure shall come to noughte and be consumed in the fire. This is the charge that Jeremye gaue vnto Saraiah the sonne of Neriah, the sonne of Maasiah, when he went towarde Babilon with Zedekiah the kynge of Juda, in the fourth yeare of his raygne. Nowe this Saraiah was a peaceable ptice, Jeremye wrote in a booke, all the miserye that shoulde come vpon Babilon: yea, and all these sermons that be written agaynst Babilon, and gaue Saraiah thys charge. When thou commest vnto Babylon, see that thou reade all these wordes, and saye: O Lorde, thou art determined to rote oute this place, so that neither people nor catell shal dwell there any more, but to lye waste for euer: and when thou hast reade out the boke, bynde a stone to it, and caste it in the middeſt of Euphrates, and ſay: Euen thus ſhall Babilon ſynche, and be thruſt doune with the burthen of trouble; that I wyll bryng vpō her: ſo that ſhe ſhal neuer come vp agayne. Thus farre are the preachynges of Jeremy.

*And in the fourth moneth, the ninth day of the moneth, there was ſo greate honger in the cytie: that there was no more vitayles for the people of the lād. So al the ſouldiers brake away, and fled out of the citye by nyghte thorowe the waye of the porte betwene the two walles of the kynges gardē. Now the Chaldees had compaſſed the citie rounde about, yet went thele men their waye towarde the wyldernelle. And ſo the Chaldees folowed vpon them, and toke Zedekiah the kynge in the felde of Jericho, when his hoſt was runne from him: So they caried the kinge awaye priſoner to Reblath, vnto the kynge of Babilon in the lande of Hemath; * where he gaue iudgemente vpon him. Moreouer, he put out the eyes of Zedekiah, & cauſed him to be bounde with two chaynes, to be caried vnto Babilon: and let him lye in priſon, tyll he died. Nowe the tenth daye of the fifth moneth in the ninth yeare of Nabuchodonoſor the kyng of Babilon, Nabuſaradan the chiefe captayne and the kynge of Babilons ſeruaunte, came vnto Jeruſalem, and brente vp the houſe of the Lord. the kynge of Babilon: yea, & what people as yet remayned: Nabuſaradan the chiefe captayne caried them awaye priſoners. But the poore people of the countrey, did Nabuſaradā the chiefe captayne leaue in the lande, to occupy the vineyardes and felde. The Chaldees alſo brake the braſen pillers that were in the houſe of the lord: yea, the ſeate and the braſen lauer that was in the houſe of the Lorde: and caryed al the metall of them vnto Babilon. They toke away alſo the Cauldrons, ſhouels, fleſhookes, ſprynklers, ſpones, and all the braſen veſſel, that was occupyed in the ſeruice: with the balens, colepannes, ſprinklers, pottes, cādleſticckes, ſpones, & cuppes: whereof ſome were of golde, and ſome of ſyluer. The chiefe captayne tooke alſo the two pyllers, the lauer, the twelue braſen bullockes that ſtode vnder the ſeate * which kynge Salomon made in the houſe of the Lorde: And all the veſſell contayned ſo muche metall, that it might not be weyed. For euerye pyller was eyghteene cubytes hye: and the cope that went about it, was twelue cubytes and foure fyngers thicke, and rounde. Nowe vpon the cope were braſen knoppes, and euerye knoppe was fyue cubytes hye: and vpon the knoppes were whopes, and pomgranates, rounde aboute of cleane braſſe. After thys maner were bothe the pyllers faſhioned wyth the pomegranates, whereof there were an hundred and.xcbi. whych hanged vpon the whopes rounde aboute. The chiefe captaine alſo toke Saraiah the hye prieſte, and Sophoniah that was chefe next him, and the thre keepers of the treaſurye. He tooke oute of the Cytye a Chamberlayne, whiche was a captayne of the ſouldyers, and ſeuen men that were the kynges ſeruauntes, whiche were founde in the citye: & Sepher a captayne that dyed to muſter the men of warre, with thre ſcore menne of the countreye that were taken in the cytye. Thre. 4.b

A LAs, how hathe the lord darckned the doughter of Sion so sore in hys wrath? As for the honour of Israel, he hathe caste it downe from heauen vnto the earth. How happeneth it, that he remē bred not hys owne foote stole when he was angrye? The Lorde hathe caste downe all the habitacions of Jacob without anye fauoure: al the stronge places of the dough-ter of Juda hathe he broken in his wrathe, and throwen them downe to the grounde: her kyngedome, & her princes hath he suspended. In the wrathe of his indignacion he hathe broken all the horne of Israell: he hathe wythdrawen hys eyght hande from the enemye: yea, a flame of fyre is kyndled in Jacob, and hathe consumed vp all rounde about. He hathe bente his bowe lyke an enemye: he hathe fastened, hys eyghte hande as an aduersarye: and euery thing that was pleasaūt to se, hathe smitten it downe. He hathe poured oute hys wrath lyke a fyre into the tabernacle of the doughter of Sion. The lord is become like as it were an enemie, he hath deuoured Israel, and al his palaces: yea, all his stronge holdes hathe he destroyed, and kylled the doughter of Juda with muche sorow & heuynesse. Her tabernacle (whiche was like a garden of pleasure) hath he destroyed: her hie solepne feastes, hath he put down. The lorde hath brought it so to passe, that the hie solempne feastes & Sabbothes in Sion, are cleane forgotten. In his yeuy displea-to be despysed. The Lorde hathe forsaken his owne aulter, & hathe abhorred hys owne Sanctuarye, and hathe geuen the walles of their towres into the handes of the e-nemye. They yr enemyes made a noyse in the house of the Lorde, as it had bene in a solempne feaste daye. The Lorde thought to breake downe the walles of the doughter vision from the Lorde. The senatours of the doughter Sion syt vpon the grounde in silence: they haue strawed ashes vpon their heades, and gyrded them selues with hange downe theyr heades to the grounde.

mothers: where is meate, and dryncke? for whyle they so sayde, they fell downe in the doughter of Jerusalem, to whome shall I lycken the? To whome shall I compare the. O thou doughter Sion, to comforte the wythall? Thy hurte is lyke a mayne sea, who maye heale the? * Thy prophelet vs deuoure, for the tyme that we loked for, is come: we haue founde and sene it.

The Lorde hathe fulfylled the thinge, that he was purposed to do: & performed that, that he had denysed longe a go: he hathe destroyed, and not spared. He hathe caused thine aduersarie to triumphe ouer the, and set vp the horne of thyne enemye. * Let

¶ The. iii. Chapter.

A I Am the man, that (thorowe the rodde of his wrath) haue experience of miserye.
He dryue me forthe, and led me: yea, into darcknesse, but not into light. Against me onely he turneth his hande, and layeth it euer vpō me. My flesche, and my skinne hath he made olde, and my bones hathe he brused. He hathe buylded rounde aboute me, and closed me in with gall, and trauayle.
He hathe set me in darckenes, as they that be deade for euer. He hathe so hedged me in, that I cannot get oute, and hathe layed heuy lynckes vpon me. Thoughe I crye and call pyteouslye, yet heareth he not my prayeer. He hath stopped vp my waies with foure squared stones, and made my pathes
B croked. He layeth wayte for me lyke a Beare, and as a Lyon, in a hole. He hathe marred my waies, & broken me in peces, he hathe layed me waste al togerther. He hath bēt his bowe, & made me as it wer a marke to shot at: The arowes of his quyuer hath he shot euen into myne reynes. * I am laughed to scorne of all my people, they Jer. xx. b make songes vpon me all the daye longe.
He hath fylled me with bitternes, & geuen me wormewoode to dryncke. He hath smytē my teth in peces with stones, & rolled me
C in the dust. He hath put my soule out of rest, I forget al good thinges. I thoughte in my selfe: I am vndone, there is no hope for me in the lord. O remembre yet my misery, and my trouble, the wormwod and the gal. Yea, thou shalt remembre them, for my soule melteth away in me. Whyle I cōsidre these thinges in my hearte, I get a hope againe. Namely, it is of the Lordes mercyes that we are not vtterly consumed. For truelye his pyteful compassion hath not ceased. Newe mercies shall the Lord shewe vpō the ery, yea, in the daye spryngē, (O Lorde) great is thy faithfulnesse. * The Lord is my porcio pla. 16. a on, sayeth my soule, therfore wil I hope in him. O how good is the lord vnto the, that put their trust in him, and to the soule that seeketh after him? The good man with stilnes & patience tarieth, for the health of the Lorde. O howe good is it for a man, to take D the yoche vpon him from his youth vp. He sitteth alone, he holdeth him stil, and dwelleth quietly vp him selfe. He layeth his face vpon the earth, yf (percase) there happen to be any hope. He offereth hys cheke to the smyter, he wyll be contente with reproues. i. Re. ii. b For the lord wil not forsake for ever, * but though he punysche vs therwyth: yet accordynge to the multetude of his mercyes, he receaueth to grace againe: For he doth not plage, and caste out the children of men from his hert. To treade all the prisoners of the earthe vnder hys fete. To moue the iudgement of man before the most highest. To condēpne a mā in his cause. The Lord hath not plea- E sure in suche thinges. What is he then that sayeth: there shoulde somethynge be done without the Lordes cōmaundement. Out of the mouthe of the moste hyghest goeth not euell, and good. Wherfore then murmureth the lyuinge mā? let vs murmure Job. 31. b at his owne synne. * Let vs loke wel vpon pla. 14. a our owne waies, and remēbre our selues, & turne agayne to the Lorde. Let vs lifte vp oure hertes with oure hāds vnto the Lord that is in heauen. We haue bene dysclembelers, and haue offended, wyle thou therfore not be intreated? Thou haste couered vs in thy wrath, & persecuted vs, thou haste slaine vs without any fauoure. * Thou hast hyd Lc. 35. b. thy selfe in a cloude, that our praier should not go thorowe. Thou haste made vs oute castes, & to be despised amonge the people. Al oure enemyes gape vpon vs. Feare, and pyte is come vpon vs: yea, decayte and destruccion. * Whole riuers of water gushe Tren. i. d oute of myne eyes, for the greate hurte of my people. Myne eyes runne, and cannot cease, for there is no rest. O Lord, when wylte thou loke downe from heauen, and considre? Myne eye breaketh my heart: be- F cause of al the doughters of my citie. Mine enemyes hunted me oute sharpely, lyke a birde. yea, and that wythout a cause. They haue put downe my lyfe into a pit, & they haue caste stones vpon me. They powred water vpō my heade, then thought I: now am I vndone. I called vpon thy name, O Lorde, out of the depe pyt. Thou hast herde my voyce: and hast not turned away thine eares fro my sighyng and crienge. Thou hast enclined thy selfe vnto me, whē I called vpon the, and haste sayde: feare not.
Thou (O Lorde) hast maintened the cause of my soule, and haste redemed my lyfe. O G Lord thou hast sene my blasphemers, take thou my cause vpō the. Thou hast wel considred howe they go about to do me harme, and that all their counsels are against me.

Thou haste hearde their dyspytefull wor-des(O Lorde) yea, and all their ymagina-cions agaynst me. The lippes of myne enemues, & their deuices that they take agaist me, all the daye long. Thou sepst also their syttyng downe, and their rysynge vp: they make their songes of nothynge but of me.
Rewarde them(O Lorde)accordyng to the worckes of their handes. Geue them an obstinate hearte: euen thy curse. Persecute them(O Lord) with thine indignacion, and cote them oute from vnder the heauen.

¶ The.iiii. Chapter.

How is the gold become so dimme? how is the goodly coulsure of it so sore chaunged? and the stones of the Sanctuarie thus scatred in the cozner of e-uery stretes? The children of Sion that were alwaye in honour, & clothed with the most precyous gold: how are they nowe become like the earthē vessels which be made wyth the potters hāde? The dragons geue their yongons sucke with bare brestes: but the doughter of my people is cruel, & dwelleth in the wildernes: like the Estriches. The songes of the sucking children, cleue to the rofe of their mouthes for very thirst. The yong children aske bread, but there is no mā that geueth it them. They that were wont to fare delycatelye, perysche in the stretes: they that afore were brought vp in purple, make nowe muche of donge. The sinne of the doughter of my people is become greater then the wickednesse of Sodome, that sodenly was destroyed, and not taken with hādes. Her abstepners (or Nazarees) were whyter then the snow or milke: their coloure was fayrer, redde as Coral, their bewtye lyke the Saphire. But nowe their faces be very blacke. In so much, that thou shouldest not knowe them in the stretes.
Their skinne cleueth to their bones. It is wythered and become lyke a drye stocke.
They that be slayne with the swearde are happyer then suche as dye of honger, and pery he awaye, stamysching for the fruites of the felde. The wemen (whiche of nature are pytyfull) haue sodden their owne children with their hādes, that they might be their meate in the miserable destruction of the doughter of my people. The Lord hath perfourmed his hewe wyath: he hathe powred out the furyousnesse of hys displeasure. He hath kindled a fire in Sion, which hath consumed the foundacions ther-of. Neither the kinges of the earth, nor all the inhabitours of the worlde, would haue beleued that the enemye & aduersary shuld haue come in at the gates of the cytye of Jerusalem. Whyche neuertheles is come to passe for the synne of her prophetes, and for the wyckednesse of her Priestes: that haue shed innocentes blonde within her.
So that the blynde men wente stomblyng in the stretes, and stained them selues with blonde. They wouldē in no wyse touche their garmētes. But they cried vnto euery man, flee the polutyng, away, gette you hence, touche it not. yea, they fledde, and remoued from theym: yea, they haue sayde among the hethen, they shal no more dwell in this cytye. The countenaunce of the Lorde hath banished them, and shal neuer loke more vpō them. For they them selues neyther regarded the priestes, nor pytyed their elders. Wherefore yet oure eyes fayle vs, whyle we loke for vayne helpe: seynge we be euer waiting vpō a people, that can do vs no good. They laye so sharpe wayte for vs, that we cannot go safe vpō the stre-tes: for oure ende is come, oure dayes are fulfylled, oure ende is here. Our persecuters are swyfter then the Aegles of the ayre, they followed vpō vs ouer the moutaynes, and layed wayte for vs in the wil-dernesse. The bery breth of oure mouthe: euen the anoynted Lord him selfe, was taken in their net, of whom we saye: Vnder his shadowe, we shalbe preserued amonge the heythen. And thou (O doughter Edō) that dwellest in the lande of Hus, be glad and reioyce: for the cuppe shal come vnto the also, which when thou suppest of, thou shalte be dronchen. Thy sinnes be wel punished, (O thou doughter Sion) he shall not suffer the to be caried away any more.
But thy wyckednes (O doughter Edom) shal he visit, & for thy sinnes sake, he shall leade the into captiuitye.

¶ The prayer of Jeremye.

CAll to remēbrance (O Lord) what we haue suffred, considre, and se our con fusion. Our enheritance is turned to the straūgers, & our houses to the aleanes.
We are become careful & fatherles, & oure mothers are as the wyddowes. We are faine to drinck our owne water for money, & our owne wod must we bie with money.
Oure neckes are vnder persecucion, we are weery, and haue no reste. Afore tyme we yelded oure selues to the Egipcyans, and nowe to the Assyrians, only that we might haue bread ynough. Our fathers (which nowe are gone) haue synned, and we must beare

beare their wickednes. Seruauntes haue the rule of vs, and no man delyuereth vs oute of their handes. We muste get oure lyuynge wyth the parell of oure lyues, because of the drouthe of the wildernes. Oure skynne is as it had bene bake in an oue, for verie sore honger. The wiues are ravished in Sion, and the maydens in the cityes of Juda. The princes are hanged vp with the hande of the enemyes, they haue not spared the olde sage men, they haue taken yonge mennes liues from them, and the boyes are hanged vp vpon trees. The elders sye no more vnder the gates, & the yonge men se no more playinge of musycke. The ioye of oure heart is gone, oure merry quyer is turned into mournynge. The garlande of oure heade is fallen: alas, that euer we synned so sore. Therfore, oure hearte is full of heuynes, and oure eyes dymme: because of the hil of Sion, that is destroyed. Iuls much, that the foxes runne vpon it. But thou, O Lord, that remaynest for euermore, and thy seate worde withoute ende: wherfore wilt thou styll forget vs, & forsake vs so longe?

Iere. 31.c * O Lorde turne thou vs vnto the, and so shal we be turned. Renne oure dayes as in olde tymes, for thou haste banysshed vs nowe longe ynough, and hast bene sore displeased at vs.

¶ The booke of the Prophete Ezechiel.

IT chaunced in the .xxx. yeare, the fyfthe daye of the fourthmoneth, that I was amonge the prisoners by the riuer of Cobar: wher the heaues opened, and I sawe a vision of God. Nowe the fyfthe daye of the moneth, made oute the fyfthe yere of kinge Joachins captiuitie. At the same time came the word of the Lorde vnto Ezechiel, the sonne of Buzi the priest, in the lande of the Caldees, by the water

Ezec. 1.a of Cobar, * where the hande of the LORD came vpon him. And I loked, and beholde,

B a stormye wynde came oute of the North, wyth a great cloude full of fyre, whyche with hys glister lightened al rounde about. And in the myddeste of the fyre it was all cleare lyke the face of an aungell, and as it were the lyknes of the foure beastes, and this was their likenesse. They were fashioned lyke a man: sauynge, that euerye one had foure faces, and foure wynges. Their legges were strayght, but their fete were lyke bullockes fete, & they glistered, as it had bene fayre scoured metal. Vnder their winges, vpo al the foure corners they had mens hades. Their faces, and their winges were towarde the foure corners: yet were the wynges so, that one ouertouched another. When they wet, they turned them about: but eche one went streight forwarde. Furthermore this was the symilytude of their faces. * Vpon the right syde of thele foure, their faces wer like the face of a ma, and the face of a Lyon. But vpon the lefte syde, they had the face of an oxe, & the face of an Aegle. Their faces also and their winges wer spred out about: so that two winges of one touched euer two wynges of another, & with the other they couered their body. Euery one whe it wet, it wet streight forwarde. Where as the spyryte led them, thyther they wente, * and turned not about in their goynge. The fashion, & countenaunce of the beastes was lyke hoate coales of fyre, euen as thoughe burnynge creatures had bene amonge the beastes: (this was the vision) and the fire gaue a glister, and out of the fyre there wet lyghteninge. When the beastes wente forwarde & backwarde, one wouldе haue thoughte it had lyghtened. Nowe when I had wel considered the beastes, I sawe a worke of wheles vpon the earthe, wyth foure faces also nye vnto the beastes. The fashion & worke of the wheles was lyke the sea. The foure wheles were ioyned and made (to loke vpon) as it had bene one whele in another. When one wente forwarde, they wente all foure, and turned them not about in their goynges. They were large, greate, and horyble to loke vpon. They had eyes rounde about them all foure. When the beastes wente, the wheles went also wyth them. And when the beastes lyfte them selues vp from the earthe, the wheles were lyfte vp also. Whether soeuer the spyryte wente, thyther went they also, and the wheles were lyfte vp, and folowed them: for the spyryte of lyfte was in the wheles. When the beastes wente forthe, stode styll, or lyfte them selues from the earth, then the wheles also wente, stode styll, & were lyfte vp, for the spirite of lyfte was in the wheles. Aboue, ouer the heades of the beastes there was a firmamẽt, whiche was fashioned as it had bene of the moste pure Christall, and that was spredе oute aboue vpon their heades: vnder the same same firmamente were theyr wynges laide F abroade, one towarde another, & two win-ges couered the body of euery beaste. And when they went forth, I heard the noise of their winges, lyke the noyse of greate waters, as it had bene the voyce of the greate God, and a rushyng together as it were of an hoost of men. And when they stode styl, they let downe theyr wynges. Howe who they stode stil, and had letten downe theyr wynges, it thondred in the firmamēt that was aboue their heades. Aboue the firmamēt that was ouer their heades, there was G the fashion of a seate, as it had bene made Eze.8.a. of Saphir. Upō the seate there sat one like a man. * I beheld him, and he was lyke an aungell, as it hadde bene all of fyre with in from his loines vpwarde. And beneth, whē I loked vpon him vnder the loynes, me thought he was like a shynig fire, that geueth light on euery syde. yea, the shine and glystre that lightened roūde aboute, was like a rainbowe, which in a rainie day ap-peareth in the cloudes. Euen so was the fumilitude, wherin the glorye of the Lorde appeared. When I sawe it, I fell vpon my face, and herkened vnto the voyce of hym that spake.

The sendynge out of the Prophet.

¶ The.ii. Chapter.

A And then sayde he vnto me. Stande vp vpon thy feete (O thou sonne of Eze.3.d mā) and I wil talke with the. * And as he was communyng with me, the spirite came into me, and sette me vp vpon my feete: so that I marked the thynge, that he sayde vnto me. And he sayde: Beholde, B thou sonne of manne: I wyll sende thee to the children of Israell, to those runnagates and obstinate people: for they haue taken me: * both they and theyr forefathers vnto this day: yea, I wyll sende the vnto a people that haue rough hi sages, and stiffe fo-sonne of manne) feare them not, neither be afrayed of theyr wordes: for prouokers & thornes are with the. yea, thou doest dwell among scorpions: but feare not their wor-des, be not abashed at theyr lookes, for it is a frowarde housholde. Se that thou speake my wordes vnto thē, whether they be obedient or not, for they are obstinate.

Therefore, thou sonne of man, obey thou all thynges that I saye vnto thee, and be not thou stiffnecked, lyke as they are a stiff-necked housholde. Open thy mouthe, and W eate that I gene the. So as I was lokyng by, behold, there was sent vnto me an hād, wherin was closed * a boke: and the hande Apo.b.a. opened it before me, & it was written within and without ful of carefull mourninges: alas, and woo.

¶ The.iii. Chapter.

After this, saide he vnto me: Thou A sonne of man, eate that, whatsoeuer it be: yea, * eate that boke, and go Jer.xb.c thy waye, and speake vnto the children of Apo.x.b. Israell: So I opened my mouth, & he gaue Thou sonne of man, thy belye shall eate, & thy bowels shall be fylled with the booke, that I geue the. Then did I eate the boke, * & it was in my mouth sweter then hony.

the to those people, they would folowe the.
But the house of Israell wyll not folowe thee, for they wyll not folowe me: yea, all the house of Israel haue stiffe foreheades & harde hearres. * Beholde therfore, I wil Mic.3.b. make thy face pseuaile against their faces, & harden thy foreheade agaynst their foreheades: so that thy foreheade shall be harder then an * Adamant or flynt stone: that Esay.l.b thou mayest feare the not the lesse, and be lesse afrayed of theym, for they are a frowarde C housholde. He sayde moreouer vnto me: thou sonne of man, take diligently hede with thyne eares, to the wordes that I speake vnto the, fasten them in thine heerte: and go to the prisoners of thy people, speake vnto them, and saye on thys maner: Thus the Lorde God hath spoken: whether ye heare, or heare not. With that the spirite tooke me vp. And I hearde the noyse of a greate rushynge and remouynge of the most blef-sed glorye of the Lorde out of his place.
I heard also the noyse of the wynges of the beastes, that rushed one agaynste another: yea, and the rattynge of the wheles, that were by theym, whyche rushyng and noyse was very greate. * Howe when the Eze.8.a spirite tooke me vp, and caried me away, I and.xi.b. went with an heuy and a sorowfull minde, but the hande of the Lorde comforted me eyghte soone. And so in the begynnyng of D the moneth Abib, I came to the prysoners, pf.137.a.
* that dwelte by the water of Cobar, and remayned in that place, where they were:

And

And so contynued I amonge them seuen daies, beinge very sorie. And whē the seuē Eze.33.b daies were expired, the Lorde sayde vnto me: * Thou sonne of man, I haue made thee a watchman vnto the house of Israell: therefore take good hede to the wordes of E my mouth, and gene them warnynge at my cernynge the vngodly man, that (without doubte) he muste dye, and thou genest hym not warnynge, nor speakest vnto him, that he maye turne from his euell waye, and so to lyue: Then shall the same vngodly man the ryghteous, that he sinne not, and so the ryghteous do not synne: then shal he lyue, because he hathe receaued thy warninge, & thou hast discarged thy soule. And there came the hande of the Lorde vpon me, and he said vnto me: Stāde vp, and go into the felde, that I maye there talke with the. So when I had rysen vp, and gone forthe into the felde: Beholde, the glorye of the Lorde Exe.1.a, stode there, * lyke as I sawe it afore, by Eze.1.a the water of Cobar. * Then fell I downe G vpon my face, and the spirit came into me, whiche set me vp vpon my fete, and sayde thus vnto me: Go thy waye, and shut thy selfe in thyne house. Beholde, (O thou sonne of man) there shal chaynes be brought for-the, to bynde the withal, so that thou shalt not escape out of them. And I wyll make thy tunge cleue so to the rofe of thy mouth, that thou shalt be domme, and not be as a chyder wyth them: for it is an obstynate housholde. But when I speake vnto the, the open thy mouth, and say: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: whoso heareth, let hym heare: whoso wyl not, let hym leaue, for it is an obstinate housholde.

¶ The.iiii. Chapter.

H THou sonne of mā: take a tyle stone, & laye it before the, & describe vpō it the citie of Jerusalem, how it is beseged, how bulwarkes & stroge diches are graue on euery side of it: describe also tentes, & an hoost of men rounde about it, with engines of warre. Moreouer, take an yron panne, & set it betwyxte the, and the citye, in stede of an yron wall. Then set thy face towarde it, besege it, and laye ordinaunce against it, to wynne it. This shalbe a token vnto the house of Israell. But thou shalte slepe vpon thy lefte syde, and laye the synne of the house of Israel vpon the. Certaine daic Then fell I downe vpon my face, and cried with a loude voyce, sayinge: O Lorde God, wylte thou then vtterly destroye al the remnaunte in Israel? And so the worde of the Lord came vnto me on thys maner: thou sonne of man: thy brethren, thy kynsfolke, and the whole house of Juda, whych dweli at Jerusalem, saye: Wythdrawe ye farre fom the Lorde, for the lande is gruen vs in possession. Therfore tell them, thus sayeth the Lorde god: I wil sende you farre amonge the Heathen, and skatre you amonge the nacions, and I wyl halow you but a lytle, in the landes where ye shal come. Tell them also, thus saieth the Lord God: I will gather you agayne oute of the nacīōs, & bryngе you from the countrees where ye be scatred, and wyll gene you the lande of Israel agayne. And they shall comme thyther. And they shall take awaye all their Idols, & all their abhominations d

But loke whose hertes are dyspoled to folowe theyr abhominations & wicked lyuinges: those mens dedes wyl I bryngе vpon their owne heades, sayeth the Lorde God. At euen I brake downe an hole thorowe the wall, with my hande: and when it was darcke, I toke the gere vpon my shoulders, and bare them oute in theyr syghte.
C And in the morynge, came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, yf Israell that frowarde householde aske the, and saye: what doest thou there? Then tell them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: This punysshemente toucheth the chiefe rulers at Jerusalem, and all the house of Israell, that dwell amonge them: Tell them: I am youre cheve token: like as I haue done, so shall it happen vnto you: Fyre shal ye also, & go into captyuitie. * The chefeste that is amonge you, Jer.21.b. 24.b 32.a Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, with a fearfull trembynge shalte thou eate thy breade, wyth carefulnesse, & sorowe shalt thou drinke thy watere. And vnto the people of the lande, speake thou on this maner: Thus sayeth the Lorde God, to them that dwell in Jerusalem, and to the lande of Israell: ye shall eate youre breade with sorow, and drynche youre water with heuynesse: yea, the lande with the fulnesse therof shalbe layde waste, for the wyckednesse of them that dwell therin. And the cityes that nowe be well occupyed, shall be boyde, and the lande desolate: that ye maye knowe, howe that I

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Beholde, thou sonne of man: The house of Israel sayeth on this maner: Tushe, as for the vision that he hathe sene, it wyll be manye a day or it come to passe: It is farre of yet the thynge that he prophecyeth. Therfore saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: All my wordes shal no more be slacke: Loke what I speake, that same shall come to passe, sayeth the Lorde.

Contra pphetas falsos prophetes.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, Speake, prophecie agaīst those prophetes, that preach in Israel: & say thou vnto them that prophecie out of their owne heartes: Heare the worde of the lord, thus sayeth the Lorde god: * Wo be vnto those folishe prophetes, Eze.34.b

Myne handes shall come vpon the prophetes that loke oute vayne thynges, & preache lyes: they shall not be in the counsell of my people, nor wrytten in the booke of the house of Israell, nether shall they come in the lande of Israel: that ye maye knowe, howe that I am the Lorde God. Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God: I will breake oute in my worthefull displeasure wyth a storme wynde, so that in myne anger there shall come a myghtie shower of rayne, and hayle stones in my wrathe, to destroy with

As for the wall that ye haue dawbed wyth vntempered mortar, I will breake it downe, make it euen wyth the grounde: so that the foundacion thereof shall remone, and it shall fall: yea, and ye youre selues shall perysh in the myddest thereof: to learne you for to knowe, that I am the Lorde: Thus will I perfourme my wrath vpon this wall, and vpon them that haue dawbed it wyth vntempered mortar, and then will I saye vnto you: The wall is gone, and the dawbers are awaye. There are the prophetes of Israell, whyche prophecie vnto the citie of Jerusalem, and loke out visions of peace for them, whereas no peace is, sayeth the Lorde God. Then came the word of the lorde vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, these men beare their vnclennes in their hertes, & go purposlye vpon the stomblynge blocke of their own wickednesse: shuld I the answere at their requeste? Therfore speake vnto the, & say: thus saieth the lorde God: Euery man of the house of Israel, that beareth his vncleane Idols in his heerte, purposlynge to stomble in his owne wyckednesse, and commeth to a prophet, to enquyre any thing at me by him: vnto that man wyl I the Lorde my selfe geue answere, accordynge to the multitude of his ydols: that the house of Israell maye be snared in their owne hertes, because they be clene gone fro me, for their abhominacions sakes. They shall comforte you, when ye se theyr wayes and workes: and ye shal know, how that it is not without a cause, that I haue done so agaynst Jerusalē, as I dyd, sayeth the Lorde God.

¶ The. xv. Chapter.

A THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man: What commeth of the vine among all other trees: & of the wilde vine locke among all other timbre of the groue? Do men take wod of it, to make any worke withal? Or may there a nayle be made of it, to hange anye thinge vpon: Beholde, it is caste in the fire to be brent, the fire cōsumeth both the endes of it, the myddest is brent to asshes. Is it mete then for anye worke? No. Seyng then, that it was mete for no worke, B beyng whole: muche lesse maye there anye thing be made of it, when the fire hath cōsumed & brent it. And therfore thus sayeth the Lord God: Like as I cast the vine into the fyre for to be brent, as other trees of the wooder Euen so will I do with them that dwell in Jerusalem, and set my face against Eze. 12. c. and. 22. b them: they shall go out of the fire, and yet the fyre shall consume theym. * Then shall ye knowe: that I am the Lorde, when I set my face agaynste them, and make the lande waste: becaūse they haue so sore offended, sayeth the Lorde God.

AGayne, the worde of the Lord spake vnto me, saying: Thou sōne of mā, A shew the cittie of Jerusalem their abominations, & say: thus saieth the Lorde God vnto Jerusalem: Thy progenye and kynred came out of the lande of Canaan, thy father was an Amorite, thy mother a Cethite, thus was the maner of thy birth. In the daye of thy byrth when thou wast borne, the stryng of thy nauel was not cut of: thou wast not bathed in water to make the cleane: Thou wast neither robbed with salte, nor swadeled in cloutes: No man regarded the so muche, as to do anye of these thinges for the, or to shew the such fauour, but thou wast vtterly cast out vpō the felde: yea, despised waste thou in the daye of thy byrth. Then came I by thee, and sawe the troden downe in thyne owne blonde, and sayde vnto the: Liue, although thou be defiled in thine owne blonde: yea, euē I (I tel the) sayd vnto the, lyue, although thou be Ezay. b & defyled in thyne owne bloud. * So I planted thee, as the blossome of the felde: thou Jere. xi. c art growen vp, and waxen great: thou hast gotten a marueylous pleasaūt beawty, thy breastes are come vp, thy heare is goodlye growē, where as thou wast naked & bare afore. Nowe whē I went by the, and loked vpō the: beholde, thy tyme was come: yea, B euen thy tyme to wowe the. Then spred I my clothes ouer thee, to couer thy dishonestie: yea, I made an othe vnto thee, * & ma- Jere. 3. a. ryed my selfe wyth thee (sayeth the Lorde Osee. 12. c God) and so thou becāmest myne owne. Then washed I thee with water, & pourged thy bloude from thee. I anoynted thee with oyle, I gaue the chaunge of raymentes, I made the shoes of Tarus lether: I girded the about with white sticke, I clothed the with kerchefes I decked the with costlie apparel, I put ringes vpon thy fingers: a chayne about thy necke, spanges vpon thy foreheade, eareringes vpō thyne eares, and set a bewtiful crowne vpō thine heade. Thus waste thou decket with siluer and golde, and thy raymente was of fyne white silke of nedle worcke, and of diuerse colours. Thou dyddest eate nothynge but simnels, hony and oyle: marueylous goodly wast thou and bewtifull: yea, euen a perye Queue was thou. In so muche, that thy bewty was spoken of amonge the Heathē, for thou wast excellēt in my bewty, which I put vpon the, sayth the Lorde God. F But thy yongest syster that dwelleth on thy ryghte hande, is Sodoma and her doughters. yet haste thou not walked after theire wayes, nor done after theyr abhommnacions. but thou slodest a litle & beep smale tyme, and in al thy wayes thou hast bene more corrupte then they. As truly as I lyue saieth the Lorde God: Sodoma thy syster, with her doughters, hath not done so euel as thou and thy doughters.

Gen. 13. c and. 18. c xix. b. c Beholde, + the synnes of thy syster Sodoma were these: Pryde, fulnesse of meate, abounddance, and Idlenesse: these thinges had she and her doughters. Beside that they reached not theyr hande to the poore and nedye, but were proude, and dyd abhompuable thynges before me: Therfore I toke theym awaye, as pleased me. Neyther hathe Samaria done halfe of thy synnes:

Jer. iii. c. + yea, thou hast exceaded thē in wickednes: In so muche that in comparyson of all the abhominacions whiche thou haste done, thou haste made thy systers good women. Therfore thou (whiche dydest codēpne thy syster) beare thyne owne shame, for thyne owne offences, that thou haste committed, more abhominable then they dyd, whyche in dede are more righteous then thou art, be thou (I saye) ashamed, and beare thy shamefull rebuke, seynge that thou haste proued thy systers in comparyson of the righteouse. As for theyr captiuitie, namely

G the captiuitie of Sodoma, and her doughters: the captiuytye of Samaria, and her doughters: I wyl bryngе them agayne, so wyll I also bryngе agayne thy captiuitie amonge them: that thou mayest take thine owne confusyon vpon the, and be ashamed of all that thou hast done, and to comforte them. Thus thy systers (namely) Sodoma and her doughters: Samaria & her doughters: wyth thy selfe, and thy doughters, shalbe brought agaīne to your olde estate. When thou waste in thy pryde, and before thy wyckednesse came to lyght: thou woudest not heare speake of thy syster Sodoma, buttyll the tyme that the Syrians with all their townes, and the Philistines with al that lye rounde about them, brought the to shame & confusyon: that thou myghtest beare thyne owne fylthinesse & abhomination, saieth the Lorde. For thus sayeth the Lorde God: I should (by ryght) deale with the, as thou hast done. Thou hast despysed the othe, & broke the couenaūt. Neuerthelesse, I wyll remēbre the couenaunt that I made with the in thy youth, & so much that it shalbe an euerlastinge couenaūt: so that thou also remembre thy wayes, & be ashamed of thō: then shalt thou receaue of me thy elder & yonger systers, whō I wil make thy doughters, & that beside thy couenaūt.

Jere. 31. e Heb. 8. b + And so I wil renue my couenaunt wyth the, that thou maiest knowe that I am the Lorde: that thou maiest thincke vpō it, be ashamed, and neuer open thyne owne confusion no more: when I haue forgeuē thee, al that thou hast done, sayeth the Lord God.

A The word of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man: put forth + a darcke speakinge, & parable, vnto the house of Israel, & say: Thus sayeth the Lord God: Ther came a great + Aegle with great winges, yea, with a mighty long bodie, & ful of fethers of diuerse colours, vpon the moūt of Libanus, & toke the hiest braūch from a Cedre tree, & brake of the toppe of his twygge, and caryed it into the lande of Canaan, & set it in a cyte of Marchaūtes.

Ezc. 24 a Dan. 7. a B He toke also of the sede of the lande, and planted it in a fruteful groūde, he brought it vnto greate waters, & set it as a wyllow tree thereby. Then did it grow, and was a great vyne stocke, but lowe by the ground whose braunches turned in to it selfe, and the rotes of it, were fastened vnder it. thus there came of it a vyne, & it brought forth blossomes, and spred oute braunches. But ther was another aegle, a great one, which had greate winges and many fethers: and beholde, the rotes of this vine had an hunger after hym, and spred out his braūches towarde hym, that he myghte water her with the other of that he had planted. Nevertheles, it was plāted vpō a good grouūd beside great waters: so that (by reason) it should haue brought out braūches & frut, and haue ben a goodly vine. Speake thou therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Shall this vine prosperer? hail not his rootes be plucked oute, his frute be broken of, his grene braunches wither and fade awaye? yea, without ether stronge arme or manye people, shall it be plucked vp by the rotes. Beholde, it was planted: shall it prosperе therfore? Shal it not be dried vp & wythered: yea, euē in the shutting out of his blossomes, as soone as the east wind bloweth?

D Moreouer, the word of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Speake to that froward household: know ye not, what these thinges do signifie? Tel thē: behold, + the king of Babilō came to Jerusalē, & toke the king and his princes & led thē to Babilon. He toke of the kinges sede, and made a couenaunt with hi, & toke an othe of him: The princes of the lād toke he with hi also, that the lād might be holdē in subiectiō, & not to rebel, but hepe the couenaunte, and fulfyll it. But he fell frome him, and sente hys Emballitours into Egipt, that he might haue E horses, and muche people. Shoulde that prosspere? Shoulde he be hepte safe, that doeth such thynges? Or shoulde he escape, that breaketh hys couenaunte? As truelye as I lyue, sayeth the Lorde God: he shall dye at Babylon, in the place where the kyng dwelleth that made him king: whose othe he hath despised, and whose couenaũt he hath broken. Neither shall Pharao with hys greate hoost and multitude of people, mayntayne hym in the warre: When they cast vp diches, and serue bulwerkes to destroye muche people: For serynge he hathe F despised the othe, and broken the couenaunte (where as he yet gaue hys hande ther vpon) and done all these thynges, he shall not escape. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God. As truelye as I lyue, I wyll bringe myne othe that he hathe despised, and my couenaunt that he hath broke, vpõ

G with the swearde. The residue shalbe scattred towarde all the wyndes: and ye shall knowe, that I the Lorde haue spoken it. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll also take a braunche from an hie Cedre tre, and wyl set it, & take the vppermost twig, that yet is but tender, and plant it vpon an hye hyl: Namelye, vpon the hie hyll of Sion wyl I plante it: that it maye bringe forth twygges, and geue fruite, and be a great Cedre tree: so that al maner of foules maye builde in it, and make their nestes vnder the shadowe of hys braunches. And al the trees of the felde, shall knowe that I the Lorde haue brought downe the hye tree, & set the lowe tree vp: that I haue dryed vp the grene tree, and made the drie tree to florisshe: Euen I the Lorde that spake it, haue also brought it to passe.

Euery man shal beare his owne synne, not one for another.

1 BVt thou son of mā, mourne thou for the princes of Israel, & say: wherfore lay thy mother that Lioness amonge the Lions, & norysshed her younge ones amonge the Lions whelpes? one of her whelpes she brought vp, & it became a Lyon, it learned to spoyle, & to deuoure folcke. The heathen heard of him, & tooke him in their nettes, & brought him in cheynes vnto the lāde of Egipte. Nowe when the dam sawe that all her hope & cōforte was awaye, she toke another of her whelpes, & made a lion 3 of him: which wēt amōg the lions, & became a fearce lion: learned to spoyle & to deuoure folcke: he destroyed their palaces, & made their cities waste. In so much that the hole lād & euery thing therin, were vtterly desolate, thorow the verye voyce of his rorying. Thē came the heathen together on euery syde out of al countres against him, layde their nettes for him, and toke him in their pitte. * So they bounde him with cheines, 4.re.25.a and brought him to the king of Babilon: Jer.39.a which put him in prison, that hys voyce and.52.a shulde no more be heard vpō the mountaynes of Israel. As for my mother, she is lyke a vine in thy blonde, planted by the water side: her frutes & braūches are growē out of many waters, her stalkes wer so strong, 4 that men mighte haue made staues therof for officers: she grew so hye in her stalkes. So when men sawe that she exceaded the heyghte and multitude of her braunches, she was rooted out in displeasure, and caste downe to the grounde. The East wynde dryed vp her frute, her stronge stalkes were broken of, withered and brent in the fyre. But now she is planted in the wildernes, in a drye and thrusty grounde. And there is a fire gone oute of her stalkes, whych hath brent vp her braunches, and her frut, so that she hathe no mo stronge stalckes, to be staues for officers. This is a piteous and miserable thinge.

IN the.vii. yere the.x. daye of the.v. moneth, * it happened, that certayne of the Eze.14.a elders of Israel came vnto me, for to aske counsel at the lord, & sate thē doune by me. Thē came the word of the lord vnto me on this maner: Thou son of man, speake vnto the elders of Israel, & saye vnto them: thus sayeth the Lord God: are ye come hither to aske any thinge at me? as truly as I lyue, sayeth the lord: I wil geue you no answere. Wylte thou not reprooue them (thou sonne of manne) wylte thou not reprooue them? Shewe them the abhominacions of their

Israel, & lifte vp mine hande vpon the sede of the house of Jacob, and shewed my selfe vnto them in the land of Egipt: yea, when I lift vp mine hand ouer thē, & sayde: I am the Lorde youre god, euen in the daye that I lyfte vp myne hande ouer the, to bringe them oute of the lande of Egypte, into a lande that I had prouyded for them, which floweth with mylke and honye, and is a pleasaunt lande amonge all other. Then sayde I vnto them: * Caste awaye euerye Deu.7.a

euery man the abhominations of hys eyes, and to forſake the Idoles of Egipte. Then I made me to poure myne indignacio ouer them, and to fauſhye my wrathe vpō them: yea, euen in the myddeſt of the lande of Egipt. But I would not do it, for my names ſake: that it ſhoulde not be vnhalowed before the Heathen, among whō they dwelt, and amonge whome I ſhewed my ſelfe vnto them, that I would bring them oute of the lande of Egipt. Now whē I had caried thē out of the lande of Egipt, & brought them into the wilderneſſe: I gaue thē my cōmaū dementes, and ſhewed them my lawes:

I lyfte vp myne hande ouer them alſo in the wyldernelle, that I would ſcatre them amonge the Heathen, and ſtrawe them amonge the nations, becauſe they had not kepte my lawes, but caſt alyde my cōmaū- dementes, vnhalowed my Sabbothes, and lyfte vp their eyes to their fathers Idoles. Wherfore I gaue thē alſo commaūdemētes not good, and lawes, therowe the whiche they ſhould not lyue, & I vnhalowed them in their owne giftes * (when I appoynted for my ſelfe al their firſt borne) to make thē deſolate: that they might knowe, howe that I am the Lorde. Therfore (O thou ſonne of man) tell the houſe of Iſraell, thus ſay- eth the LORDE God. Beſyde all this, youre fathers haue yet blaſphemed me more, and greately offended agaynſte me. For after I had brought them into the lande, that I promyſed to geue them, when they ſawe euerye hye hyll, and all the thike trees: they made there their offrynges, and prouoked me with their oblacions ma- king ſwete ſauours there, and powred out their drynckofferynges. Then I aſked them, what is that hil altare that ye go to it? And therfore is it called the hye place vnto this daye. Wherfore, ſpeake vnto the houſe of Iſraell: Thus ſaieth the Lorde God: ye are ſtil as vnclene as your fore fa- thers & commit whoredome alſo with their abhominations. In all your ydoles, where vnto ye bringe your oblacios, * & to whoſe honoye ye burne your childrē: ye defile your ſelues, euen vnto this daye: howe darre ye then come, and aſke any queſtion at me? O ye houſholde of Iſraell? As truelye as I lyue (ſayeth the Lorde God) ye get no an- ſwere of me: and as for the thynge that ye go about, it ſhall not come to paſſe, where as ye ſaye: we wyll be as the Heathen, and do as other people in the lande, wode and ſtone wyll we worſhyppe. As truly as I lyue, ſaieth the Lord God, I my ſelfe wil rule you wyth a myghtye hande, wyth a ſtretched oute arme, and wyth indignacion powred oute ouer you: and wyll bring you oute of the nacions and landes, wherin ye are ſcatred, and gather you togethere wyth a myghte hāde, with a ſtretched out arme, and with indignacion poured oute vpon you, and wyl bringe you in to the wilder- neſſe of the people, and there I wyll reaſon with you, face to face. Lyke as I punyſhed youre fore fathers in the wyldernelſe of Egypt, ſo wyll I punyſhe you alſo, ſayeth the Lorde God. I wyll bringe you vnder my iuriſdiction, and vnder the bonde of the couenaunt. THe worde of the Lord came to me saying: thou sonne of mā, set thy face towarde Jerusalē, speake agaynste the sanctuary, & prophecy agaynst the land of Israel, say to the land of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord: beholde, I will vpon the, and will drawe my swerde out of the sheath, and rote oute of thee, bothe the righteous and the wicked. Seing then that I will rote out of thee, bothe the righteous and wycked, therfore shall my swearde goe oute of hys sheath agaynst all fleashe from the northe to the south: That all fleashe may knowe howe that I the Lorde haue drawen my swearde out of the sheath: And it shall not be put in agayne. Mourne therefore (O thou sonne of man) that thy loynes cracke withall: yea, mourne bitterlye for them in their presence. And yf they saye: wherefore mourneth thou? thē tel them: for the tidinges that commeth, at the which al hartes shal melt, al handes shalbe letten downe, all stomaches shall fayntc, and all knees shall waxe feble. Beholde, it commeth and shalbe fulfylled, sayeth the Lorde GOD. Agayne, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saynge: thou sonne of man, prophecye, and speake: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Speake. The swearde is sharpened and well scoured. Sharpened is it for the slaughter, & scoured, that it may be bryghte. Shall we then make myrthe? I gaynst the * tribe of my sonne it is gone forth destroynge all trees. He hathe putte his swearde to the dightinge, that good holde maye be taken of it. Thys swearde is sharpened and dighe, that it may be geuē vnto the hand of the manslayer. G swearde, is drawen forthe all redye to the slaughter, and scoured to consume, that it glistreth (because thou haste loked the out banities, and prophecyed lyes) that it may come vpon thy necke, lyke as vpon the other vngodly, whyche be slayne: whose daye came, whan theyr wyckednesse was full. Shoulde I put it vp agayne? Naye, I wil punyshe the, in the lande where thou wast norished and borne, and poure my in-dignacion vpon the, and wyll blowe vpon the in the fire of my wrath, and delyuer the vnto cruel people, whiche are learned to de-stroye. Thou shalt fede the fyre, and thy blonde shall be shed in the lande, that thou maiest be put oute of remembraunce. Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it.

¶ The.xxii. Chapter.

A MOreouer, the woord of the lord came vnto me, and said: thou sone of mā, wilt thou not reproue this blonde thurstie citie? Shewe them their abhominacions, and tell them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: O thou cytye, that shedde-ste blonde in the middest of the, that thy tyme may come also: and maiest the Idols to defyle the withal. Thou haste made thy selfe gyltie, in the blonde that thou hast shed: and defyled the in the Idoles, whiche thou haste made. Thou haste caused thy daies to drawe nye, and made the tyme of thy yea-res to come. Therfore wyll I make the to be confounded amonge the Heathen, and to be despyted in all the landes, whether they be nye or farre from the: they shall laughe the to scorne, whan that hast gotten the so foule a name, and are full of mischiefe.
Beholde, the rulers of Israel haue broughte euery man his power, to shed blonde in the
* In the haue they despysed father & mother, in the haue they oppressed the straunger, in the haue they vexed the widowe and the fatherlesse. Thou haste despysed my Sanctuarie, and vnhalowed my Saboth.
Murtherers are there in the, that shede blonde, and eate vpon the hilles, and in the they vse abhominacion. * In the haue they discouered their fathers shame: in the haue they vexed wemen in their sickenesse.
Euery man hath deuise shamefullye wyth hys neyghbours wyfe, and abhominablie defyled his daughter in lawe. In the haue euery man forced his owne sister, euen hys fathers doughter: yea, * gyftes haue bene receaued in the, to shedde blonde. * Thou haste taken vsury, and encreace, thou haste oppressed thy neyghbours by extorciō, and forgotten me, sayeth the Lorde God. Be-holde, I haue smytten my handes vpon thy couetousnesse, that thou hast vsed, and vpon the blonde which hathe bene shed in the. Is thy heart able to endure it, or maye thy handes defende them selues, in the tyme that I shall bringe vpon thee?
Euen I the LORDE that speake it, wyll bringe it also to passe. * I wyll scatre the amonge the Heathen, and strowe the abonte in the landes, and wyll cause thy filthinesse to ceasse out of the: yea, and thou shalte be thyne owne enheritaunce and not myne in the syghte of the Heathen, that thou mayest knowe that I am the Lorde.
And the woorde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, * the house of Israell is turned to drosse. All they that should be brasse, tynne, yron, and leade are in the fire become drosse. Therefore, thus sayeth the Lorde GOD. For so muche as ye all are turned into drosse, be-holde: I wyll bringe you together vnto Jerusalem, like as siluer, brasse, yrō, tinne, and leade are put together in the fornace, and the fyre blowen there vnder to melte them. Euen so wyll I gather you, put you in together, and melte you in my wrath and indignacion, I wyll bringe you together,
and

and kyndle the fire of my cruel displeasure vnder you, that ye maye be melted therin.
Lyke as the syluer is melted in the fyre, so shall ye also be melted therin: that ye may knowe, how that I the Lord haue powred my wrath vpon you. And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, tell her. Thou art an vncleane lãde, which is not rayned vpon in the daye of the cruel wrathe: * thy prophetes that are in the, are swoorne together to deuour soules, like as a roaring Lion, that ranyeth by his pray. They receyue riches & good, and make many widowes in the. Thy priestes breake my lawe, & defile my sanctuarye.
* They put no difference betwene the holy & vnholy, neyther discerne they betwene the cleane & vncleane: they turne their eyes fro my Sabothes, and I am vnhalowed amõg them. Thy rulers in the are like rauishing wolues to shedde bloude, and to destroye soules, for their owne couetous lucre. * As for thy prophetes, they dawbe with vntempered clay. they se vanities, and prophecye lyes vnto them, sayinge: the Lorde God sayeth so, where as the Lorde hathe not spoken. The people in the lande vseth wicked extorcion and robbery. They vexe the poore & nedy, & * oppresse the straũger a-gaynst right. And I sought in the land for a man, that wold make vp the hedge, & set him selfe in the gappe before me, in the landes behalfe, that it shuld not be corrupted: but I coulde finde none. Therfore wyll I powre out my cruell displeasure vpõ thẽ, & burne thẽ in the fire of my wrathe: their owne wayes wil I recompence vpon their heades, sayeth the Lorde God.

¶ The.xxiij. Chapter.

THe worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: thou son of man, there were ii. women, that had one mother: these (when they were yonge) began to play the harlottes in * Egipt. There wer their bre-stes brested, & the pappes of their mayden head did the Egiptiãs destroye. The eldest of them was called Oholah, & her yongest sister Oholibah. These two were my wy-ues, & bare sonnes & doughters. Their names were Samaria, & that was Oholah: & Jerusalẽ, that was Oholibah. As for Oholah, she began to go a whoring, whẽ I had take her to me. * She was set on fire vpon her louers the Assiriãs, as her neighbours which had to do with her, euen the princes & lorꝛes, that wer richly arayed, fayre yõge men, lusty riders of horses. Thus whored her whordome, she cleued vnto all the yonge men of Assiria. yea, she was mad vpon thẽ, and defyled her selfe with all their idoles.
Neyther ceassed she frõ the fornication, that she vsed with the Egiptiãs, for in her youth they laye with her, they vnfolded her brestes of her mayden head, & powred their whor-dome vpon her. Wherefore, * I delyuered her into the hãds of her louers, euen the Assiriãs, whõ she so loued. These discouered her shame, toke her son & doughters, & slewe her with the swearde. An euell name gat she of al people, and they punished her.
* Her sister Oholibah sawe thys, and destroyed her selfe with inordinate lone moze then she, & exceded her sister in whordom, * she loued the Assirians (whiche also laye with her) namelye the princes & great lor-des, that were clothed with all maner of gorgious apparell, all lustye horsmen, and fayre younge persons. Then I sawe that they both were defyled alyke. But she increased styll in whordome, for when she sawe men paynted vpon the wal, the ymаges of the Caldees set forth with freshe colers, with fayre girdles about them, and goodly bonettes vpon their heades, lokinge al lyke princes (after the maner of the Babilonias and Chaldees in their owne lande where they were borne) immediatly alsoone as she sawe them, she brente in loue vpon them, and sente messengers for them into the lande of the Chaldees. Nowe when the Babilonias came to her, they lay with her, and defiled her with their whordome, and so was she polluted with them. And when her lust was abated frome them, * her whordõ and shame was discouered and sene: then my heart forsoke her, like as my heart was gone frõ her sister alsо. Ne-uertheselle, she vsed her whordome euer the longer the moore, and remembred the dayes of her youth, wherin she had played the harlot in the lande of Egypte: * She brent in lust vpon them, whose flesh was lyke the flesh of Asses, and their seede like the sede of horses. Thus hast thou renued the filthines of thy youth, what thy louers vnfolded thy pappes, and marred thy bre-stes in Egypte. Therefore, O Oholibah, thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll rayse vp thy louers (with whõ thou hast satisfied thy lust) agaynst the, and gather them together roũde about the: namely, the Babilonians, and all the Chaldees, rulers, mightie men, & tyrauntes, with al the As-surians: al yonge and fayre louers: princes and lorꝛes, knightes & gentylmen: whiche be all good horsemen. These shall come vpon the, with horses, charettes, and a great multitude of people: whyche shalbe harnessed & dounte the on euery syde, with brestе plates, shyldes, & helmettes. I wyll punishe the before them: yea, they themselues shal punishe the, according to their owne iudgement. I wyll put my gelousye vpon the, so that they shal deale cruellye with the. They shall cutte of thy nose and thine eares, and the remnaunte shall fall thorowe the swearde. They shall carye awaye thy sonnes and doughters, and the residue shalbe brēt in the fyre. They shall stripe the out of thy clothes, and cary thy costelye Jewels awaye with them. Thus wyl I make an ende of thy fylthynesse and whordome, whiche thou hast brought out of the lande of Egipte: so that thou shalte turne thyne eyes no more vpon Egypte. For thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, I wyl de-lyuer the into the handes of them, whome thou hatest: yea, euen into the handes of them with whome thou haste fulfylled thy lust, whiche shall deale cruellye with thee.

And thy labour shal they take with them, and leaue the naked & bare, and thus the shame of thy fylthy whordome shall come to lyghte. All these thynges shall happen vnto the, because of thy whordome, whiche thou hast vsed amonge the Gentyles with whose ydoles thou haste defyled thy selfe.
Thou hast walcked in the waye of thy syster, therfore wyll I gene the her cuppe in thy hande. Thus sayeth the Lorde GOD: Thou shalte dronke of thy systers cuppe, howe depe and farre so euer it be to the botome. Thou shalte be laughed to scorne, and had as greatly in derision, as it is possible. Thou shalt be ful of dronkenesse and sorowe, for the cuppe of thy syster Samaria is a cuppe of destruccion, and wa-stinge: The same shalte thou dyncke, and suppe it out euen to the dregges: yea, thou shalt eate vp the broken peces of it, and so teare thine owne breastes. For euen I haue spoken it, sayeth the Lorde God. Therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: For so muche as thou haste forgotten me, and caste me a lyde behynde the, so beare nowe thyne owne fylthynes and whordome. The lord sayde moreouer vnto me: Thou sonne of man, wilte thou not reprouе Oholah and Oholibah. Shewe them their abhominacions, namely that they haue broken their wedlocke, and stayned their handes with bloude: yea, euen with their ydolles haue they committed aduoutrye, * and offred them by the fyre their owne chyldren (to be deuoured) whom they had borne vnto me.
Yea, and this haue they done vnto me also, they haue defyled my Sanctuarye in that same daye, and haue vnhalowed my Sabboth. For when they had slayne their chyldren for their ydols, they came the same day into my Sanctuarye to defyle it: Lo, this haue they done in my house: beside all thys, thou' haste sente thy messangers for menne out of farre countreyes: And when they came, thou haste bathed and paynted thyne eyes with coloures, trimmed and sette forthe thy selfe of the beste fashion: Thou satteste vpon a goodlye bed and a table spredde before the, whereupon thou haste set mine * incense & mine oyle.

Then was there greate cheare with her to optayne peace, and though with those men many men came, yet were there also brought men of Saba from the wyldernesse, which gaue them bracelets vpon their handes, & set glorious crownes vpon their heades, & I sayde vnto her: that seynge she was stet-ken in age in her whordomes. Nowe shal her fornicacions come to an ende with her.
And they went in to her, as vnto a comon harlot. Euē so wēt they (I say) to Oholah, and Oholibah those fylthy womē. O all ye that loue bertue & righteousnes iudge thē, punish them: * as aduouterers & murtherers ought to be iudged and punished: for they are breakers of wedlocke, and the bloude is in their handes. Wherefore thus sayeth the Lord god: I wyl bringe a great multitude of people vpon them, and make thē be scatred and spoyled: these shal stone them, and gore them with their swordes.
They shal slaye theyr sonnes and doughters, and burne vp their houses with fyre.
Thus wyl I destroye al such filthines out of the lande: that all women maye learne, not to do after your vnclennes. And so they shall lay your filthines vpon youre owne selues, and ye shalbe punished for the sins that ye haue committed with youre ydols: & ye shall knowe that I am the lorde God.

¶ The. xxiii. Chapter.

In the ninth yere, in the tenth moneth, the x. day of the moneth, came the word of the lorde vnto me, saying: O thou son of mā, write vp the name of this day: yea, euen the houre of this present day: whē the king of Babylon set him selfe agaynst Jerusalē. Shewe that obstinate houshold a parable, & speake vnto them: thus sayeth the Lorde God: Set the a potte, set it on, and powre water into it: put all the peces together in it, al the good peces: the loyne, and the shoulder, & fyl it with the best bones. Take one of the best shepe, & an heape of bones withall: let it boyle well, and let the bones seeth well therin. With that sayd the Lorde God on thys maner. * Woe be vnto the bloudye cirye, of the potte, where vpon the rustines hangeth, and is not yet scoured away. Take out the peces that are in it, one after another: ther nede not lottes to be cast therfore, for the bloude is yet in it.

it, and not vpon the grounde, that it might be couered with dust. And therfore haue I letten her powre her blonde vpon a playne dyre stonye rocke, because it should not be hydde, & that I might bryng my wrothful indignacyon and vengeaunce vpon her.

C Wherfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: O, wo be vnto that blonde thirstye cytie, for whome euen I my selfe will make a greate fyre, and set muche woode, and kyndle the fyre, and seathe the flesshe, and spyce the pot, so that the beyre bones shalbe brente: Moreouer, I will set the potte emptie vpō the coles, so that his merall shall be brent and molte also for heate, and the fylthynes of it shall be molten in it, and the dyosse of it shall be consumed. Thou toilest great D payne thus to defyle thy selfe. And it will not be purged frome the exceadynge dyosse in it: but thorowe fyre shall the dyosse of it be purifyed. In thy fylthinesse, euen in thy mischenous wdes, thou doest continue, and because thy fylthynesse is abhominable, for I haue clensed the, but thou art not clēsed: Thou shalte not be pourged frome thyne vnclennesse, tyl I haue powred my wrathful indignacyon vpō the. Euen I the Lord haue so decreed. yea, it is come thereto all E ready, that I will do it. I will not go back, I will not spare, I will not be intreated: but accordyng to thy wayes and imaginacions, thou shalte be punyshed, sayeth the Lorde God. And the wode of the LORD came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man: beholde, I will take away the pleasure of thyne eyes wyth a plage: yet shalte thou nether morne, nor wepe: nor water thy cheekes: therefore thou mayest mourne by thy selfe alone, but vse no deadly lamentacion. Wold on thy bonette, and put on thy shoes vpon thy fete, couer not thy face, & eate no F mourners bread. So I spake vnto the people by tymes in the morynge, and at euē my wife dyed, than vpon the next morow, I dyd as I was cōmaūded. And the people sayde vnto me: wylte thou not tel vs what this sygnifyeth towarde vs, for this thou doest for our sake? I aunswered them: the wode of the Loode came vnto me, sayinge: Tell the house of Israell, thus sayeth the Lorde GOD: Behold, I will suspende my sanctuarye, euen the glory of your power, the pleasure of youre eyes, and the thynge that ye loue: youre sonnes and doughters whome ye haue lefte, shall fall thorow the sworde. Lyke as I haue done, so shall ye do also: ye shall not hyde youre faces, ye shall eate no mourners breade: youre bonnetes shall ye haue vpon your heades, and shoes vpon youre fete. Ye shall neyther mourne nor wepe, but in youre synnes ye shalbe sorowfull, and one repent with another. Thus Ezechiel is your shew token. For loke as he haue done, so (when thys commeth) ye shall do also: that ye maye learne to knowe that I am the Lord God. But beholde, O thou sonne of man: In the daye when I take from them their power, their ioye and honoure, the lust of theyr eyes, the burthen of their lyues: namelye, their sonnes and doughters, shal not this be knowen? Then shall there one escape, and come vnto the, for to shew the. In that daye shall thy mouthe be opened to hym, which is escaped, that thou maiest speake, and be no moze domme. yea, and thou shalt be their shewe token, that they may knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

Thus saieth the Lord God: For so much as thou speakest ouer my sanctuarye. A, ha. They shall eate thy frute, & drynke vp thy milk. As for Rabath, I will make of it a stall for camels, and of Ammō a shepefolde: and ye shal know that I am the Lord. For thus sayeth the Lorde God: In so much as thou hast clapped with thyne handes, and stamped with thy fete, yea, reioyced in thine hert B ouer the lande of Israell with despyte: beholde: I will stretche out myne hande ouer the also, and delyuer thee, to be spoyled of the Heathen, and rote the out from among the people, & cause the to be destroyed oute of all landes: yea, I will make thee to be layed waste, that thou mayest knowe, that I am the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: For so much as Moab and Seir do Esay. 16. and. xbi. say: As for the house of Juda, it is but lyke as all other Gentils be: Therfore beholde, Ezbiii. a I will open the syde of Moab, & take away Soph. 2. b their strēgth, their cities, and chefe coastes of their lande, whiche are the pleasures of that countre. laye vnto Tyre, thou whiche art a porte of the sea, that occupyeth with moch people, & many Iles: thus speaketh the Lord God: O Tyre, thou hast said: what, I am a noble citie, thy borders are in the middest of the sea, and thy buylders haue made the marueluous goodlye. All thy tables haue they made of cipres trees of the mounte Sanir. Frō Libanus haue they take Cedre trees, to make the maste: and the Okes of Basan to make the rowers. Thy boordes haue they made of yuorye, and of costlye wood out of the Ile of Cethim. Thy sayle was of dyuerse colours, small nedle worke oute of the lande of Egypte, to hange vpon thy maste: and thy hangynges of yelowe sylke, purple, oute of the yles of Elisah. They of Sidon and Arnad were thy maryners, and the wyse in Tyre were thy shypmasters. The eldest and wysest at Gebal were they, that mended and stopped thy shyppes. All shyppes of the sea, with theyr shypmen occupyed their marchaundies in the. The Perses, Lydias and Phutens were in thine hoste, and helped the to fyght, these hanged vp theyr shyldes and helmettes with the, these set forthe thy bewtye. They of Arnad were with thyne hoste rounde about thy walles, and the Pygmeians were thy watchmen vpon thy towres, these hanged vp their quyuers rounde about thy walles, and made the marueluous goodly. Tharsis occupyed with the in all maner of wares, in syluer, yron, tynne, & leade, and maye thy market greate, Iauan, Tubal, & Meseth were thy marchaūtes, which brought the men, and ornamentes of metall for thy occupynge. They of the house of Thogarma brought vnto thy at the time of thy marte, horse, horsemē, and mules. They of * Deban were thy marchantes: and many other Iles that occupied with the, brought the weathers, Elephante bones, and Peacockes for a present. The Siriās occupied with the because of thy dyuerse worckes, and increased thy marchaundyse, wyth Smaragdes, with scarlet, with nedel worke, with white linē cloth, with silke, & with coral. Juda & the lāde of Israel occupied with the, and brought vnto thy markettes Wheate of Minith, and Paneg, balme, honye, oyle, and triacle. Damascus also occupied marchaundyse with the, in the best wyne of Helbon, and with woll: because thy occupynge was so greate and thy wares so many, Dan, Iauan, and Meutal haue brought vnto thy markettes, yron redye made, with Casia, and Calamus, according vnto thyne occupynge. Dedan occupied with the in kaye tapetrey worke and cushines. Arabia, and all the princes of Cedar haue occupyed with the, in sheepe, wethers and geates. The marchauntes of Seba, and Rema, haue occupied also with the, in all costlye spyces, in all precious stones and golde, whyche they brought vnto thy markettes. Haram, Chene and Eden, the marchauntes of Saba, Assiria, and Chelmad, were al doers with the, and occupyed with the. In costlye rayment, of yelowe sylke, and of nedel worcke (verye precious, and therfore packe and bounde together with roapes.) yea, and in Cedre woode, at the tyme of thy markettes. The shippes of Tharsis were the chefe of thy occupying: Thus thou art ful, and in great worshippe, euen in the myddest of the sea. Thy rowbers shall bringe the into greate waters, the east wynde shall ouer beate the into the middest of the sea: soo that thy wares, thy marchaundyse, thy spyces, thy mariners, thy shipmasters, thy buylders of thy broken places, thy occupyers (that broughte the thynges necessarye) the men of warre that are in the: sea, and all thy comens shal perysche in the myddest of the sea: in the daye of thy fall. The suburbes shall shake at the loude crye of the shypmen. All whyrye men, and all maryners vp the sea, shall leape out of theyr boates, and set them selues vpon the lande. They shall lyfte vp theyr voyce because of the and make a lamentable crye. They shall cast dust vpon their heades, and lye downe in the ashes. They shal shaue them selues, and put sacke clothe vpon them for thy sake. They shall mourne for the with hartefull sorowe, and heuye lamentacion: yea, they also shal woepe for the. Alas, what cytye hathe so bene destroyed in the sea, as Tyre is? When thy wares and marchaundies came from the sees, thou gauest all people ynoughe. The kynges of the earthe haste thou made ryche, thorowe the multitude of thy wares and occupynge. But thou arte nowe caste downe into the depe of the sea, all thy resorte of people is perished with the. All they that dwel in the Iles are abashed at the, and all theyr kynges are afrayed: yea, their faces haue chaūged colour. The marchauntes of the nacions wōder at the. In that thou art so clene brought to nought, and commest nomore vp.

and beaſte. Yea, the lande of Egypte ſhalbe deſolate and waſte, and they ſhall knowe, that I am the Lord. Becauſe he ſayde: the water is myne, I my ſelfe haue made it. Beholde therefore, I wyll vpon the, & vpon thy waters: I wyl make the land of Egipt waſt & deſolate, and in a baſhment, fro the tower of Syenes, vnto the borders of the Mozians lande: So that in fourtye yeares there ſhall no foote of man walcke there, nether foote of catell go there, neyther ſhall it be inhabited. I wyll make the lande of Egypt to be deſolate amonge other waſt countreyes, and her cytyes to lye boyde fourty yeres, amonge other boyde cityes. And I wyl ſcater the Egyptians amonge the heathen and nacyons, and ſtraw thē in the landes about. Agayne, thus ſayeth the lord god: ✳when the .xl. yeres are expired, I wil gather the Egiptiās together again out of the nations, amonge whō they wer ſcatred, and wyll bryngе the priſoners of Egipt agayne into the lande of Pathures theyr owne natiue countreye, that they maye be there a lowlye ſmalle kyngdome: yea, they ſhalbe the ſmalleſt amonge other kyngdomes, leſte they exalte them ſelues aboue the heathen: for I wyll ſo miniſhe thē that they ſhal nomoze rule the heathē. They ſhall no mooze be an hape vnto the houſe of Iſrael, neyther prouoke thē anye moze to wyckednes, to cauſe them tourne backe, and to folowe them: and they ſhall knowe that I am the Lorde God: In the xxbii. yere, the fyrſt daye of the fyrſte moneth, came the wozde of the Lord vnto me, ſayinge: Thou ſonne of man, Nabucho-donoſor the kynge of Babylon hathe made hys hoſte with great trauayle & labour, to come before Tyre: that euerye heade maye be balde, and euery ſhoulder bare. Yet hath Tyre geuen nether him nor hys hoſte anye rewarde, for the greate trauayle that he hathe taken there. Therefore thus ſayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyll geue the land of Egipte vnto Nabuchodonoſor the kynge of Babilon, that he may take away al her ſubſtaunce, robbe her robbereyes, & ſpoyle her ſpoyles, to paye hys hoſte theyr wages wyth al. I wyl geue hym the lande of Egypt: for hys laboure, that he tooke for me before Tyre. At the ſame tyme wyll I cauſe the horne of the houſe of Iſraell to growe forth, & open thy mouth be agayne amonge them: that they may knowe, howe that I am the Lorde.

The wozde of the Lorde came mozeouer vnto me, ſaying: thou ſon of man, prophecy & ſpeake: thus ſaith the lord god: mourne, wo wozthe this daye, for the day is here, the day of the lord is come, the darke daye of the heathen, the houre is at hande, the ſwearde cometh vpon Egipt. When the wounded menne fall downe in Egypt, when her people are taken away, and when her foundacions are deſtroyed, the Mozians lande ſhall be afrayed: yea, the Mozians lande, Lybia, and Lidia, all their comen people, & Chub, & al that be cō-federat vnto thē, ſhal fal with thē thorow the ſwerde. Thus ſaith the lord: the mayn-teyners of the lande of Egipt ſhall fall, the pryde of her power ſhal come doune, euē vn-to the tower of Syenes ſhall they be ſlayne doune with the ſwerde, ſayeth the LORD God: amonge other deſolat countreyes they ſhalbe made deſolate, and amonge other waſte cytyes they ſhall be waſted. And they ſhal knowe, that I am the LORDE, when I kyndle a fyre in Egypt, and when all her helpers are deſtroyed. At that time ſhall their meſſaungers gor forth from me in ſhippes, to make the careleſſe Mozians afrayed, and ſorowe ſhal come vpon them, accordynge to the daye of Egypte, for doubtles it ſhall come. Thus ſayeth the Lorde God: I wyll make an ende of the people of Egypte, thorowe the hande of Nabuchodonoſor the kynge of Babylon. He and hys people wyth him: yea, and the cruell tyrauntes of the heathen, ſhal be brought to deſtroye the lande. They ſhall drawe out their ſwerdes vpon Egypte, & fil the lande ful of ſlayne men. I wyll drye vp their floudes of water, and ſel the lande into the handes of wycked people. The lande, and al that is therin, wyll I deſtroy thorowe the enemyes. Euen I the Lorde haue ſayde it. Thus ſayeth the LORD & GOD. ✳I wyll deſtroye the ydoles, and bryngе the ymages of Moph to an ende. There ſhal nomoze be a pryncе of Egypt, and a fearefulneſſe wyll I ſende into the Egyptians land. As for Pathures, I wyll make it deſolate, and kyndle a fire in Zoan the city. Alſo, I wil pumiſh, and powze my wrathful indignacion vpon Sin, which is the ſtrengthe of Egypt. All the ſubſtaunce of Alexandria, wyll I deſtroy, and kyndle a fire in Egypte. Sin ſhall be in great he-uyneſſe, Alexandria ſhall be roted out, and Moph ſhall haue daylye ſorowe. The beſt menne of Helyopolis, and Bubaſto, ſhalbe ſlayne with the ſwearde, and caryed away captyue. At Caphnis the day ſhalbe darcke, when I breake there the ſcepter of the lande of Egypte, and when the pompe of her power ſhall haue an ende. A cloude ſhall couer her, and her doughters ſhal be led away into captiuite. Thus wil kynges therof.

I punische Egypte, that they maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde. Ie happened in the eleuenth yeare, vpon the seuenth day of the firste moneth, that the Lordes worde came vnto me, sayinge: Behold, thou sonne of man, I wil breake the arme of Pharao, kynge of Egipt: & lo, it shall not be bounde vp to be healed, neyther shall any playster be layed vpon it, for to ease it, or to make it so stronge, as to holde a sweарde. Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyl vpon Pharao the kyng of Egypte, and breake his strong arme (yet it is but a broken one) and wil smyte the sweарde oute of hys handes. As for the Egipcyans, I wyll scatre them amonge the heathen, and strowe them in the landes about. Agayne, I wyll strengthe the arme of the kynge of Babilon, and geue hym a sweарde in hys hande, but I wil breake Pharaos arme, so that he shal holde it before him petioullye, lyke a wounded man. yea, I wil stablische the kinge of Babilons arme, and the armes of Pharao shal fall downe: that it maye be knowē, that I am the Lorde, whiche gaue the kinge of Babilon my sweарde in his hāde, that he may drawe it out vpon the lande of Egipt, and that whē I scatre the Egipcians among the Gentils, & strow the in the landes aboute, they may know, that I am the Lorde.

¶ The. xxxi. Chapter.

MOreouer, it happened i the. xi. yere, the firste daye of the thirde moneth, that the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man, speake vnto Pharao the kinge of Egipt, & to al his people. Whō art thou like in thy greatnes?
Behold, Assur was like a Cedre tree vpon the mount of Libanꝰ, with fayre braūches: so thicke, that he gaue shadowes, & shote out bery hie. His toppe reached vnto the cloudes. The waters made him great, and the depe set him vp an hie. Rounde aboute the rotes of him, ran there flouds of water: he sēt out his lytle ruers vnto al the trees of the felde. Therfore was he hyer then all the trees of the felde, and thorowe the multitude of waters that he sent from him, he optayned many long braunches. Al fowles of the ayre made their nestes in his braunches: vnder his bowes gendred al the beastes of the felde, and vnder hys shadowe dwelte all people. Fayre and bewtiful was he in his greatnes, and in the length of his braunches, for his roote stode beside great waters, no Cedre tree myght hyde him. In the pleasaunt garden of God, there was no fyre tre like his braūches, the plaine trees were not lyke the bowes of hym. All the trees in the garden of God myght not be compared vnto him in his bewtie, so fayre & goodly had I made him, with the multy-tude of hys braunches. In so much that al the trees in the pleasaūt garden of God had enuie at him. Therfore thus sayeth the lord God: for so much as he hath lift vp him self so hye, and stretched his toppe in to the clen-des, and seynge his hearte is proude in his highnes. I wil delyuer him into the hāde of the mightiest amonge the heathen, whiche shall roote him out. Accordyng to hys wickednes wil I cast him awaye, the enemye shall destroy him, & the mightie men of the heathen shal so scatre him, that hys braunches shal lie vpon al mountaynes, & in all valleyes: his bowes shall be broken downe to the grounde, thorowe oute the lande. Then all the people of the lande shall go from hys shadowe, and forsake him. When he is fallen, al the fowles of the ayre shall sye vpon hym, and all the wylde beastes of the felde shall go aboute among his braunches: so that from henceforth, no tree in the water shal attayne to his hygnesse, nor reache his top vnto the cloudes, neither shall any tree of the water stande so hye, as he hathe done. For vnto death shall they all be delyuered vnder the earthe, and go downe to the graue lyke other men.
Moreouer thus sayeth the Lorde God: In the day when he goth downe to the graue, I wil cause a lamentacyon to be made, I wil couer the depe vpon him, I wil stanch hys floudes, and the great waters shal be restrayned. I shall cause Libanus to be sorowefull for hys sake, and all the trees of the felde shall be smytten. I will make the heathen shake at the sounde of it, is fall, when I caste hym downe to * hel, wyth them that descende into the pytte. All the trees of Eden, with all the chosen and best trees of Lybanus: yea, and all they that are planted vpon the waters, shal mourne with him also in the lower habitacions: for they shall go downe to hell with him, vnto them that be slayne with the sweарd, which dwelte afore vnder the shadowe of hys arme amonge the heathen. To whome shalt thou be likened, that arte so glorious and greate, amonge the trees of Eden? yet arte thou caste downe vnder the earth, (amonge the trees of Eden) where thou must lye amonge vncircumcised, with the that be slayne with the sweарd. Euen thus is it with Pharao, and al his people, sayth the Lorde God.

¶ The. xxxii. Chapter.

For thus saieth the Lord God: the kynge of Babilons swearde shall come vpon the, wyth the sweardes of the worthies wyll I smyte downe thy people. All they that be myghtye amonge the Gentils shal wast the proude pompe of Egipte, and bryng downe all her people. All the cattel also of Egipte wyll I destroye, that they shal come nomore vpon the waters: so that nether mans fote, nor beastes clawe, shall feare them any more. Then wyll I make theyr waters depe, and cause theyr floudes to runne lyke oyle, saieth the Lorde God. When I make the lande of Egypte desolate, and when the countre wyth al that is therin, shalbe layde waste, and when I smite all them whiche dwel in it, that they maye know, that I am the Lorde. This is the mournynge, that the doughters of the heathen shall make: yea, a sorowe and lamentacion shal they take vp, vpon Egipt, D and al her people, saieth the Lord God. In the. xii. yeare, the. xv. daye of the moneth, came the word of the lord vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man. Take vp a lamentacion vpon the people of Egipte, and caste thē downe: yea, them I saye, and the mightie people of the heathen also, euen wyth

There is Mesech also and Tubal, and theyr people, and their graues rounde aboute. These all are amonge the vncircumcised, & them that be slayne with the swearde, because afore tyme they made the lande of the lyuynge afrayed. Shoulde not they then lye also amonge the worthies, and vncircumcysed Giauntes? whyche wyth their weapens are gone downe to hell, whose swerdes are layed vnder theyr heades, whose wyckednes is vpon theyr bones: because that as worthyes, they haue brought feare into the lande of the lyuynge. For I haue geuen my feare in the lande of the lyuynge. But Pharao and all hys people shall lie among the vncircumcised, and amonge them that be slayne wyth the swearde, sayeth the Lorde God.

The. xxxiii. Chapter.

A Gayne, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou son of man: Speake to the children of thy people, and tell them: Whan I sende a swearde vpon a lande, yf the people of the lãde take a man of their countre, and set hym to be 3.Reg.ix.D. their * watcheman, the same man (when he seyth the swearde come vpon the lãde) shal blowe the tromper, and warne the people. If a man now heare the noyse of the tromper, and wil not be warned, and the swearde come: and take him awaye: hys bloude shal be vpon hys owne heade: for he hearde the sounde of the tromper, and would not take hede, therfore his bloude be vpon him. But B yf he wyll receaue warnynge, he shall saue his lyfe. Agayne, yf the watche man se the swearde come, and shewe it not wyth the trompet, so that the people is not warned: yf the swearde come then, and take any mã from amonge them: the same shalbe taken awaye in hys owne synne, but his bloude Ezec. 3.c will I require of the watchmãshãde. * And nowe (O thou sonne of man) I haue made the a watcheman vnto the house of Israel, that where as thou hearest any thynge out of my mouthe, thou mayest warne them on my behalfe. Yf I saye vnto the wycked, thou wycked, thou shalte surely dye, and thou geuest hym not warnynge, that he maye beware of hys vngodlye waye: then shal the wycked dye in his owne sinne, but his bloude I will requyre of thy hãde. Neuertheles, if thou warne the wicked of hys

C thy soule. Therfore (O thou sonne of man) speake vnto the house of Israell. Yea, saye thus: Our offences and synnes lye vpo vs, and we be corrupte in them, howe shoulde we then be restored vnto lyfe? Tell them: Eze.18.c * As truly as I lyue sayeth the LORDE God, I haue no pleasure in the death of the wicked, but muche rather that the wycked turne from his way, and lyue. Turne you, turne you, from youre vngodlye wayes, O ye of the house of Israel. Oh wherfore wyl ye dye? Thou sonne of man, tell the childre of thy people: * The righteousnesse of the Eze.18.a ryghteous shall not saue him whansoeuer he turneth away vnfaithfully. Againe, the wickednes of the wiked shal not hurt him, whan so euer he cõuerteth from his vngodlinesse. And the righteousnes of the righteous shal not saue his lyfe, whansoeuer he sinneth. If I saye vnto the righteous, that he shall surely liue, and so he truste to hys owne righteousnesse, & do synne, then shal his righteousnes be no moze thought vpo, but in the wickednes that he hath done, he D shal dye. * Againe, yf I saye vnto the wic- Esa. 55.b ked: thou shalte surely dye: and so he turne Jer. 18.a from his synnes, and do the thynge that is lawfull and ryghte: In so muche that the same wiked man geueth the pledge again, restoreth that he had taken awaye by robberye, walketh in the commaundementes of lyfe, and doth no wronge. Then shall he surely lyue, and not dye. Yea, the synnes that he hath done, shall neuer be thoughte vpon. For in so muche as he dothe nowe the thynge that is lawfull and ryghte, he shall lyue. And yet the chyldren of thy people saye: Tushe, the waye of the Lorde is not ryghte, but they lye, where as their owne waye is rather vnryghte. When the ryghteous turneth from his ryghteousnes and doth the thing that is wicked, he shal dye therfore. But if the wicked turne from hys wickednesse, doynge the thynge that is lawfull and righte, he shal lyue therfore. yet ye saye: * the waye of the Lorde is not Eze. 18.f equall: O ye house of Israel * I will iudge 1rom.2.a euerye one of you after hys wayes. In E the. xii. yeare, the. v. daye of the tenth moneth of our captiuite, it happened, that one whyche was fled oute of Jerusalem, came vnto me, and sayde the cytye is destroyed. Nowe the hande of the Lord had bene vpon me, the euenynge afore this man (which was escaped) came vnto me, and had opened my mouthe, vntyl the morynge that he came to me: yea, he opened my mouthe, so that I was no more domme. Thẽ came the word of the Lord vnto me, & sayde: Thou sonne of man, these that dwel in the wasted lande of Israel, saye: Abraham was but one man, and he had the lande in possession: nowe are we manye and the lande is geuen vs to possesse also. And therefore tell F them. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: * In Leu.17.d the bloude haue ye eaten, your eyes haue ye lyfte vp to Idoles, * and haue shed bloude: Deu. 3.c. shall ye than haue the lande in possession? ye leane vpon youre sweardes, ye worcke abhominacions, euerye one defyleth hys neyghbours wife: and shall ye then possesse

As truely as I lyue, all ye that dwell in this wilderne, shalbe slayne with the sweorde: whatso euer is vpon the felde, I will gene vnto the beastes to be deuoured: those that be in stronge holdes, and dennes, shall dye of the pestilence. For I will make the lãde so desolate and waste, and the pompe of her strenghte shall come to an ende. The mountaynes of Israel shalbe so wast that

THou sonne of manne, prophecie vpon the mountaines of Israell, and speake: * Heare the worde of the Lorde, O ye Eze.vi. A mountaynes of Israel. Thus saith the Lord God. Because your enemie hath said vpon you: A, ha, the hie euerlastynge places are now become ourers, prophecie therfore. and speake: thus saith the Lord God. Seing ye be wasted & trode down on euery syde, and become a possellion vnto the residue of the gentils: which haue brought you into mens mouthes, & vnto an euil name amonge the people. Therfore, heare the worde of the lord god. O ye mountaynes of Israel. Thus saieth the Lord God vnto the mountaynes and hilles, valleys and dales, to the boyde wyldernes and desolate cyties, whiche are spoyled, and had in derision on euery syde, amonge the residue of the heathen: yea, euē thus saieth the Lorde God. In the fire B of my gelousye, haue I taken a deuyce, against the residue of the Gentils, & against all * Edom: whiche haue taken in my lande Eze.35.a vnto them selues for a possellion: whyche also reioyced from the whole hearte, wyth a dispytefull stomache, to waste it, and to spoyle it. Prophecie therfore vpon the lāde of Israel, speake vnto the mountaines, and hylles, to valleys, and dales, thus saieth the Lorde God: Behold, this haue I deuy-sed in my gelousie and terrible wrath. For tayne of Iſraell) ye ſhall ſhote out youre braunches, and bringe forth your frute to my people of Iſraell, for it is hard by that it will come. Beholde, I come vnto you, and vnto you will I turne me, that ye may be tylled and ſowen. I will ſende you C muche people, whyche ſhall be all of the houſe of Iſraell, the cyties ſhall be inha-byted, and the decayed places ſhall be re-payred agayne, I will prouyde you with much people and catel, which ſhal increaſe for to beare thyne owne confuſion among the Gentyls from hence forth. Thou ſhalte ſayeth the Lorde GOD. Moreouer the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, ſayinge: O thou ſonne of man, when the houſe of they defyled them ſelues wyth their owne wayes and ymagynacions: ſo that in my ſyghte theyr waye was lyke the vncleneſſe powred my wrothful diſpleaſure vpon the, becauſe of the bloude that they hadde ſhed in the lande, and becauſe of their Idolles, wherewyth they had defyled them ſelues.

I ſcatred them alſo amonge the Heathen, ſo that they were ſtrowed aboute in the landes. Accordynge to theyr wayes, and E after their owne inuencions, ſo dyd I punyſhe them. * Nowe when they were gone whiche the houſe of Iſraell had dyſhonou-came. Therefore tell the houſe of Iſraell: Thus ſayeth the Lorde God: I do not this for youre ſakes (O houſe of Iſraell) but for my holy names ſake, whiche ye diſhonoured amonge the heathen, when ye came to theym. Therefore, I will halowe my great name againe, which amonge the Gen-let you haue no honger. I will multyply the frutes of the trees, and the increaſe of the felde for you, ſo that ye ſhall beare no more reprofe of honger amonge the Hea-wicked wayes, & your ymaginacios which were not good: ſo that ye ſhal thincke that ye were worthye to be deſtroyed: for your ſinnes and abhominacions. But I wil not G do this for your ſakes (ſayeth the Lorde God) be ye ſure of it. Therfore, O ye houſe of Iſrael, be aſhamed of your ſinnes. More ouer, thus ſayeth the Lorde God: Whan tyme as I ſhall clenſe you from all youre offences, then wyl I make the cyties to be occupied agayne, and wil repayre the places that be decayed. The deſolate lande ſhalbe buylded againe, whiche afore tyme

Then the reſydue of the Heathen that lye rounde aboute you, ſhal knowe that I am the lord, which repayre that, that was bro was made waſte. Euen I the Lorde haue ſpoken it, and wyll do it in dede. Thus ſayeth the Lorde God: I wyll yet once be founde againe of the houſe of Iſraell, & do this for them: * I ſhall encreaſe them as a Iere. 1. a cityes be filled with flockes of men: and they shal knowe that I am the Lorde.

also. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou son of man, thinkest thou these bones maye lyue agayne (I answered O Lorde God, thou knowest). And he sayd vnto me: Prophecy thou vpon these bones: & speake vnto thē.
Ye drye bones, heare the worde of the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde God vnto these bones: behold, I wyl put breath vnto you, that ye may lyue: I wyl gyue you sy-and couer you ouer with skynne: & so geue Gen. 2. b. you * breath, that ye may lyue, and knowe B that I am the Lorde. So I prophecied, as he had commaūded me. And as I was prophecying, there came a noyse and a greate mocion, so that the bones ranne euery one to another. Nowe when I had loked, be-holde, they had sinowes, and flesche growe vpon them: and aboue they were covered with skynne, but there was no breath in them. Then sayd he vnto me. Thou sonne prophecie: and speake to the winde. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Come (O thou ayre) from the foure windes, and blowe vpon C these slayne, that they maye be restored to lyfe. So I prophecied as he had cōmaunded me: Then came the breath into them, and they receyued lyfe, and stode vp vpon their fete, a maruelous greate sorte. More-ouer, he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, these bones are the whole house of Israell. Beholde, they say: Our bones are dryed vp, our hope is gone, we are cleane cut of. Therfore, prophecye thou, & speake vnto them: thus sayeth the Lorde GOD.

Beholde, I wyll vpon your graues (O my people) and take you oute of youre sepulchres, and bryng you into the lande of Is-the Lorde, when I open youre graues and bring you out of them. My spirite also will I put in you, and ye shal lyue: I wyll set you agayne in your owne lande, & ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde, whiche haue sayde it, and fulfilled it in dede. The word of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, take a tyche, & wryte vpon it, Vnto Juda, & to the chyldren of Israell hys cōpanions. Then take another sticke, and wryte vpon it: Vnto Joseph the stocke of Ephraim, and to all the houshold of Israel his cōpanions. And then take both these together in thine hande, so shal there E be one sticke thereof. Nowe if the children of thy people saye vnto the, wilte thou not shewe vs, what thou meanest by these?

Then geue them this answere: thus sayth the Lorde God: Beholde, * I will take the Osee. 1. b. stocke of Joseph, whiche is in the hande of Ephraim & of the tribes of Israell his felowes, and wyll put them to the stocke of Juda, and make them one stocke, and they shalbe one in my hande. And the two tyckes, where vpon thou wryteste shalte thou haue in thyne hande, that they may se, and shalt say vnto them. Thus sayeth the lorde God: Beholde, I wyl take away the chyldren of Israel from amonge the heathen, vnto whom they be gone, and wyll gather them together on euery side, and bring thē agayne into their owne lande: yea, I wyll F make one people of them in the lande, vpon the mountaynes of Israel. and they al shal haue but one kynge. They shal nomore be two peoples from hence forth, neyther be deuided into two kingdomes: they shal also defile them selues nomore with their abho-minacions, vdolles, and all their wycked doynges. I wyl helpe them out of all their dwelling places, wherin they haue sinned: and wyl so clense thē, that they shalbe my people, and I their God. Dauid my ser-uaunt shalbe their kinge, and they al shal haue one cheperde onely. They shal walke in my lawes, & my cōmaundementes shall G they both kepe and fulfyl. They shal dwel in the lande, that I gaue vnto Jacob my seruaunt, where as your fathers also haue dwelte: yea, euen in the same lande shall they, their children, & their chyldrens children dwel for euermore, and my seruaunte Dauid shall be their euerlastynge prynce.
Moreouer, I wyll make a bonde of peace with them, which shalbe vnto thē an euerlastinge couenaunte. I wil sette them also, and multiplie them, my Sanctuary wyl I Leu. 26 b

THerfore, O thou ſonne of man, prophe cie againſte Gog, and ſpake. Thus Eze. 38. c ſayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, * O God, thou chiefe prince at Meſeech & Tu-bal, I wyll vpon thee, and punyſhe thee with fyue plages, and leade thee from the nozth partes, and bring the vp to the moū-taynes of Iſrael. As for thy bowe, I wil ſmite it out of thy lefte hande, and caſt thyne arowes out of thy right hand. Thou with al thine heape, & al the people that is with the, muſt fall vpon the mountaynes of Iſrael. Then wil I gene thee vnto fou-les and wilde beaſtes of the felde, to be de-noured: there muſt thou lye vpon the feld: for euen I the Lorde haue ſpoken it, ſaith the Lorde God. At the same tyme wyll I geue vnto Gog, a place to be buryed in Israell, euen the valleye, where thorowe men goe from the easte to the sea warde. Those that trauayle therby shal stop theire noses for the stenche. Ther shal Gog and al his people be buried: and it shalbe called the valleye of the people of Gog. Seuen monethes longe shall the house of Israel be burynge of them, that they may cleanse the land: yea, all the people of the lande shal bury them. O, it shall be a glorious daye, when I gette me that honoure, sayeth the Lorde God. They shal ordeyne men also to be deade buriers,

From ende to ende shall they seke, and that seuen monethes longe. Nowe those that goe thorowe the lande, wher they se a mans bone, they shal set vp a token by it, tyl the deade buryers haue buryed it also in the valleye of the people of Gog. And the name of the cytye shalbe called Hamonah (that is, a multytude). Thus shal they make the lãde clene. And thou sonne of man, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Speake vnto all the foules, and euery byrde: yea, and to all the wylde

Eate the fat your belly ful, and drynke blonde, tyll ye be dronken of the slaughter, whyche I haue slayne vnto you. Fyl you at my table with horses, and stronge horsemen, with captaynes & men of warre, sayeth the lorde God. I wyl brynge my glorye also amonge the Gentyles, that all the heathen may see my iudgemente that I haue kepte, and my hande, whiche I haue layed vpon the: that the house of Israel maye knowe, how that I am the Lorde their God frome that daye forthe. And the heathen shal knowe, that where as the house of Israell were ledde into captiuite: it was for theyr wickednes

Accordynge to theyr vncleanesse and vnfaythfull dealynges, so haue I entreated thõ, and hyd my face from them: Therfore, thus sayeth the LORD GOD: Nowe wyll I brynge agayne the captaynes of Jacob, & haue mercy vpon the whole house of Israell, and be gelous for my holy names sake. Al their confusion and offence

And when I haue broughte them agayne from amonge the people, when I haue gathered them together out of theyr enemyes landes, and am praysed in them before manye heathen: Then shall they knowe that I am the Lorde theyr God, which suffered them to be led into captiuitye amonge the heathen, but now haue I brought thẽ agayne into their owne land, and haue not left one of them yonder. After that, wyll I hyde my face no more frõ them

The. xl. Chapter.

IN the. xxv. yere of oure captiuite, in the beginning of the yere, the tenth daye of A the monethe, that is the. xiiii. yere after that the city was smitẽ downe: the same day came the hand of the Lord vpon me, & caried me forth: euen into the lande Israell brought he me i the visiõs of God: & set me downe vpõ a marueylous hie mountayne, wher vpon there was a building (as it had ben of a citye) towarde the north. Thither he caried me, and beholde, there was a man whose similitude was like brasse, which had a threde of flaxe in hys hande, & a metrode also. He stode in the dooze, and sayde vnto me: thou sonne of man, marcke well with thyne eyes, herke to with thine eares, and fasten it in thyne hearte, what soeuer I shal shew the, for to that intent that they might be shewed the, therefore arte thou broughte hyther. And what soeuer thou seyst, thou shalte certifye the house of Israel thereof. Beholde, there was a wall on the out syde rounde about the house: The B metrodde that he had in hys hande, was sixe cubites long and a spanne. So he measured the breadeth of the building, whyche was a metrodde, & the height also a metrodde. Then came he vnto the east dooze, and went vp by the steares, and measured the postes of the dooze, wherof euerye one was a metrodde thycke. Euerye chambze was a metrodde longe and breade: betwene the chambers were fyue cubytes. The poste of the dooze wythin the porche was one metrodde. He measured also the porche of the

innermer dooze, whyche conteyned a metrodde. Thē measured he the entrye of the dooze, that conteyned eyght cubites, & hys pyllers two cubites: & thus entrye stode in warde. The chābers of the dooze eastward, were thre on euery syde: a lyke bzode and longe. The pyllers also that stode of bothe the syde, were of one measure. After thys, he measured the wydenesse of the dooze, whiche was. x. cubytes, & the heyght of the dooze. xiii. cubites. The edge before the chābers was one cubyte bzode vpon bothe the sides, and the chambzes lyxe cubytes wide of ether syde. He measured the doore frome the eydge of one chāber to another, whose wydenesse was. xxb. cubytes, and one dooze stode agaynste another. He made pyllers also. lx. cubytes hye, rounde about the courte dooze. Before the inwarde parte vnto the foze entrye of the innermer dooze, were. L. cubytes. The chambers and their pyllers within, rounde about vnto the dooze had syde wyndowes. So had the foze entrye also, whose wyndowes wente rounde about within. And vpon the pyllers there stode date trees. Then bzought he me into the foze courte, where as were chambers and paued wozkes, made in the foze court rounde about. xxx. chābers vpō one paued wozke. Now the paued wozke was alonge beside the dozes, and that was the lower paued woozcke. After thys he measured the bzeadeth from the lower doze, vnto the innermer courte of the out side, whyche had an. C. cubites vpon the east and the nozthe parte. And the dooze in the bittermoste court towarde the nozthe, measured he after the lengthe & bzedth: his thze chambzes also on ether side with his pillers and foze entries: which had euē the measure of the first doze. His heyght was. l. cubytes, the bzedth, xxb. cubites his windowes and pozches with his date trees, had euen lyke measure as the doze towarde the east: ther were seuē steppes to go vp vpon, and their pozche before them. Nowe the doze of the innermer courte stode streyght ouer against the doze, that was towarde the nozthe east. Frō one doze to another he measured. C. cubites. After that, he bzought me to the southside, where there stode a doze towarde the south: whose pillers and pozches he measured, these had the first measure, and with their pozches they had windowes rounde about, like the first wyndowes. The heygth was. l. cubites, the bzedth. xxb. with steppes to go vp vpō: his pozch stode before wyth his pyllers & date trees on ether syde. And the dooze of the innermer courte stode towarde the southe, and he measured from one doze to another, an. C. cubites. So he bzought me into the innermer courte, thozowe the dooze of the south syde, whiche he measured, and it had the measure afoze sayde. In lyke maner, his chambers, pyllers, & fozentryes, had euen the foze sayd measure also. And he had with his pozches rounde about windowes of fifty cubites heygth, and. xxb. cubytes bzoade. The pozches rounde about were xxb. cubites longe, and. b. cubytes bzoadt and hys pozche reached vntothe vttermost courte, vpon hys pyllers there were date trees, and eyght steppes to go vp vpon. He bzought me also into the inmoste courte vpon the east side, and measured the doze accozdinge to the measure afozesayde, hys chābers, pillers & pozches had euē the same measure as the first had: and with his pozches, he had wyndowes rounde about. The heyght was, l. cubites, the bzeadeth xxb. cubites, his pozche reached vnto the vttermost courte: his pillers also had date trees on ether side, & viii. steppes to go vp vpō. And he bzought me to the nozth doze, & measured it: which also had the afozesaid measure. Hys chābers, pillers & pozches, had widowes roundeabout: whole heighe was. l. cubites, and the bzeadeth. xxb. His pillers stode toward the vtmost court, and vpon them both were date trees, and. viii. steppes to go vp vpon. Ther stode a chambze also, whose intraunce was at the doze pillers, & there the burnt offrynges were washed. In the doze pozche there stode on ether syde two tables foz the slaughtyng: to slep the burnt offrynges, synoffrynges and treshace offrynges ther vpon. And on the out syde, as men go fozth to the nozth doze, there stode two tables. Foure tables stode on ether syde of the doze, that is. viii. tables: wher vpon they slaughted. Foure tables were of hewen stone, foz the burnt offrynges, of a cubyte & a halfe longe and bzode, and one cubite hye, wher vpō were layde the bessels and ornamentes, whyche were vsed to the burnte and slayne offrynges: whē they were slaughted. And within there were hokes, foure fyngers bzode, fastened rounde about to hange sleath vpon, and vpō the tables was layde the offringe sleath. On the outside of the innermer doze were the singers chambers, in the inward court beside the nozth doze ouer against the south. There stode one also beside the east doze nozthwarde. And he sayde vnto me: This chamber on the south side belongeth to the priestes, that kepe the habytacyon: and thys towarde the nozthe, is the prie- 1.pa.25.

of Leui. So he measured the fore courte. whiche had in lengthe an hundred cubites, and as muche in breadth by the foure cornees. Now the altre stode before the house. And he broughte me to the fore entrye of the house, and measured the walles by the entrye doore, whiche were .b. cubites long on eyther syde. The thickines also of the doore on eyther side, was thre cubites. The length of the porche was .xx. cubytes, the breadth .xi. cubites, & vpō steppes went men vp to it: by the walles also were pyllers on eyther syde one.

AFter this, he broughte me to the temple, and measured the postes, which were of both sides sixe cubites thick, accordyng to the widnesse of the tabernacle. The breadth of the doore was ten cubites, and the walles of the doore on eyther side .b. cubites. He measured the lengthe therof, which cōteined .xl. cubites, and the breadth .xx. Then went he in, & mesured the dore postes: which were two cubites thick: but the doze it selfe was .bi. cubites, and the breadth of the doze was .bii. cubites. He measured the length and breadth therof, whiche were euery one .xx. cubites, before the temple. And he sayd vnto me: this is the holyest of all. He measured also the walle of the house, which was .bi. cubites. The chābres that stode rounde about the house, were euery one .xiii. cubites wide: & one stode harde vpon another, whereof there were .xxxiii. there stoode postes beneath vp the walles, roūde about the house, to beare the vp, but in the wal of the house they were not fastened. The side chambres were, the hyer the wider, & had steppes vpon vpon them rounde about the house. Thus was it wider above, that frō the lowest, men might go to the hest by the midst chābres. I saw also that the house was herye hye rounde about. The foūdacion of the side chambres was a meterod, that is, .bi. cubites broade. The thickines of the side wall without, conteined .b. cubites, and so dyd the out wal of the chābres in the house. Betwene the chambres was the wideness .xx. cubites round about the house. The chambre doores stode ouer agaynst the outwal, the one doore was towarde the northe, the other towarde the south: and the thickines of the out wal was .b. cubites rounde about. Nowe the buylding that was seperated toward the west, was .lxx. cubites wide: the wal of the buildinge was .b. cubites thicke roūd about, & the length foure score cubites and ten. So he measured the house, whiche was an .C. cubites longe, and the separated buylding with the wal, were an .C. cubites lōge also. The wideneste before the house, and of it that was separated towarde the east, was an .C. cubites. And he measured the length of the buyldynge before and behynde, with the chambres, vpon both the sydes: and it conteyned an .C. cubytes. The innermer Temple, the porche of the fore courte, the side postes, these thre had side windowes, & pyllers rounde about ouer agaynst the postes, from the ground vp to the windowes. The windowes thē selues were siled ouer wyth bordes: and thus was it aboue the doze vnto the inmooste house: and without also: yea, the whole wal on euery syde, both within and without, was syled ouer with great bordes. There were Cherubins and date trees made also, so that one date tree stode euer betwixt two cherubins. One cherub had two faces, the face of a mā loking aside towarde the date tree, & a lyons face on the other side. Thus was it made roūde about in al the house: yea, the cherubins & date trees were made from the grounde vp aboue the doze, and so stode they also vpon the wall of the temple. The by postes of the temple were foure squared, and the fashyon of the sanctuarye was + euen as it appeared vnto me afore in the visiō. ‡ The table was of woodde .iii. cubites hye, and .ii. cubites longe: hys corners the length and the walles were of woodde. And he sayde vnto me: This is the table that shal stāde before the Lorde. The temple, and the holyest of all hadde eyther of them two dozes: & euery doze had .ii. lytle wicketes which were folden, in one vpon another, on euerie side two. And vpon the dozes of the temple, there were made Cherubins & date trees, like as vpō the walles: and a great thycke balke of wod was before on the outside of the porch. Vpō both the sides of the walles of the porch, there were made depe wyndowes and date trees, hauing beames & balkes, like as the house had.

¶ The .xlii. Chapter.

THē caried he me out into the fore court towarde the north, and broughte me into the chābre that stod ouer against the backbuylding northwarde, which had the length of an .C. cubites: whose doze turned towarde the north. The widnes cōteined .l. cubites: ouer against the .xx. cubites of the innermer court, & against the paued worke that was in the court, beside al these iii. ther stode pillers, one ouer against another. And before this chābre, there was a walking place of .x. cubites wide, & within was a waye of one cubite wide, and their dozes towarde the northe. Thus the hyest chambres were alway narower thē the lowest & middlemost of the buylding, for they bare bare chambze vpon chambze, and stode thze togetther one vpō another, not hauynge pillers lyke the foze courte: therfoze were they smaller then those benethe and in the midwst to reken from the grounde vpwarde. The wall without that stode by the chambzes towarde the vtmoste courte vpon the foze syde of the chambzes, was. l. cubytes lōge: foz the lengthe of the vtmoste chambzes in the foze courte was. l. cubytes also: but the lengthe thereof before the temple was an. C. cubites. These chambzes had vnder them an entraunce of the eastesyde, wherby a man mpghte go into them out of the foze courte thozowe the thycke wall of the foze courte towarde the east, right oueragainst the seperated buyldynge. Before the same buyldynge vpon thys syde, there were chābzes also, whiche had a waye vnto them, lyke as the chambze of the nozthside of the same lengthe and wydenesse. Their entraunce, fashion, and dozes were also of the same maner. Yea, euē lyke as the other chambze dozes were: so were those also of the southside. And before the way towarde the syngers steppes on the east syde there stode a doze to go in at. Then said he vnto me: The chambzes towarde the nozth & the south which stande before the backe buyld-ing, those be holy habitaciōs, wherin the priestes that do seruyce before the Lozde, muste eate the most holy offeringes: & there muste they laye the moost holy offeringes, meateoffrynges, synne offringes, & trespace offeringes: foz it is an holy place. When the priestes come therin, they shal not go out in to the foze courte: but (seyng they be holy) they shall leaue the clothes of their minis-tracion, & put on other garmentes, when they haue any thing to do with the people.

Now when he had measured all the inner-mer house, he brought me fozth thozow the east pozte, and measured the same rounde aboute. He measured the east syde with the meteRode, which roūde aboute cōteyned. b.
C. meteroddes: And the nozthside measured he which cōteyned rounde about euē so muche. The other two sydes also towarde the south, & the west, which he measured cōteyned ether of them. b. C. meteroddes.
So he measured all the foure sydes, where there went a wall rounde aboute. b. C. meteroddes longe, and as bzoade also whyche seperated the holy from the vnholye.

¶ The. xlii. Chapter.

SO he brought me to the doze that turneth towarde the east. Beholde, then came the glozie of the god of Israel frō out of the east, whose voice was like a great noyse of waters, and the earthe was lyghtened with his glozy. His lyght to lohe vpō was * lyke the fyzste, that I sawe, when I went in, what time as the citie should haue bene destroyed: & like the vision that I sawe by the water of Cobar. Then fell I vpon my face: but the glozie of the LORD came into the house, thozowe the east doze. So a wynde toke me vp, and bzoughte me into the innermer courte: and beholde, the house was full of the glozye of the Lozde. I heard one speakynge vnto me oute of the house: and there stode one by me, that said vnto me: O thou sonne of mā, * this rowme is my seate, and the place of my fote steppes where as I wil dwel amonge the chyldzen of Israel foz euermoze: so that the house of Israel shal nomoze defile my holy name, neither they, noz their kynges thozowe theyr whoredome, thozowe their hye places, and thozowe the deade bodyes of their kynges: whiche haue builded their thzecholdes, in maner hard vpon my thzecholdes, & theyr postes almoste at my postes: and a wall betwixte me and them. Thus haue they defyled my holy name wyth theyr abhominacions, that they haue commytted. Wherfoze, I haue destroyed them in my wzathe. But now they shal put away their whoz-dome, and the deade bodies of their kinges out of my syght, that I maye dwel amonge them foz euermoze. * Therefoze, O thou sonne of man, shewe thou the housholde of Israel a tēple, that they maye be ashamed of their wickednesse, & measure thē selues an example therat. And when they be ashamed of all their wozches, then shewe them the fourme and fashion of the temple, the commynge in, the goynge oute, all the maner and descripcio therof. Yea, all the dses and ozdinaunces of it, that they maye kepe and fulfyll all the fashions, and customes thereof. This is the description of the house. Aboue, vpon the mounte rounde aboute al the cozners, is thalbe the holyest of all. Beholde, that is the description and fashyon of the house. This is the measure of the aulter, after the true cubyte: whyche is a spanne longer then another cubite, his botome in the myddest was a cubyte longe and wyde, and the ledge that went rounde about it, was a spanne bzoade. This is the heygth of the aulter. From the grounde to the lower steppes, the length is two cubytes: and the bzedth one cubyte: and from the lower steppes to the hygher, are foure cubytes, and the bzedth but one cubyte.

* The aulter was. iiii. cubytes hye, and from the aulter vpwarde stode. iiii. hoznes and it was. xii. cubytes longe, and. xii. cubites bzoade, vpō the foure cozners: the couerynge of the aultare was. iiii. cubytes longe and bzoade vpon the foure cozners, and

To the preistes, to the Leuites Ezr.44 bthat be of the sede of * Sadoch, and treade and.84.b before me to do me seruice, sayeth the Lord God. Vnto these geue thou a yonge bullocke for a sinoffrynge: and take the bloude of him, and sprynkle vpō foure hornes with all: and the foure corners of the aultar couerynge, with the ledge that goeth rounde aboute therwith shalte thou clense it, and Lev.16.f reconcyle it. * Thou shalte take the bullocke also of the synneofferinge, and burne him in a seuerall place without the sanctuarye. The next daye, take a goatbucke, without blemish for a sinoffringe, to reconcyle the aulter withal, like as it was reconcyled with the bullocke. Nowe whan thou hast made it cleane, then offre a yonge bullocke Lev.22.c *without blemische, and a rāme oute of the flocke without blemische also. Offer them Lev. 11.b before the Lord: & let their priest cast * salt there vpō, & geue them so vnto the lord for a burntoffringe. Seuen dayes shalt thou dringe euery daye a goatbucke for sinne. A yonge bullocke and a ramme of the flocke, bothe without blemyshe, shall they offre. Seuē dayes shal they reconcyle and clense the aultar, and offre vpon it. When these daies are expired, thē vpon the eigyte daye and so forthe, the priestes shall offre theyr burntoffringes, and healthofferinges vpō the aultar: so will I be mercyful vnto you, sayeth the Lorde God.

A ¶ The. xliiii. Chapter.

AFter this he brought me agayne to the outwarde dore of the sanctuarie on the east syde, and that was shut. Then said the Lord vnto me: this dore shal be stil shut: and not opened for any man to go thorow it: but onely for the lorde God of Israel: yea, he shal go thorow it, els shal it be shut stil. The prince him selfe shal come thorow it, that he maye eate breade before the lord. At the porch shal he come in, and there shal he go oute agayne. Thē brought he me to the dore vpon the northe syde of Ezr.24.d the house. And as I loked aboute me, be-and 40.e holde, * the glorie of the Lorde fylled the Nu.xv.c. house: and I fell downe vpon my face. So 4.re. 8.b the Lorde spake vnto me: O thou sonne of 2.pe.7.8. man, fasten this to thine hert: beholde, and take diligente hede to all that I will saye B vnto the, concernynge al the ordinaūces of the Lorde, and all his lawes: ponder well with thine hert the cōming in of the house, and the goynge forthe of the sanctuarye: and tell that obstinate houshold of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: O house of Israel, ye haue now done ynoughe with all youre abhominacions, seynge that ye haue brought into my sanctuarye straungers, hauynge vncircumcised heartes and flesche, where thorow my sanctuarie is defiled, whē ye offre me breade, fat, and bloude. Thus with al your abhominaciōs ye haue broken my couenaūt, and not kept the holy ordinaunces of my Sanctuarie: but set keepers of my Sanctuarie, euen after youre owne mynde. Therfore thus saith the lord C God: of al the straūgers that dwel amonge the children of Israell, no straunger whose hert and flesche is not circūcised, shall come within my sanctuarie: No, nor the Leuites that be gowe backe fro me: & haue dyseased the people of Israell with all errours, goynge after their ydoles: therefore shall they beare their owne wyckednesse. Should they be set and ordeyned to ministre vnder the dores of the house of my Sanctuarye? And to do seruyce in the house: to slaye burnteoffringes & sacrifices for the people: to stande before them, and to serue thē, seynge the seruyce that they do them, is before their ydoles, and cause the house of Israell to stomble thorowe theyr wyckednes? * For the which cause I haue pluckte 3.reg.13.f out mine hande ouer them, saieth the Lord D God: so that nowe they muste beare theyr owne iniquitie, and not to come nye me to serue me with their priesthode, in my sanctuarye, and moste holyest of all: that they maye beare theyr owne shame and abhominacions, whiche they haue done. Shoulde I vse them to be porters of the house, and to all the seruyce that is done therin? But Ezr.44b the priestes, the leuites, the sonne of * Sa- and.48b doch, that kepte the holye ordynaunces of my Sanctuarye, when the chyldren of Israel were gone fro me, shall come to me, to do me seruyce, to stande before me, and to offre me the fat and the bloude, sayeth the E Lorde God. They shall go into my Sanctuarye, and treade before my table: to do me seruyce, and to wayte vpon myne ordinaunces. Nowe when they go in at the dores of the innermer courte: they shall put on lynen clothes, so that no woollen come vpon them whyle they do seruice vnder the dores of the innermer courte, and within. They shall haue fayre lynen bonettes vpō their heades: and lynen breches vpon their loynes, which in their labour they shal not put aboute them. And when they go forth to the people into the outwarde courte, they shall put of the clothes wherein they haue ministred

ministred, and laye them in the habitation of the sanctuary, and put on other apparel, lest they vnhalowe the people with theyr clothes. * They shall not shaue theyr heades, nor nosyche the buche of theyr heere, but rounde theyr heades onelye. * All the Priestes that goe into the inmoste courte, shall dyncke no wyne. * They shall maryc no wydowe, neyther one that is put from her husbande: but a mayde of the seed of the house of Israel, or a wydow that hathe hadde a priestc before. * They shal shew my people the differēce betwene the holy & vnholy, betwyxte the cleane, & vncleane. Iu ye controuersye, they shall discerne it: & gene sentence after my iudgemētes. My solēne feastes, my lawes, & ordināces shal they kepe, & halow my sabbothes. * They shal come at no dead persō to defile thē selues, excepte it be father, or mother, son or doughter, brother or suster, that hathe had yet no husbande, in suche maye they be defiled. And whē he is clensed, there shalbe rekened vnto hym. vii. daies: and yf he goo into the sanctuarye agayne to do seruyce, he shal offre a synofferynge, sayeth the Lorde God. * They shall haue an heritage: Yea, I my selfe wyll be theyr heritage, eles shal ye gene thē no possession in Israell, for I am theyr possession. The meatoffring, synoffring, & trespaceoffryng, shal they eat, & euery dedicate thing in Israel shalbe theirs. The firstliges of al the first frutes, & all frewyloffrynges shall be the preestes. Ye shall gene vnto the preest also al the first frute of your eyest bozne, al I saye, & al that is separated vnto God, al youre heue offrynges (I saye) shall be the priestes, and also the fyrstlynges of youre dough, that God may prouyde the residue. * But no deade carcon shall the preest eate, nor such as is deuoured of wilde beastes, foules, or cattel.

¶ The.xlv. Chapter.

A Exe.47 b When ye deuide the land by the lot ye shal put aside one * part for the lord to be holy frō other landes: namely, xxb. M. metroddes lōg. & x. M. brode. This shalbe holy, as wyde as it is rounde about. Of this parte there shal belonge vnto the sanctuarye. b. C. metroddes in all the foure corners, and. l. cubites wyde round about to the subuebes. And from thys measure, namelye, of. xxb. M. metroddes longe, and x. m. brod, thou shalt measure, wherin the sanctuary, & the holyest of al maye stande. The residue of that holy grounde shall be the priestes, whiche do seruyce in the sanctuarye of the Lorde, and goe in before the Lorde to serue hym, that they maye haue rowme to dwel in. As for the sanctuarye, it shal stande for it selfe: and to the Leuytes that serue in the house, ther shalbe geuen xx. habitacions, of the. xxb. M. lengthe, and x. M. bredth. ye shall geue also vnto the cite a possession of. b. M. metroddes brode, and. xxb. m. longe, besyde the parte of the sanctuary: That shalbe for the hole house of Israell. * Vpon bothe the syde of the sanctuaryes parte, and by the cytye, there shalbe geuen vnto the prynce, what soeuer lyeth oueragaynst the city, as farre as reacheth westward & eastwarde: which shalbe as longe as one parte, from the west vnto the east. This shalbe hys owne land in Israel, that my prices be nomoze chargeable vnto my people. And suche as remayneth yet ouer in the lande, shall be geuen to the house of Israel, accozdyng to theyr tribes. Thus sayeth the Lozd god: O ye Pozynces, ye haue nowe oppressed and destroyed ynough: nowe leaue of, handle now accozdyng to the thyng that is equall and lawful: and thzuste out my people nomoze sayeth the Lorde God. * ye shall haue a true weyghte, a true Ephah, and a true bath. The Ephah, and the bath shall be a lyke. One bath shall conteyne the tenth parte of an homer, and so shal one Ephah do: theire measure shall be after the homer. * One sycle maketh. xx. geras. So twentye sycles. xxb. and xb. sycles maketh a pounde. Thys is the heaueofferynge that ye shall geue to be heaued: namelye, the. xbi. parte of an Ephah, oute of an homer of wheate, and the. xbi. parte of an Ephah, oute of an homer of Barlye. The oyle shall be measured wyth the Bath: euen the tenth parte of one Bath out of a Coz. Ten Bathes make one homer: for one homer fylleth ten Bathes. And one lambe frome. iii. C. theye out of the pasture of Israell: For a meatoffrynge, burntoffrynge, and healoffring to reconcyle them, sayeth the Lorde God. All the people of the lande shall geue thys heaueofferynge with a frewyl, for the prynces parte to offre burntoffrynges, meateoffrynges, and dryncheoffrynges, vnto the Lord, in the holy dayes, new moones, sabbothes, and in all the hye feastes of the house of Israell. The synoffringe, meatoffryng, burntoffrynge, and healoffrynge shall he geue to reconcyle the house of Israell. Thus sayth the Lozd God: The first daye of the fyrste moneth shalt thou take a yonge bullocke without blemich, & clēse the sanctuarye. So the preest shall take of the bloude of the synoffryng, & sprynckle it

G Upon the same day, shal the prince genefor him selfe & al the people of the land, a bullocke for a synneoffering. And in the feast of the seuen dayes, he shall offre euery daye a bullocke and a rāme. that are without blemyshe for a burnt offering vnto the Lord: & an he goate dayly for a synneoffreyng. For the meateoffreynges, he shall geue euer an ephah to a bullocke, an ephah to a ram, and an hin of oyle to an Ephah. Upon the fifteenth daye of the seuenth moneth, he shall kepe the seuen dayes holy, one after another, euen as the other seuen dayes: wyth the sinofferinge, burntoffreynge, meatoffreynge, and with the oyle.

¶ The. xlvi. Chapeter.

THus sayth the Lord God: the doze of the innermer courte towarde to east, shall be shut the. vi. worckinge dates: but in the sabboth, & in the day of the new mone, it shalbe opened. Thē shal the prince come vnder the doze pozche, & stande styll without by the doze cheke. So the priestes shal offer vp his burnt & healthofferinges. And he shal worship at the dozeposte, & go
B his way forth agayne: but the doze shal no moze be shut tyl the euenyng. On the same maner shall the people of the lande also do their worshippe before the Lorde, without thys dooze vpon the Sabbothes and newe moones. This is nowe the burntoffreyng, that the prynce shall bryng vnto the Lord vpō the sabboth: sixe lambes without blemish, & a ram without blemish, & an ephah for a meatoffringe, with the ramme. As for the lambes, he maye geue as many meateofferynges to them as he wil: and an hin of oyle to an ephah. In the daye of the newe moneth, it shall be a yonge bullocke without blemish, sixe lambes, and a rām also without blemisshe: Wyth the bullock he shall geue an ephah, and with the ram an ephah also for a meate offerynge, but to the lambes, what he maye come by. And euer C an hyn of oyle to an ephah. When the prynce commeth, he shal go vnder the dooze pozche, and euen there depart forth againe. But when the people of the lande come before the Lorde in the hie solempne feast, as many as come in by the nozthe dooze to do worshippe, shal go out againe at the south dooze. And they that come in at the south dooze shall go forth agayne at the Nozthe dooze. There shall none go oute at the dooze, where he came in, but shall go righte forth ouer on the other side, & the prynce shal go in and out amōg them. Upon the solempne D and hye feaste dayes, this shalbe the meateofferynge. An ephah to a bullocke, and an ephah to a rām, & to the lambes, as many as he wyll: but euer an hyn of oyle to an ephah. Nowe when the prince bringeth a burntoffring, or an healthoffering with a frewyll vnto the Lord, the east doze shalbe opened vnto him, that he maye do with his burnt & healthofferinges, as he doth vpon the sabboth: and when he goeth forth, the doze shalbe shut after him againe. He shal dayly bryng vnto the Lorde, a lambe of a yeare olde wythoute blemysh for a burntofferinge: this shal he do euery mozninge. C And for a meateoffreynge, he shal geue the syxte parte of an ephah, and the thied part of an hyn of oyle, to myngle wyth the cakes euery mozning: yea, this shalbe dayly a meateoffreynge vnto the Lorde: for an euerlastyng ordynaunce: and thus shal the lambe, the meatoffreynge, and oyle, be geuen euery mozninge, for a dayly burntofferynge. Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde God. yf the prynce geue a gyfte vnto anye of hys sonnes, then shall it be hys sonnes heritage perpetuall, that he maye possesse it. But yf he wyll geue one of his seruaun-nes shal he geue his possession, that my people be not scatered abrode, but that euerye mā may haue his own. And he broughte me thorowe the entraunce at the syde of the doze, to the habytacyon of the sanctuary, that belongeth to the Prestes, and stode towarde the nozth, and beholde, there was a place vpon the west syde, then said he vnto me. This is the place where the priestes G shall dyghe the treespace and sinofferinges, & bake the meateofferinges, that they nede not beare them into the outwarde court: & so to vnhalowe the people. So he broughte me into the vtmoste courte, rounde aboute all the foure corners. Beholde, in euerye corner of the courte, there was yet a litle courte. Yea, in all the foure corners of the courte, there was made a lytle courte of. xl. cubites long, and. xxx. cubites brode, these foure lytle courtes were of one lykemeasure: and there went a rydge wal rounde about them all four, vnder the which there were were barthes made round about. This said he vnto me: This is the kechin where the ministres of the house shal dight the slaine offrynges of the people.

A Fter this he brought me againe before the dore of the house: & beholde, there gushed out waters frō vnder the postes of the house eastwarde, for the house stode toward the east, that ran down vpon the right side of the house, which lieth to the alter southward. Then caried he me out to the north dore, & brought me forth Zac. 13.a and.14.b there roūde about by the vtmost dore that turneth eastwarde. * Beholde, there came forth the water vpon the right side. Nowe when the man that had the meterodde in his hāde went vnto the east dore, he measured a. M. cubites, and then he broughte me thorow the water, euē to the ancles: so he measured yet a. M. and brought me thorow the water againe vnto the knees: yet measured he a thousande, and brought me thorowe the water vnto the loynes. After this he measured a thousande agayne, then B was it such a ryuer, that I might not wade thorowe it. The water was so depe, that it was medefull to haue swymmed, for it myghte not be waded ouer. And he sayde vnto me: haste thou sene this, O thou sonne of man? and wyth that, he brought me to to the ryuer banche agayne. Now when I came there, there stode manye trees vpon either side of the ryuer banche. Then sayde he vnto me: This water that floweth oute toward de the east, and runneth downe into the playne felde, commeth into the sea: and from the sea it runneth out: and maketh the waters whole: yea, all that line and moue, mat.xiii.c and. xvii f wherunto this ryuer commeth, shall recouer. * And where this water cōmeth, there * Joh.4.d and.7.d shall be muche fyshe. For all that a commeth to this water, shalbe lustye & whole. By this riuer shal the fishers stande from Engaddy vnto En eglaim, & there spreade oute theyr nettes: for there shall be great heapes of fyshe, lyke as in the mayne sea. As for hys clay and pytte, they shall not C be whole, for why? it shall be occupyed for sale. By this ryuer vpon bothe the sydes of the shore, there shall growe all maner of frutefull trees, whose leaues shall not fall of, neyther shall their frute perish: but euer be rype at their monethes: for their water runneth out of the sanctuarye. His frute is good to eate, and hys leafe profytable for medecine. Thus sayeth the Lord God. Let thys be the border, wherein ye shall deuide the lande vnto the.xii. trybes of Israell, with the lyne. Parte it indyffe-

Gen.22.c rently vnto one as vnto another: * of the whyche lande I swore vnto youre fathers, that it shoulde fal to youre enheritaunce. Thys is the border of the lande vpon the northside, from the mayne sea, as men goe to Zadada: namely, Hemath, Berotha, Sabarim, from the borders of Damascus, and Hemath, vnto Hazar Tychon, and that lyeth vpon the coastes of Haueran. Thus D the borders from the sea forthe, shall be Hazar, Euan: the border of Damascus, the north, and the borders of Hemath, that is the northe parte. The east syde shall ye measure, frome Haueran and Damascus, frome Galead, and the lande of Israell by Jordane, and so forthe, frome the sea coaste, that lyeth eastward: and thys is the eastparte. The southside is, from Thamar nu xx. b forth to the * waters of strife, vnto Cades, Ex.17.b the ryuer to the mayne sea: and that is the south parte. The west parte: namelye the greate sea, from the borders therof, tyll a man come vnto Hemath: thys is the west parte. * This lande shall ye parte amonge num. 33.f you, accordynge to the trybes of Israell, & deuyde it to be an heritage for you * and Leu.19.g for the straungers that dwell amonge you, Deut.1.d and beget childzen. For ye shall take them and.24.g amonge the chyldren of Israell, lyke as though they were of your owne housholde, and countrey, and they shall haue heritage with you amonge the chyldren of Israell. Lode in what tribe the straūger dwelleth, in the same tribe shal ye geue him his heritage, sayth the Lorde God.

C this he desired of the chiefe chamberlayne, lest he should defile hym selfe. So god gaue Daniell fauoure & grace, before the chiefe chamberlayne, that he sayde vnto hym: I am afrayed of my Lorde the kyng, whiche hath appoynted you your meate & drinke: lest he spye your faces to be worse lyknge then the other chyngaldes of youre age, and so shal ye make me lose my heade vnto the kynge. Then Danyel answered Melassar, whom the chiefe chamberlayne had set ouer Daniel, Ananias, Misael and Azarias, and sayde: O, proue but ten dayes with thy seruauntes, and let vs haue po-tage to eate, and water to drynche, the loke vpon oure faces, and theyr that eate of the kynges meate. And as thou seyst, so D deale with thy seruauntes. So he consented to them in this matter, and proued the x. dayes. And after the ten dayes, theyr faces were better lyknge and fatter, then all the yonge syngaldes, whych dyd eate of the kynges meate. Thus Melassar toke away theyr meate and wine, and gaue the potage therefore. God gaue nowe these foure syngaldes connyng and lernynge in al scripture and wisdom: but vnto Daniel specially, he gaue vnderstandyng of al visions & dreames. Nowe when the tyme was expired, that the kyng had apoynted to bryng in these yonge syngaldes vnto hym, the chiefe chamberlayne brought the before Nabuchodonosor, & the kyng communed with them. But amonge them all were founde none suche as Daniell, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias. Therfore stode they before the kyng, which in al wisdom, and matters of vnderstandynge, that he enquired of the, fonde the ten times better, then all the Sothsayers & charmers that were in al his realme. And Daniel abode still, vnto the first yeare of kyng Cyrus.

A ¶ The. ij. Chapter.

Iob. 7. b. IN the. ij. yere of the reigne of Nabucho-Dan. 4. a donosor, had Nabuchodonosor a dreame, and. 5. a. * wherthorow hys spirite was vexed, & his slepe brake fro him. The the kyng com-maūded to call together all the sothsayers, charmers, witches & Caldees, for to shew the kyng his dreame. So they came, & stode before the kyng. And the kyng said vnto the:
I haue dreamed a dreame, & my spirite was so troubled therewith, that I haue cleane forgotten, what I dreamed. Vpon this the Caldees answered the kynge in the Syriās speche: O kynge, god saue thy lyfe for euer.
Shewe thy seruauntes thy dreame, and we shal shewe the, what it meaneth. The kyng gaue the Chaldees theyr answere, & sayde: Ie is gone from me. Yf ye wyll not make me vnderstande the dreame with the interpretacion therof, ye shal dye, & your houses shalbe pyrsed. But yf ye tel me the dreame and the meanynge therof, ye shall haue of me gyftes, rewardes, and greate honoure: onelye shewe me the dreame, and the sygnifycation of it. They answered agayne, and sayde: the kynge muste shewe hys seruauntes the dreame: and so shal we declare what it meaneth. Then the kynge answered, sayinge: I perceaue of a truth, that ye doe but prolonge the tyme, for so muche as ye se that the thynge is gone fro me. Therefore, yf ye wyll not tell me the dreame, ye shall all haue one iudgemente.
But ye fayne and dyssemble with fayne wordes, which ye speake before me, to put of the tyme. Therefore tel me the dreame, and so shall I knowe yf you can shewe me what it meaneth. Vpon thys the Chaldees gaue answere before the kynge, and sayd: there is no man vpon earthe, that can tell the thynge, whiche the kynge speaketh of:
yea, ther is nether kyng, prince nor lorde, that euer asketh suche thynges at a soth-sayer, charmer, or Caldey: for it is a verye harde matter, that the kynge requyreth. C Nether is ther anye, that can certifye the kynge thereof, excepte the goddes: Whose dwelling is not among the creatures. For the which cause the kyng was wroth with greate indignacion, and cōmaunded to destrope all the wyse men at Babylon, and the proclamacion went forth, and the wise men were slayne. They soughte also to slay Daniel with hys companyons. Then Daniell enquired of Arioche the kynges stewarde, of the iudgemente and sentence, that was gone forth already to kyll such as were wyse at Babylon. He answerd, and sayd vnto Arioche deyng then the kynges debitye: Why hath the kynge proclaymed so cruell a sentence? So Arioch tolde Daniel the matter. Vpon thys, went Danyell vp, and desired the kynge, that he myght haue leysure to shewe the kynge the interpretacion, and then came he home agayne and shewed the thing to Ananias, Misael, and Azarias hys companions: That they shoulde beseche the GOD of heauen for grace in thys secrete, that Daniel and hys felowes wyth other suche as were wyse in Babylon, perysshed not. Then was the D mistery shewed vnto Daniel in a vision by nyght. And Daniell praysed the God of heauen. Daniel also cryed loude, and sayd:

Vpō this went Daniel in vnto Arioch, whom the kynge had ordeyned to destroye the wyse at Babylon, he wente vnto hym, and sayde: destroye not suche as be wise in Babylon, but bryng me in vnto the kynge, and I shal shewe the kynge the interpretacion. Then Arioch broughte Daniel in to the kynge in all the haste, and sayde vnto him: I haue founde a man, among the prisoners of Juda, that shal shewe the kynge the interpretacio. The answered the king, and sayde vnto Danyel: whose name was Balthazar: Arte thou he that canst shewe me the dreame, which I haue sene, and the interpretacion therof? Daniell answered the kynge to hys face, and sayde: As for thys secret, for the which the kyng maketh inquisicio: it is neyther the wise, the sorcerer, the charmer, nor the wull coūcer, that Mat.11.c can certifye the kynge of it. * Onelye God in heauen can open secretes, e he it is that sheweth the kyng Nabuchodonosor what F is for to come in the latter dayes. Thy dreame, and that whych thou hast sene in thyne head vpon thy bed, is this: O kyng, thou diddest cast in thy minde, what shuld come here after. So he that is the opener of misteryes, telleth thee, what is for to come. As for me, thys secret is not shewed me, for any wisdome that I haue more then any other lyuynge, but onely that I might shewe the kynge the interpretacion, e that he myght knowe the thoughtes of hys owne hearte. Thou kynge sawest, and beholde: there stode before the a great ymage whose figure was maruelous great, and his bylage grymme. But the stone that smote the ymage, became a great mountayne, which fulfylleth the whole earthe. Thys is the dreame. And now wyl we shew before the

Dan.3.d a kynge of kynges: For the God of heauen hath geue the a kingdom, riches, stregth, and maiestye: and hathe delyuered the all thynges, that are amonge the chyldren of men: the beestes of the felde, and the foules vnder the heauen, and geuen the dominion ouer them al: Thou art that golden head. After the there ch all aryse another kyngedome, whiche shalbe lesse then thyne. The thyrde kyngdome shalbe lyke copper, and haue domination in al landes. The fourth kyngdome shalbe as stronge as yron. For lyke as yron breaketh and breaketh al thynges: yea, euen as yron beateth euery thing downe, so shall it beate downe e destroye. Where as thou sawest the fete and toes, parte of earthe, and parte of yron: that is a deuided kyngdom, which neuertheles shal haue some of the yron grosde myxte wyth it, for so much as thou haste sene the yron myxte with the claye. The toes of the fete that were parte of yron, and part of claye: signifieth: that it shalbe a kingdom partly stronge e partly weake. And wher as thou sawest yron myxte wyth claye, they shall mingle them selues with the sede of simple people, and yet not continue one with another, lyke as yron wyll not be souldered with a potherde. In the dayes of these kynges, shall the God of heauen set vp an

And where as thou sawest, that wythout any hādes there was cutte oute of the * mounte : a stone, which brake the yron, the copper, the earthe, the syluer and golde in peces: by that hathe the great God shewed the kyng, what wyl come after thys. Thys is a true dreame, e the interpretacion of it is sure. Then the kyng Nabuchodonosor + fell downe vpon his face, e bowed him selfe vnto Daniell, and commaunded that they shoulde offre meate offerynges and swete odoures vnto hym. The kyng answered Daniell, & sayd: yea, of a trueth youre God is a God above al goddes, a Lorde above all kynges, and an opener of secretes: seynge thou canst discouer this mistery. So the king made Daniel a great mā, & gaue hym many & great gyftes. * He made him ruler of al the coun- Gen.14.c treyes of Babilō, & lorde of all the nobles that wer at Babilō. Nowe Daniel intreated the king for Sidrach, Misach & Abednago, so that he made the rulers ouer al the officers i the lāde of Babilō: but Daniel hi selfe remayned stil in the court by the kig.

¶ The.iii. Chaptee.

A NAbuchodonosor the kuge caused a golde ymage to be made, which was lx. cubites hie, & vi cubites thicke. This he made to be set vp i the felde of Dura, in the lāde of Babilō, & sente out to gether together the dukes, lorzes & nobles, the iudges & officers, the scribes & shzeues with al the rulers of the lande: That they might come to the dedicatiō of the ymage, which Nabuchodonosor the kyng had set vp: So the dukes, Lozdes and nobles, the iudges and officers, debytes and shzeues, with all the rulers of the lande gathered them together, and came vnto the dedycatynge of the ymage, that Nabuchodonosor the kynge hadde set vp. Nowe whan they stode before the ymage, whyche Nabuchodonosor set vp, the bedell cryed oute with al hys might: O ye people, kynredes and tonges, to you be it sayde: that when ye heare the noyse of the trōpettes, which shalbe blowen, with the harpes, shawmes, Psalteries, Simphonies, and al maner of musyke: ye fal downe and wozshyppe that golden ymage, that Nabuchodonosor the kynge hath sette vp. Who so then falleth not downe and boweth hym selfe, shal eus the same houre be caste into an hote burnynge ouen. Therefore, when all the folke heardе the noyse of the trompettes that were blowen, with the harpes, shawmes, psalteries, symphonyes, and all kynde of melodye, then al the people, kynredes and nacions, fel downe, and bowed them selues vnto the golden ymage that Nabuchodonosor the kyng had set vp. Now were ther C certayne men of the Chaldees, that wente euen then, and accused the Jewes, and sayd vnto the kyng Nabuchodonosor: O kyng, God saue thy lyfe for euer. Thou beynge kyng hast geuen a commauntement, that all men when they heare the noyse of the trompettes, harpes, shawmes, psalteryes, symphonies, and all the other melodyes shal fall downe and bowe them selues, to warde the golden ymage: Who so then fell not downe, and wozshypped not, that he should be cast into an hote burning ouen. Nowe are there certayne Jewes, * whom Dan.2.g thou haste set ouer the officers of the lande of Babylon: Namelye, Sydrach, Mysach, and Abednago. These men (O kynge) regarde not thy commaundemente: yea, they wyl not serue thy goddes, noz bowe them selues to the golden ymage that thou haste set vp. Then Nabuchodonosor in a cruell wzathe and displeasure, commaunded that Sidrach, Misach and Abednago, shoulde be brought vnto hym. So these men were brought before the kynge. Then Nabuchodonosor spake vnto them, and sayde: What? O Sidrach, Mysach, and Abednago, wyll not you serue my goddes? Noz bowe youre selues to the golden ymage, that I haue set vp? Well, be readye here after. When ye heare the noyse of the D trompettes blow, wyth the harpes, shawmes, psalteries, symphonyes, and all the other melodyes, that ye fall downe: and wozshyppe the ymage that I haue made. But yf ye wozshyp it not, ye shalbe caste immediatlye into an hote burnynge ouen. Let se, what god is ther, that may delyuer you out of my handes. Sidrach, Mysach, and Abednago, answered the kynge, and sayde: O Nabuchodonosor, we ought not to consente vnto thee in thys matter, for why? Our God whome we serue, * is able Nu.16.g to kepe vs frome the hote burnynge ouen (O kynge) and can ryghte wel delyuer vs oute of thy handes. And thoughe he wyll not, yet thou shalte knowe (O kynge) that we wyl not serue thy goddes, noz do reuerence to that ymage, whyche thou haste set vp. Then was Nabuchodonosor full of indignacio, so that the countenaunce of hys face chaunged vpon Sidrach, Misach and Abednago. Therfore, he charged and commaunded, that the ouen shoulde be made vii. times hotter thē it was wonte to be: & spake vnto the strōgest wozthies that wer E in hys hoste, for to bide Misach & Sidrach and Abednago, and to caste them into the hote burnynge ouen. So these men were bounde in theyr cotes, hosen, showes with their other garmentes, & cast into the hote burnyng ouen: for the kynges commaundement was so strayte, and the ouen was exceading hote. As for the men that put in Sidrach, Misach and Abednago, the flame of the fyre destroyed them. And these thre men, Sidrach, & Misach, and Abednago, fell downe in the hote burnynge ouen, beyng faste bounde. Then Nabuchodonosor the kynge maruey led, and stode vp in all haste: He spake vnto hys conncell, and sayde: dyd not you caste three thre men bounde into the fier? They answered, and said vnto the kynge: Yea, O kynge.

He answered, and sayde: Io, for all that, yet do I se foure men goynge louse in the myddest of the fyre, and nothing corrupte, and the fourthe is lyke the sonne of GOD to loke vpon. Vpon this wente Nabuchodonosor vnto the mouthe of the hote burnynge ouen, he spake also, and sayde: O Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, ye seruauntes of the hye God, go forth, & come hy-ther. And so Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago went out of the fire. Then the Dukes, Lordes, and nobles, and the kynges counci-Esa.43.a came together to se these men, * vpō whom the fyre had no maner of power in their bodies. In so muche that the heri heer of their heade was not burnt, and their clothes ne-chaūged: yea, there was no smel of fier felt vpon them. Thē spake Nabuchodonosor, and sayde: Blessed be the God of Sidrach, Hosa.34.a Misach, and Abednago: * which hath sent Dan. 6.b his Aungel, and defended his seruauntes, Acte.12.c that put their trust in him, that hath altered the kynges commaundemēt: & leoperde their bodies there vpon, rather then they would serue or worship any other god, excepte their owne god only. Therfore I wil, and commaūde, that al people, kynred and tonges, whiche speake any blasphemie against the God of Sidrach, Misach, & Abed

Misach, & Abednago, in the lāde of Babilō.

A Dan. vi.c NAbuchodonosor, * king vnto al people, kinredes, & tunges that dwel vpon the whole earth: peace be mul-the hie god hath wrought vpon me. O how great are his tokēs, & how mightie are his Luke.1.c uer. I Nabuchodonosor beynge at reste, in myne houle, and flory thinge in my palace, sawe a dreame, which made me afraied: and the thoughtes that I had vpō my bed, with the visions of myne heade, troubled me.

Dan.ii.a. * Then sent I out a cōmission, that al they which were of wisdom at Babilon shoulde be brought before me, to tel me the interpretacō of the dreame. So there came the soth-sayers, charmers, Caldees, and conturers of deuels: to whō I tolde the dreame, but what it betokened, they coulde not shew me: til at the last, there came one Daniel (otherwyse called Balthazar, accordinge to the name of my god) whych hath the spirite of the holye goddes in him, to whō I tolde the dreame, saying: O Balthazar thou prince of Soth-sayers: For so much as I know, that thou haste the spirite of the holy Goddes, and no secrete is hyd from the: tell me therefore, what the vision of my dreame (that I haue sene) maye signifye. I sawe a vision in my heade vpon my bed: and behold, there stode a tree vpon the grounde, which was verye hye, greate and mightie: the heyghte reached vnto the heauen, and the breedth exte-ded to all the endes of the earthe: hys lea-ues were fayre, he had verye muche frute, so that euery man had ynoughe to eate therin. The beastes of the felde had shadowes vnder it, and the foules of the ayre dwelte in the bowes thereof. Shortely, all creatures fed of it. I sawe in my heade a vysyon vpon my bed: and beholde, a watcher and a holye one came downe from heauen, and cried mightelye, sayinge: Hewe downe the tree, breake of his braunches, shake of his leaues, and scatre his frute abroade: that all the beastes maye get them awaye from vnder him, and the foules from his braunches. Neuertheles, leaue the grounde of hys rote styll in the earth, and bynde him vpon the playne felde, with cheynes of yron, and stele. With the dewe of heauen shall he be wet, & shall haue his parte in the herbes of the grounde with other wilde beastes. That mans hert of his shalbe taken from hym, & a beastes hearte shall be geuen him til seue yeres be come & gone vpō him. This erāde of the watcher, is a cōmaundemente grouded & sought out in the counsel of him, that is most holy: to learne mē for to vnderstāde, that the hiest hath power ouer the kingdomes of men, and geueth them to whome it lyketh hym, and bryngeth the bery outcas-tes of men ouer them. This is the dreame, that I kynge Nabuchodonosor haue sene.
Therfore, O Balthazar, tell thou me what it signifieth: for so much as al the wise men of my kyngedome are not able to shewe me, what it meaneth. But thou canste do it, for the spirite of the holy goddes is in the. Thē Daniel (whose name was Balthazar) helde his peace by the space of one houre, and his thoughtes troubled him. So the king spoke, and sayde: O Balthazar, let nether the dreame nor the interpretacion thereof feare the. Balthazar answered, sayinge: O my Lord, this dreame happē to thine enemies, and the interpretacō to thine aduer-saries. As for the tree that thou sawest which was so greate and myghtye, whose heyghte reached vnto the heauen, and hys breedthe into all the worlde: whose leaues were fayre, and the frute muche, vnder the whiche the beastes of the felde had their habitacion, habitacion, and vpon whose braunches the foules of the ayre vyd syt. Euen thou (O kynge) arte the tree, great and strong. Thy greatnes increaseth, and reacheth vnto the heauen, so dothe thy power to the endes of the earthe. But where as the kynge sawe a watcher, euen an holye angel, that came downe from heauen, and sayde: hew downe the tree, and destroy it: yet leaue the grouñe of the rote in the earthe: and bynde hym vpon the playne felde with cheynes of yron and stele. He shall be wet with the dewe of heauen, and his parte shalbe with the beastes of the felde tyl seuē yeares be come and E gone vpon him: This (O kynge) is the interpretacion: yea, it is the verye deuyse of him, that is hiest of all, and it toucheth my Lorde the kynge. Thou shalte be caste out from men, & thy dwellinge shalbe with the beastes of the felde, with grasse shalte thou be fed lyke an oxe. Thou must be wet with the dewe of the heauen: yea, seuen yeares shal come, and go vpon the, til thou know, Dani.iij.e that the hiest hathe power vpō the kinge-Jerr.27.c domes of men, and geueth them to whome he lyste. Moreouer, where as it was sayde: that the rote of the tree should be lefte styl in the grounde: it betokeneth, that thy king dome shal remayne whole vnto the, after thou hast lerned to knowe, that the power commeth from heauen. Wherfore, O kyng Eccl.19 b be content with my counсel, that thou mayest redeme thy sinnes with almesse * & thine offēces with mercy to pore people: for this shal be an healige of thine errour. All these thinges touche the kynge Nabuchodonoso-sor. So after. xii monethes, the kynge walked by and downe in the palace of the king dome of Babilon, & said: This is the great citie of Babilon, which I my selfe (with my F power and strength) haue made a kynges courte, for the honor of my maiestie. While these wordes were yet in the kiges mouth, there fell a voice frō heauē, saying: O kyng Nabuchodonosor, to the be it spoken: Thy kingdom shal depart from the, thou shalte be cast out of mens company: thy dwelling shalbe with the beastes of the felde, so that thou shalte eate grasse lyke as an oxe, tyll seuen yeares be come & gone ouer the: euen vntyll thou knowest, that the hyest hathe power vpon the kyngdomes of men, & that he may gene them vnto whome it pleaseth him. The very same houre was this matter fulfilled vpon Nabuchodonosor: so that he was cast out of mens company, & dyd eate grasse lyke an oxe. His body was wet with the dewe of heauen, til his heares were as G greate as Aegles fethers, and his nayles like vyldes clawes. When this tyme was paste, I Nabuchodonosor lyfte vp myne eyes vnto heauen, and mine vnderstādinge was restored vnto me agayne. Then gaue I thankes vnto the highest. I magnifyed and praised him that lyueth for euermore, * whose power endureth alwaye, and his Dan.iii.f. kyngedom from one generacio to another:

in comparison of whom al they that dwell vpon the earthe, are to be reputed as nothing. * He handled accordyng to his wil, psa.135.a amonge the powers of heauen, and amōge the inhabitours of the earthe: and there is none that maye resist his hande, or saye: Job.42.b what doest thou? * At the same tyme was myne vnderstandynge geuen me againe, & I was restored to the honoure of my kingdome, to my dignitie, & to myne own shape againe. My great estates, & princes sought vnto me, and I was set in my kyngdome agayne, so that I had yet greater worshyp.
Then dyd I Nabuchodonosor, lone, magni-fye, and prayse the kyng of heauen: for al his workes are true, and his wayes righte.
As for those that go on prowdely, he is able to bryngе them downe.

¶ The. v. Chapter. A

KYnge Balthazar made a great ban-ket to his thousande Lordes: wyth all these thousande he made greate chere, & whē he was dronchen with wyne, he commaunded to bring him the golden, & siluer uessels * which his father Nabucho- i.pa.36.g donosor had taken out of the tēple at Jerusalem: that the king and his Lordes, wyth his queue, and concubynes, mighte drincke therout. So they brought the goldē uessel, that was taken out of the tēple of the Lor-des house at Jerusalem. Then the kynge and his Lordes with his Quene, and cōcubynes dronche out of them. They dronche wyne, and praysed theyr Idols of golde, B siluer, copper, yron, wod, and stone. In the verye same houre there appeared fyngers, as it had bene of a mans hande writynge, ryght ouer against the candelstycke vpon the playne wall in the kynges palace, and the kynge sawe the paime of the hande that wrote. * Then chaunged the kynge hys Jer. 50.a countenaunce, and his thoughtes troubled him, so that the ioyntes of his body shoke, and his knees smote one against the other.
* Wherfore the kynge cryed myghtelye, Dani.ii.a that they should bryng him the charmers, Caldees, and conurers of deuels. The kynge spake also to the wyse men of Babylon, and sayde: Who so can rede this writynge, & shewe me the playne meanyng therof: shalbe clothed with purple, haue a chayne of golde about his necke, and rule the thyrde parte of my kyngedome. Vpon this came al the kinges wyse mē: but they coulde neyther reade the writynge, nor shew

the kynge what it ſignifyed. Then was the kinge ſore afrayed, in ſo muche, that his coloure chaūged, and his Lordes were ſore bered. So by reason of thys matter, that C hadde happened to the kynge and his Lordes, the Quene went vp her ſelfe into the banckett houſe, and ſpake vnto the kynge, ſaynge: O kynge, GOD ſaue thy lyfe for euer. Let not the thoughtes trouble thee, and let not thy countenaunce be chaūged. For why? there is a man in thy kingdom, that hathe the ſpirite of the holy goddes Dan.v.a within him, * as it was ſene in thy fathers dayes. He hathe vnderſtandyng and wyſdome lyke the goddes: yea, the kinge Nabuchodonoſor thy father, made this mā cheefe of the ſothſayers, charmers, Chaldees, and readers of deſtinies: bycauſe that ſuche an aboundaunte ſpirite, knowledge and wyſdome (to expounde dreames, to open ſecretes, & to declare harde dowtes) was founde in him: yea, euen in Daniel, whō the kinge named Balthaſar. Let this ſame Daniell be ſent for, & he ſhall tel what it meaneth. Thē was Daniel brought before the king. So the king ſpake vnto Daniel, and ſayde: Art thou that Daniel: one of the pryſoners of Juda, whome my father the kynge, brought oute of Jewrye? I haue herde ſpeake of the, that thou haſte the ſpirite of the holy goddes, experience & vnderſtāding, and that there hath bene greate wyſedome D foūde in the. Now haue ther bene brought me, wyſe and conninge charmers, to reade this wrytyng, and to ſhew me the meanig therof. But they coulde not tell me, what this matter ſignifyed. Then hearde I ſay, that thou canſt expounde darcke thynges, and declare harde doubtes: Well than, yf thou canſt reade this writynge, & ſhew me the meaynge therof, thou ſhalt be clothed with purple, haue a cheyne of golde aboute thy necke, and rule the thirde parte of my E kingdome. Daniel answered, & ſayd before 4 reg.5.d the king: * As for thy rewardes, kepe them Mat.x.a to thy ſelfe, or geue thy riche gifres to another: yet not the leſſe, I will rede the wrytynge vnto the kynge, and ſhewe him the Dani.ii.c interpretacyon thereof. * O kynge heare. God the hyeſt gaue vnto Nabuchodonoſor thy father, the dignitie of a kynge with worſhippe and honour, ſo that al people, kynreddes and tonges, ſtode in awe & feare of him, by reaſon of the hye eſtate, that he had lent him. For why, he ſlewe whom he woulde: he ſmote whom it pleaſed him. Agayne: whome he woulde, he ſet vp: and Dan.4.d whom he lyſt, he put downe. * But becauſe his herte was ſo proude, and his ſtomacke ſet ſo faſte vnto wilfulneſſe: he was depoſed from his kingly trone, and his maieſtie was taken from him. He was chut out frō amonge men, hys hert was lyke a beaſtes F hert, and his dwellyng was with the wilde aſſes: he was fayne to eate graſſe lyke an oxe, and his bodye was wet with the dewe of the heauen, tyll he knewe, that the hieſt had power vpon the kyngedomes of men, and ſetteth ouer them, whom he lyſt. And thou his ſonne (O Balthaſar) for all this, haſt not ſubmitted thyne hert, though thou kneweſt al theſe thynges: but haſt magnified thy ſelfe aboue the Lorde of heauen, ſo that the veſſelles of hys houſe were brought before thee, that thou, and thy Lordes, with thy Quene and Concubines, myghte drynche wyne therout. And haſte prayſed the Idolles of ſyluer and golde, copper and yron, of wode and ſtone, which neither ſee, heare, nor vnderſtande. As for Act.17.b the GOD, * in whoſe hande conſiſteth thy breath, and al thy wayes: thou haſte not G loued him. Therefore is the palme of thys hande ſente hyther from hym, to token by thys wrytynge. And thys is the ſcripture, that is writtē by: Mane, Thetel, Phares. Now the interpretacīō of the thig is this: Mane, God hath numbred thy kingdome, and brought it to an ende: Thetel, thou art weyed in the balaunce, and arte founde to lyghte: Phares, thy kyngedome is delt in partes, & geuen to the Medes and Perſes. Then commaunded Balthaſar, to clothe Daniel with purple, to hange a cheyne of golde aboute his necke, and to make a proclamacīō concernyng him: that he ſhoulde be the ruler of the thirde part of his kyngdome. * The very ſame nyght was Bal- Eſa.47.b thaſar the kynge of the Chaldees ſlayne, and * Darius oute of Medea, toke in the Dan.9.a kingdome, being. lxii. yeare of age.

¶ The. vi. Chapter.

IT pleaſed Darius to ſet ouer his kyngdome an. C and. xx. lordes, which ſhuld A be in all his kingdō aboute. Aboue theſe he ſet three princes (of whō Daniel was one) that the Lordes might geue accomptes vnto thē, & the king to be vndiſcealed. But Daniel exceaded al theſe princes & Lordes, for the ſprite of God was plenteous in him: ſo that the kynge was minded to ſet him ouer the whole realme. Whereforе the prynces and Lordes, ſought to pycke oute in Daniel, ſome quarell agaynſte the kyngdome: yet coulde they fynde none occaſyon nor faute vpon hym. For why? he was ſo faythfull, that there was no blame nor dishoneſty founde in him. Then ſaide theſe men: we cannne get no quarell agaynſt this B Daniel, excepte it be in the lawe of hys God. Vpon thys, wente the prynces and Lordes together vnto the kynge, and ſayd thus thus vnto hym: kynge Darius, God saue thy lyfe for euer. All the greate estates of the realme as the Princes, Dukes, Senatores, and Iudges, are determed to put out a commaundemente of the kynge, and to make a sure statute: namely, that who so desyreth any peticion, either of any God, or man (within this .xxx. dayes) excepte it be onely of thee, O kynge: the same person maye be caste into the Lyons vnne. Wherfore, O kynge, confirme thou this statute, and make a writynge: that the thinge which the Medes, and Perses haue ordeyned, be not altered nor broken. So Darius made the writynge: and confirmed it. Now when Daniel vnderstode that the writynge was made, he wente into hys house: and the wyndowes of his wall towarde Jerusalem stode open. There kneled he downe vpon his knees, thre tymes a daye: there he made his petition, and praised his God, lyke as his maner was to do afore tyme. Then theese men made searche, and founde Daniel makinge his petition, and prayinge vnto his God. So they came to the kynge, and spake before hym concernynge his cõmaundement, sayinge: O kinge, hast thou not subscribed the statute, that within .xxx. dayes whoso requireth his petition of anye God or man but onely of thy selfe, O kynge: he shalbe caste into the denne of the Lyons? The kyng answered, & said: yea, it is true. It must be as a lawe of the Medes & Perses, that may not be broken. Then answered they, & said vnto the kinge, Daniel one of the prisoners of Juda: O kyng, regardeth neither the, nor thy statute, that thou hast made: but maketh his petition thre times a day. Whe the king hearde these wordes, he was sore greued, and would haue excused Daniel, to deliuer him, and put of the matter, vntyl the Sunne went downe, to the intente that he myghte saue hym.

These men perceauinge the kinges mynde, said vnto him: knowe this (O kynge) that the lawe of the Medes, and Perses is, that the commaundemente and statute whyche the kyng maketh, maye not be altered.

Bel.i.c * Then the kynge bad them bring Daniel, and they cast him into the Lions denne.

The kynge also spake vnto Daniel, & said: thy God, whom thou alwaye seruest, euē he shal defende the. And there was brought a stone, and laid vpon the hole of the denne, this the kynge sealed with his owne ring, and with the signet of his princes: that the E kinges commaundement concerninge Daniel, thoulde not be broken. So the kynge went into his palis, and eat no meate that nighte, neither was there anye minstrelsye brought in before him, neither could he take any slepe. But by tymes in the morynnge at the breake of the daye, the kinge arose, & wente in al haste vnto the denne of the Lyons. Nowe as he came nye vnto the denne, he cried with a piteous voyce vnto Daniel: yea, the kynge spake, & said vnto Daniel: O Daniel, thou seruaunt of the liuynge God, is not thy God (whome thou alwaye seruest) able to, deliuer the from the lions? Daniel sayde vnto the kynge: O kynge, God saue thy lyfe for euer. * My GOD hathe sente his aungel * which hathe shut the Lyons mouthes, so that they myghte not hurt me. For why? myne vngiltines is fownde out before him. And as for the, O kyng, I neuer offended the. Then was the kynge exceadinge glade, & commaunded to take Daniel oute of the denne. So Daniel was brought oute of the denne, and no maner of hurte was founde vpon hym.

F Dan.3.e Act.12.c *Ju.14.e i.re.17.a Heb.xi.f.

For he put his truste in hys God. And as for those men whyche had accused Daniel, the kyng cõmaunded to bringe them, and to cast them in the Lions denne: them, their children, and their wiues. * So the Lions had the maistrie of them, & brake all their bones a sonder, or euer they came at the grounde. * After this, wrote kynge Darius vnto al people, kinreddes, and tũges, that dwelt in al lãdes: peace be multiplied with you. My commaundement is in al my dominion and kyngdome, that men feare and stande in awe of Daniels GOD. * For he is the liuynge God, whyche abydeth euer, hys kyngdome shall not fayle, and hys power is euerlastynge. * It is he that deliuereth, and saueth: he doth wonders and maruelous workes, in heauen and in earthe: he hathe preserued Daniel, from the power of the Lyons. This Daniel prospered in the raygne of Darius and Cyrus of Persia.

¶ The.vii. Chapter.

A IN the first yeare of Balthazar kynge of Babilon, saw Daniel a dreame, & a vysion was in his heade vpon his bedde. Whiche dreame he wrote, & the summe of the matter is this: Daniel spake & sayde: I sawe in my vision by nyghte, and beholde: the foure wyndes of the heauen stroue vpon the sea, and foure great beastes came vp frõ the sea, one vnlike another. The first was as * a Lion, and yet had he * Aegels wynges. This geate had a maruelous wzethen hozne betwyxte his eyes, and came vnto the ramme, that had the two hoznes (whome I had ſene afoze by the ryuer ſyde) and ranne fearcely vpon hym wyth hys mygyte. I ſawe him dzawe nye vnto the ramme, beynge berye fearce vpon him: yea, he gaue hym ſuche a ſtroke, that he dzake hys two hoznes. Neither had the ramme ſo muche ſtrengthe as to ſtande before hym: but he caſte hym downe, troade hym vnder hys fete: and no man was able to delyuer the ramme oute of hys power. The goate waxed excedynge greate, and when he was at the ſtrongeſt, his great hozne was broken alſo. * Then grewe there other foure ſuche lyke in the ſteade, towarde the foure wyndes of the heauen. yea, oute of one of the leeſe of theſe hoznes, there came vp yet another hozne, whiche waxed maruelous greate: towarde the ſouth, towarde the eaſt, and towarde the fayze pleaſaunte lande. It grewe vp to the hoſt of heauē, wherof it did caſt ſome downe to the groūde, & of the ſtarres alſo, and trow them vnder fete. Yea, it grewe vp vnto the prince of the hooſt, from whom the daily of feringe was taken, and the place of his ſanctuary caſten downe. And a certaine ſeaſon was geuen vnto it, agaynſte the daily offering (becauſe of wickednelle) that it myghe caſte downe the berzte to the grounde, and ſo to pzoſpere in all thynges, that it wente about. Vpon this I heazde one of the ſainctes ſpeakynge, which ſaincte ſaid vnto one that aſked this queſtion. Howe longe ſhall this viſion of the daily ſacrifyce, and of the waſtynge abhomination endure: that the Sanctuary, & the power ſhal ſo be trodē vnder fote? And he anſwered hym: Vnto the euenynge & the mozynynge, euē two thouſande, and thze hundzeth daies: thē ſhal the Sanctuarie be clenſed againe. Now when I Daniel had ſene this viſion, & ſoughte for the vnderſtandinge of it: beholde, ther ſtode before me a thyng like vnto a man. And I heazde a mans voyce in the ryuer of Vlay, which cried, and ſayde: O Gabziel, make this man vnderſtande the vyſyon. So he came, and ſtode by me. But I was afrayed at his commynge, and fell downe vpon my face. Then ſaid he vnto me: O thou ſonne of man, marcke well, for in the laſt tyme ſhal this viſion be fulfylled. Nowe as he was ſpeakynge vnto me, I waxed fayntе, ſo that I ſanke downe to the grounde. But he toke holde vpon me, & ſet me vp agayne, ſayinge: Beholde, I wyll ſhewe the, what ſhall happen in the laſte wzathe: for in the tyme appoynted it ſhall be fulfylled. The ramme whyche thou ſaweſt with the two hoznes, is the kynge of the Medes, & Perſes: but the goate is the kige of Greke lād: the greate hozne that ſtode betwyxte hys eyes, that is the principall kynge. But where as it dzake, and foure other roſe vp in the ſteade: it ſignifieth, that oute of thys people ſhal ſtande vp * foure kyngdomes, but not ſo mighty as it. After theſe kynge-domes (whyle vngodlyneſſe is a growing) there ſhal a ryſe a kynge of an vnſhamefaſt face, whiche ſhalbe wyſe in darke ſpeakinges. He ſhalbe mighcie and ſtōge, but not in his owne ſtēgth. He ſhal deſtroy aboue meaſure, and all that he goeth aboure ſhal proſpere: he ſhall ſlaye the ſtronge & holye people. And thozowe hys craftynes, falſhed ſhall proſpere in hys hande, his heart ſhall be proude, and many one ſhal he put to deathe in hys welthineſſe. He ſhal ſtāde vp againſt the Prince of Princes, * but he ſhall be deſtroyed wythoute hande. And this vyſyon that is ſhewed vnto the, is as ſure as the euenynge, and the mozynynge. * Therfoze wzyte thou vp this ſyghte, for it wyll be longe oz it come to paſſe. Vpon this was I Daniel berye faynte, ſo that I laye ſycke certayne dayes: but when I roſe vp, I wente aboute the kynges buſineſſe, & marueled at the viſion, neuertheleſſe no mā knewe of it.

After these. lxii. wekes, shall Christe be slayne, and they shall haue no pleasure in hym. ¶ The. x. Chapter.

IN the thirde yere of king Cyrus of Persia, there was shewed vnto Daniell (otherwise called Balthazar) a matter: yea, a true matter, but it is yet a longe time vnto it. He vnderstode the matter well, & perceued what the vīō was. At the same time, I Daniel mourned for the space of. iii. wekes, so that I had no lust to eate breade: as for flesh & wine ther came none within my mouth: no, I did not once anoint my selfe, tyl the whole. iii. wekes were out. Vpon the xxiiii. daye of the. i. moneth, I was by the Dan. 7. b. great floud, called Tigris * I lift vp myne Apoc. 1. c.

his wordes was lyke the voyce of a multytude. * I Daniel alone sawe this vision, + the men that were with me, sawe it not: but a greate fearfulnesse fell vpon them, so that they fled awaye and hyd them selues. I was lefte there my selfe alone, and sawe this great vision, so longe tyl there remained nomore strength within me: yea, I loste my colouure clene, I wasted awaye, and my strength was gone. Yet hearde I the voyce of hys wordes: and as soone as I hearde it, sayntenesse came vpon me, and I fell downe flat to the grounde vpon my face.

Thē sayd he vnto me: feare not Daniel: For why? sence the fyrst day that thou dyddest set thine hert to vnderstande, and dyddest chastē thy selfe before thy GOD: thy wordes haue bene herde. For it wylbe longe yet or the vision be fulfylled. Nowe when he had spoken these wordes vnto me, I caste downe my heade to the grounde and helde my tunge.

So whē he had spoken vnto me, I recouered, & sayd: Speake on my Lorde, for thou hast refreshed me. Thē said he: knowest thou wherfore I am come vnto the? now wyl I go agayne to fyght with the kynge of the prynce of the Perses. As soone as I goe forth, lo, the prynce of Greke lande shall come. Neuertheles, I wyl shewe the that thyng, that is fast noted in the scripture of trueth. And as for all yonder matters, there is none that helpeth me in them, but Michael your prynce.

¶ The. xi. Chapter.

AND in the fyrste yeare of Darius of Media, I stode by hym to comforte him, & to strengthē him, & now wyl I shewe the the trueth. Beholde, there shall stāde vp yet thre kinges in Persia, but the fourth shalbe far richer then they al. * And as soone as hys kyngdome cometh vp, it shall be destroyed, and deuyded towarde the foure wyndes of the heauen. They that come after hym shall not haue suche power and dominion as he, but hys kyngdome shalbe scatred: yea, euen amōge other then those. And the kynge of the south shalbe mightier, then hys other princes. And one shall be stronger then he, and shal rule his dominion with great power. And in the ende of yeares, they shalbe loyned together, and the kynges doughter of the south shall come to the kynge of the north, for to make frendshyp, but she shal not optaine the power of that arme, neither shal she be able to endure thozow his might but she, & such as brought her (yea, and he that begat her, and comforted her for hys time) shalbe delyuered vp. Out of the braunches of her roote, there shall one stande vp in hys steade, which with power of armes shall goe thorowe the kynges lande of the north, and handle hym accordynge to hys strength. As for theyr Idoles and princes, with theyr costly Jewels of golde and syluer, he shal cary them away captiues into Egypte, and he shal raygne moore yeares then the kyng of the north. And whē he is come into the kynges realme of the south, he shall be fayne to turne agayne into hys owne lande. Wherfore hys sonnes shall be displeased, & shal gather together a myghtye greate hoofte of people: And one of them shal come, and go thorow lyke a water floude: then shal he turne, and go forth with wrlyng and boastyng vnto his owne lande. Then the kynge of the south shall be angrye, and shal come forth to fyght agaynst the kynge of the north: yea, he shal bryngе a greate multytude of people together, and a great heape shall be geuen into hys hand: these shal he carye awaye with great pryce, for so muche as he hathe caste downe so many thousandes, nenertheleſſe, he ſhall not preuayle. For the kyng of the northe ſhall gather (of the newe) a greater heape of people then afore, and come forthe (after a certayne tyme and yeares) wyth a myghtye hooſte, and exceadynge greate good. At the ſame tyme there ſhall manye ſtande vp agaynſt the kynge of the ſouthe, ſo that the wycked chyldren of thy people alſo ſhall exalte them ſelues (to fulfyll the viſion) and then fall. So the kynge of the north ſhall come to laye ſege, and to take the ſtronge fenced cytyes: And the power of the of the ſouth ſhall not be able to abide him, and the beſt men of the people ſhall not be ſo ſtrong, as to reſiſt him. Shortely, when he commeth, he ſhall handle hym as he lyſte, and no mā ſhall be ſo hardye as to ſtande agaynſte hym. He ſhall ſtande in the pleaſaunte countreye, whyche thorowe hym ſhall be deſtroyed: He ſhall ſette his face wyth al hys power to optayne his kyngdome, and to be lyke vnto him. Yea, that ſhal he doe, and geue hym vnto the doughters among womē, to deſtroy him. But he ſhal fayle, neither ſhall he optayne hys purpoſe After this ſhal he ſet his face vnto the iles and take manye of them. A Prynce ſhall ſtoppe hym, to do hym a ſhame: beſide the confuſion, that cls ſhall come vnto hym. Thus ſhall he turne agayne to hys owne lande, ſtomble & fall, and be nowore founde ſo he that came vpon him, and byd hym bꝛoſce, ſhal ſtād in his place, & haue a pleaſaunt kingdome: and after a fewe dayes he ſhalbe deſtroyed, & that neither in wrathe, nor in battel. In hys ſteade ther ſhal aryſe a vyle perſon, not holden worthy of a kynges dignyte: thys ſhal come in peaceably, and optayne the kingdom with fayre wordes: he ſhal fight agaynſt the armes of the mighty (and deſtroy them) yea, & agaynſte the prynce of the couenaunt. So after that he hathe taken truce wyth hym, he ſhall handle diſceatfully: that he maye get vp, and ouercome hym wyth a ſmal flocke: and ſo with craftyneſſe to get hym to the fatteſt place of the lande, and to deale otherwyſe, then ether hys fathers, or graundfathers dyd. For he ſhall deſtroye the ſtynge, that they had robbed and ſpoyled: yea and all theyr ſubſtaunce, ymagenynge thoughtes agaynſt the ſtronge holdes, and that for a tyme. This power and heart ſhalbe ſtirred vp, with a great army agaynſt the king of the ſouth, where thorowe the kynge of the ſouth ſhall be moued them to battel, wyth a greate and myghtye hooſte alſo. Neuertheleſſe, he ſhall not be able to ſtande, for they ſhall conſpyre agaynſt hym, yea, they that eate hys meate ſhall hurte hym: So that his hooſte ſhal fall, & many be ſlayne downe. Theſe two kynges ſhalbe mynded to do miſchiefe, and tal he of diſceyte at one table: but they ſhal not proſpere, for why? the ende ſhal not come yet, vnto the tyme appoynted. + Thꝰ ſhal he go home againe into hys owne land, with great good, and ſet his heart agaynſt the holy couenaunte, he ſhal be buſye agaynſt it, & then returne home. At the time appoynted, he ſhal come agayne, and go toward the ſouth. So ſhal it happen otherwyſe then at the fyrſte, yet ons agayne. And why? + the chippes with Italyans ſhall come vpon hym, that he maye be ſmitten and turne agayne: That he maye take indignacyon agaynſte the couenaunte of holynes, to medle agaynſte it, yea, he ſhal courne hym, and drawe ſuche vnto him, as leaue the holy couenaunt. He ſhall ſette myghtye men to bnhalowe the Sanctuary of ſtrengthe, to put downe the dayly offrynge, & to ſet vp the abhominable deſolacīō. And ſuch as breake the couenaunte ſhal he flatter wyth fayre wordes. But the people that wyl know their god, ſhall haue the ouerhāde & proſpere. Thoſe alſo that haue vnderſtandyng among the people ſhall enfourme the multitude: And for a longe ſeaſon, they ſhalbe perſecuted with ſwearde, with fyre, with captiuite, & with the takynge awaye of theyr goodes. Nowe when they fall, they ſhall be ſet vp with a lytle helpe: But manye ſhall cleue vnto them faynedlye. yea, ſome of thoſe whiche haue vnderſtandynge ſhall be perſecuted alſo, that they may be tryed, purified and cleanſed, tyll the tyme be oute: for ther is yet another tyme appoynted. The hynge ſhall doe what hym lyſte, + he ſhall exalte and magnifie hym ſelfe agaynſte all that is God. yea, he ſhall ſpeake maruelous thinges agaynſt the god of al goddes, wherin he ſhal proſpere, ſo longe tyll the + wrath be fulfilled, for the concluſyon is deuiſed alredy. He ſhal not regarde the god of hys fathers, but hys luſte ſhall be vpon women. yea, he ſhal not care for any God, for he ſhall magnifie hym ſelfe aboue all. In his place ſhal he wor ſhyp the myghty ſtoute God: & the God whome hys fathers knewe not, ſhal he honour with golde and ſyluer, with precious ſtones and pleaſaūt Jewels. Thus ſhall he doe, thorowe hys ſtrōg fenced places, ſetting vp his ſtraūge god, whome he confeſſeth, and encreaſinge his glorye. Such as wyl receyue him, and take hym for God, he ſhal geue them great worſhyp and power: yea, and make them Lordes of the multytude, & geue them the lande wyth rewardes. In the latter tyme

God commandeth Oseas to take an harlot to wife

THis is the word of the Lord, that came vnto Oseas, the sonne of Be-eri, * in the daies of Oseas, Joa-thā, Ahas and Jezekias, kynges of Juda: & in the time of Jeroboā, the sonne of Joas kynge of Israell. A 4. re. 15. 16. & 17. c

Firste, when the Lorde spake vnto Oseas, he sayde vnto him: * Go thy waye, take an harlott & thy wife, and gette childien by her: for the lande hathe committed greate whordome agaynst the Lorde. So he went, and toke Gomer the doughter of Deblaim: whiche conceaued, and broughte forthe a sonne. And the Lorde sayde vnto hym: call hys name Jesraell, for * I wyll shortelye auenge the bloode of * Jesraell vpon the house of Jehu, and wyll bringe the kyng-dome of the house of Israell to an ende. Leu. 21. b Eze. 44. b 4. re. 15. c 17. 8. 18. b & 23. re. 21. b

Then wyll I breake the bowe of Israell, in the valley of Jesraell. She conceaued yet agayne, and bare a doughter. And he sayde vnto him: Call her name: Lorughamah (that is, not oprayenyng mercy:) * for I will haue no pytie vpon the house of Israell, but forget them, and put them cleane oute of remembraunce. * Neuertheleste, I will haue mercy vpon the house of Juda, and wil saue them, euen thorowe the Lorde their God. But I wyll not delyuer them thorowe any bowe, swearde, battell, horses or horsemen. Nowe when she had weined Lorughamah: she conceaued againe & bare a son. The said he: cal his name Loami. For why? ye are not my people, therfore will not I be your God. And though the number of the childre of Israel be as the sande of the sea, which can neither be measured nor tolde, yet in the place where it is said vnto them, * ye be not my people: euen there shal it be Israell. 4. re. 17. c Gen. 49. b 4. re. 19. c Rom. 9. c thus reported of them, * they be the chyldren of the liuynge God. ¶ Then shall the chyldrē of Juda, & the children of Israel be gathered together agayne, & chose thē selues one heade, and then departe oute of the lande: for greate shalbe the daye of Israel.

¶ The.ii. Chapter.

TEll your brethren, that they are my people: & your sisters, that they haue obteyned mercy. As for your mother, ye shal chide with her, & reproue her * for she is not my wyfe, neither am I her husbāde, onelesse she put away her whordōs out of my sight, & her aduoutry frō her brestes. If no, I shal strippe her naked, and set her * euen as she came into the worlde: yea, I shal laye her waste, & make her like a wyldernes, & slaye her for thirste. I shal haue no pitie also vpon her children, * for they be the children of fornicatiō. Their mother hath broken her wedlocke, & she that bare them * is come to confusion. For she said: I wyll go after my louers that geue me my water and my breade, my wol & flaxe, my oyle, and my drynke. But I wyl hedge her way with thornes, & stoop it, that she shall not find her foresteppes: & though she rūne after her louers, yet shal she not get them: she shal seke them, but not finde thē. * Thō shalte saye: wel, I wil go turne againe to my first husbande, for at that tyme was I better at ease then nowe. But this would she not knowe, where as I yet gaue her corne, wine, oyle, siluer, and golde, * which she hathe hanged vpon Baal. Wherefore, now wyll I go take my corne and wyne agayne in their season, and fet agayne my woll, and my flaxe, whiche I gaue her to couer her shame. * And now wyll I discouer her folyshnes, euen in the sighte of her louers, and no man shal delyuer her oute of my handes. Moreouer, I wyll take awaye all her mirthe * her holye dayes, her newe moones, her Sabbothes, & al her solempne feastes: I wyl destroy her vineyardes, and figtrees, thoughe she saieth: lo, here are my rewardes, that my louers haue geuē me. I wil make it a wodde, and wilde beestes shal eate it vp: I wyll punyshe her also for the dayes of Baal, * wherin she censed hym, deckinge him with her earinges & cheines, when she folowed her louers, & forgat me, saieth the Lorde. Wherfore beholde, I wyl cal her againe bring her into a wildernes, and speake frendly vnto her: there wyll I geue her, her vineyardes agayne: yea, and the * valleye of Achor also to shewe her hope and cōforte. Then shal she singe there * as in the time of her youthe, and lyke as the daye when she came oute of the lande of Egipte. Then (saieth the Lorde) the shalt saye vnto me: O my husbande, and shal cal me nomore Baal: for I wyll take awaye those names of Baal from her mouthe: yea, she shall neuer remembre their names any more. * The wyl I make a couenaunt with thē, with the wilde beastes, with the foules of the ayre, and wyth euery thynge that creepeth vpō the earthe. * As for bowe, swearde, and battel, I wyll destroye suche oute of the lande, and wyll make them to slepe safely. * Thus wyll I marye the vnto myne owne selfe for euermore: yea, euen to my selfe wyll I marie the in righteousnesse, in equitie, in louing kyndnesse, and mercy. In faith also wil I marye the vnto my selfe, & thou shalt knowe the Lord. At the same tyme wyl I shewe my selfe frendly & gracious vnto the heauens, saith the Lord: and the heuens shal helpe the earth, & the earth shall helpe the corne, wyne & oyle, & they shal helpe Israell. * I wil sowe them vpon earthe. for a sede to myne owne selfe, * & wil haue mercy vpon her, that was wythoute mercy. And to thē which were not my people, I wil saye: thou art my people, and he shal saye: thou art my God.

¶ The iii. Chapter.

THen sayde the Lorde to me: * Go yet thy waye, and wowe an aduouterous woman, whō thy neighboure louerth, as the Lorde dothe the children of Israell: howe be it, they haue respecte to straunge goddes, * & loue the wyne cannes. So I gat her for.xb. siluerlinges, & for an homer & an halfe of barly, & saide vnto her: Thou shalt abyde with me a lōg seasō, but se that thou playest not the harlot, and loke thou medle with none other mā, & the wil I kepe my selfe for the. * Thus the children of Israel shal sit a great while without kyng, & prynce, with out offring & aulter, without priest & reuelatiō. But afterwarde shal the children of Israel cōuerte, & seke the lord their God, & * Dauid their kynge: & in the latter dayes they shall worshippe the Lorde, and his louynge kyndnesse.

¶ The.iiii. Chapter.

HEare the worde of the Lorde, O ye children of Israel. For the Lord must punyshe them, that dwel in the lāde. And why? there is no truthe, there is no mercy, there is no knowledge of god in the lande: but swearinge, lyinge, mānaughter: theft & aduoutry haue gotten the ouerhande, and one bloude gilteth the other. Therfore shall the lande be in a miserable case, & al they that dwel therin, shal be rooted out. The beastes in the felde, the foules in the ayre, and the fyshes in the sea, shal die. Yet is there none, that wil chasten nor reproue another. * For thy people re-

ISrael was a goodly * vyne, but he hathe bzought forth vnpzofytable frute: yea, the moze frute he had, the mo aulters he made: the moze good I dyd to their lande, the moze frendſhip ſhewed they to their ymages. Their heart is deuyded, therefoze wil they be deſtroyed. The lozd ſhal breake downe their images, he ſhal deſtroye their aulters. Thē ſhal they ſay: we haue no kīg, for why? we haue not feared the Lozde. And what ſhall then the kynge do to vs? They commen together, and ſweare bayne othes: they be cōfederat together, therfoze groweth their puniſhment, as the weedes in the forowes of the lande. They that dwel in Samaria haue woꝛſhipped the calfe of Bethauē: therfoze ſhall the people mourne ouer them. Yea, & the prieſtes alſo, that in their welthynelle reioyſed with them: and why? it ſhal paſſe away from thē. I ſhalbe bzought to the Aſſirian, for a preſente vnto kynge Jareb. The hye places of Auen, where Iſrael do ſynne, ſhall be caſt downe: thiſtles, and thoznes ſhal growe vpō their aulters. * Then ſhal they ſay to the mountaines: couer vs, and to the hylles: fal vpon vs. O Iſrael, thou haſt ſynned as * Gabaa dyd afoze tyme, where they remayned: ſhould not the battayle thē come vpon the wicked childzen, as well as vpon the Gaboanites? I wyll chaſten them, euen after mine owne deſyre, the people ſhalbe gathered together ouer thē, when I puniſhe thē for their great wickednelle. Ephzaim was vnto me, as a kowe that is vſed to go to plowe, therfoze I loued him, and fell vpon his fayre necke. THys is the woorde of the lorde, that came vnto Joel the son of Phatuell. Heare O ye elders, ponder thys wel, al ye that dwel in the lād: if euer ther happened such a thig in your dayes, or in the dayes of your fathers. Tell your childzen of it, & let them shewit vnto their childzen, & so they to certifie their posteritie therof. Loke what the caterpyller hathe lefte, that hathe the grechopper eaten vp: what the grechopper left, that hath the locust eaten vp: & what the locuste hath left, that hath the blastig wide cōsumed. Wake vp, ye dronckerdes, & wepe: mourne all ye wine suppers, because of your swete wine, for it shalbe takē awaye frō youre mouthe. Yea, a mighty and an innumerable people shal come vp into my lāde: these haue teeth like the teeth of lyōs, & chafbones lyke the lionelles. * They shal make my vyneyard waste, they shall pyll of the barckes of my figgetrees, strip them bare, cast thē away, and make the braunches whyte. Make thy mone as a virgin doth that girdeth her self with sacke, because of her bridgrome. For the meate and drynkoffryng shalbe taken awaye frome the house of the Lorde, & the priestes the lordes ministers shal mourne. The felde shalbe wasted, the lande shalbe in a miserable case: for the corne shalbe destroyed, the swete wine shall come to cōfusion, & the oyle vtterlye desolate. The husbandmen, & the wine gardeners shall loke piteously, & make lamentacōs, for the wheat haruest, & barly, & because the haruest vpō the felde, is so cleane destroyed. The grape gatherers shal make great mone, whē the vineyarde & figgetrees be so vtterlye wasted. Yea, al the pomegranates, palmtrees, apletrees, and the other trees of the felde, shal wyther awaye. Thus the mery cheare of the childzen of men, shal come to confusion. Gyrde you, and make youre mone, O ye Priestes, mourne ye ministers of the auter: go your waye in, and slepe in sacke clothe. Joel.3.c Mat.24.c * The sun & the moone shalbe darkened, & the starres shal withdraw their shyne: the lord shal shewe his voice before his host, for his host is great, strōge, & mighty to fulfyll his cōmaundemēt. This is that great and Apoc.6.c ¶ marueulous fearful day of the Lord. * And who is able to abyde it, Nowe therefore, sayeth the Lorde. * Tourne you vnto me with al youre hartes, with fastynge, wepynge and mournynge, rent your hartes, and not youre clothes. Tourne you vnto the Lorde your God, * for he is gracious and mercyfull, longe sufferyng, & of great compassyon: and ready to pardone wickednes. Then (no dout) he also shal turne, and forgeue, and after hys chastening, he shal let your increase remayne, for meate & drynke offerynges vnto the LORDE your God? * Blowe oute with the tromper in Syon, proclayme fastynge, cal the congregacion, and gather the people together: warne the congregacion, gather the elders, bring the children and sucklinges together. Let the priestes serue the Lord betwyxt the porch and the aulter, wepynge & sayinge: be fauourable, O Lord, be fauourable vnto thy people, let not thyne heritage be brought to such cōfusion, lest the heathen be lordes thereof, * Where is shoulde they saye amonge the heathen: Where is nowe theyr God? then shal the Lorde be gelous ouer hys lande, & spare hys people: yea, the Lorde shal answere, and say vnto his people: Beholde, I wyl send you corne, wyne & oyle, so that ye shall haue plentye of them: and I wyl no more geue you ouer to be a reproſe amonge the heathen. Agayne, as for hym of the north, I shal dryue him far from you: And thrust him out into a drye and waste lād, his face towarde the east sea, & his hynder partes towarde the vtmost sea. The stincke of him shal go vp, & his filthy corruptiō shal fal vpon hym selfe, because he hath dealt so proudely. Feare not (O land) but be glad & reioyce, for the lorde wyl do great thinges. Be not ye afrayed neyther (O ye beastes of the feld) for the pastures shalbe grene, and the trees shal beare theyr fruit: the fygge trees and vineyardes shal gene theyr encrease. Howe as I was breakyng doune mulberies, and goynge after the catell, the Lorde toke me, and sayde vnto me: Go thy waye, and prophecy vnto my people of Israel. And therfore, heare thou now the worde of the lorde: Thou sayest: prophecie not against Israel, and speake nothynge agaynst the house of Isaac: Wherefore, thus sayeth the Lorde. Thy wife shalbe defiled in the cytye, thy sonnes and doughters shalbe slayne wyth the sweorde, and thy lande shalbe measured out with the lyne. Thou thy selfe shalte

THe wozde of the Lozde came vnto * Jonas, the sonne of Amithai, sayinge: * Aryse: and get the to Ninive that * greate cytie: and preach vnto the, how that * their wickednesse is come before me.

And Jonas made him readye to flee vnto Tharsis, frō the presēce of the Lozd, & gat him downe to Joppa: where he foūd a ship ready for to go vnto Tharsis. So he payed his fare, & went abozde, that he might goe wyth them vnto Tharsis, frō the presence of the Lozd. But the Lozd hurled a greate winde into the sea: & there was a mighty tempest in the sea: so that the ship was in leoperdye of goynge in peces. Then the mariners were afrayde, and cryed euery man vnto hys God: and the goodes that were in the shyp, they caste into the sea, to lyghten it of theym. But Jonas gat hym vnder the hatches, where he layed hym downe and slombzed. So the master of the shyp came to him, and said vnto him: why slombzest thou? Vp, call vpon thy God: If God (happelye) will thyncke vpon vs that we perishe not. And they sayde one to another: come let vs caste lottes, that we maye knowe for whose cause we are thus troubled. * And so they cast lottes, and the lot fell vpon Jonas. Thē saide they vnto him: tell vs for whose cause are we thus troubled? what is thyne occupasyon? whence commest thou? (and whither goest thou?) what countre man arte thou, and of what nacion? He answered thē: I am an Ebzue, and I feare the Lozd God of heauē, whiche made bothe the sea, and dzye lande. Then were the men exceadingly afrayde, & saide vnto hym: why dyddest thou so? (for they knewe, that he was fled from the presence of the Lozde, because he had tolde thē) and sayde mozeouer vnto him: what shall we do vnto thee, that the sea maye ceasse frome troublynge vs? (for the sea wzought, and was troublous) he answered thē: take me, and caste me into the sea, so shall it let you be in rest: for I wote, it is for my sake, that this great tempest is come vpon you. Nertheles, the men assayed with rowyng to bryng the shippe to lande: but it would not be, because the sea wzoughte so: and was so troublous against them. Wherfore they cryed vnto the Lozde, and sayde: * O Lozd let vs not perishe for this mans death, neither laye thou innocente blonde vnto oure charge: for thou, O Lozd hast done, euen as thy pleasure was. So they toke Jonas, & cast him into the sea, & the sea left ragyng. And the men feared the Lord exceadyngly, doyng sacrifices, and makynge bowes vnto the Lozde.

¶ The firste Chapter.

A This is the word of the lord, that came vnto Micheas the Morasite, in the dayes of * Jothā, * Achas & * Jehezekiah, kinges of Juda: which was shewed him vpō Samaria & Jerusalē. * Heare al ye people, marke this wel, O earth, and all that therin is. Yea, the Lorde God him selfe be witnesse amonge you euen the Lord frō his holye temple. For why? * beholde, the Lorde shall go oute of his place, and come downe, and treade vpon the hie thinges of the earth. The mountaines shall consume vnder him, & the valleyes shall cleue asunder: like as wax consumeth at the fire, and as the waters runne downwarde. And all this shalbe for the wickednes of Jacob, & the synnes of the house of Israell. But what is the wyckednesse of Jacob? Is not * Samaria? Whiche are the hie places of Juda? Is not * Jerusalem? Therefore I shal make Samaria an heape of stones in the felde, to laye aboute the vineyarde: her stones shall I caste into the valley, and discouer her foundacions. All her Images shal be broken downe, & all her garmentes shal be brent in the fire: yea, al her Idols wyl I destrope: for why? * they are gathered oute of the hyre of an whore, and into an whores hyre shal they be turned agayne. Wher fore I wil mourne and make lamentacion, bare and naked wyll I go: I must mourne lyke the dragons, and take sorowe as the Estriches: for their wound is past remedie: And why? it is come into Juda, and hath touched the porte of my people at Jerusalem alredye. * Wepe not, lest they at Geth perceaue it. Thou at Bataphra, welter thy selfe in the dust and asshes. Thou that dwellest at Sephir, get the hēce with shame. The proude shall boaste no more for berye sorowe: & why? her neyghboure shall take from her what she hathe. The rebellyous cytie hopeth, that it shal not be so euel: but for all that, the plage shall come frome the Lorde, euen into the porte of Jerusalem. The greate noyse of the charettes shall feare them, that dwell at * Lachis, whiche is an occasion of the synne of the doughter of Sion, for in the came vp the wyckednes Tusche, holde your tunge (saye they): Je shal not fall vpõ this people, we shall not come so to confusyon, sayeth the house of Jacob. Is the spyrite of the Lorde so cleane awaye? or is he so minded? Truthe it is, my wordes are frendlye vnto them that lyue eyghte: but my people dothe the contrarie, therfore muste I take

Ye haue turned your selues to eyghte, the wemẽ of my people haue ye shut oute from theyr good houses, and taken awaye my excellẽt giftes from their childrẽ. Wp, get you hẽce, for here shall ye haue no reste. Because of their Idolatry they are corrupte, and shall miserably perysshe. Yf I were a fleshlye fe-lowe, and a preacher of lies, and tolde them that they might sit bibbing & bolling, and be drancken. O that were a Prophete for this people. But I wyl gather the in vde, O Jacob, and dryue the remnaunte of Israel al together. I shal cary them one with another, as a flocke in the folde, & as the cattel in their stalles, that they may be disquieted of other mẽ. Who so breaketh the gap, he shall go before. They shall breake vp the porte, and go in and out at it. The king shal go before them, and the Lorde shalbe vpon the heade of them.

¶ The.iii. Chapter.

AND I said: heare, O ye heades of the house of Jacob, and ye leaders of the house of Israel: * Shoulde not ye know, what were lawful and eyghte? * But ye hate the good, & loue the euel: ye plucke of mennes shynnes, and the flesshe from their bones: ye eate the flesshe of my people, & skyn of their shynne: ye breake their bones, ye chopne them in peces as it were into a cauldron, and as flesshe into a pot. Nowe the tyme shall come, * that when they call vnto the Lorde, he shall not heare the, but hyde his face from them, because that thorowe their owne ymaginacions they haue dealte so wyckedlye. And as concernynge the prophetes that dyscreaue my people, th the Lorde sayeth against them. * When they haue any thinge to byte vpõ, thẽ they preach that al shalbe wel: but yf a mã put not some thynge in theyr mouthes, they preache of warre agaynst hym. * Therfore C youre vision shalbe turned to nyghte, and your prophecïge to darcknesse. The Sũne shal go downe ouer those prophetes, and the daye shall be darcke vnto them. Then shall the bisson seers be ashamed, and the sothsayers confounded: yea, they shalbe sayne, all the packe of them, to stoppe theyr mouthes, for they haue not Gods worde. * As for me, I am full of strengthe, and of the spyrite of the Lorde, ful of iudgemente and boldnesse: to shewe the house of Jacob their wickednesse, and the house of Israell their synne. O heare thys ye rulers of the house of Jacob, and ye iudges of the house of Israel, ye that abhorre the thynge that is lawful, and wrestе asyde the thynge that is strygth. * Ye that buylde vp Sion with bloude, & Jerusalem with doynge wronge. * Ye iudges, ye gyue sentence for gifteg: O ye prysstes, ye teache for lucre. * O ye prophetes, ye prophecye for mony. Yet wyl they be taken as those that hold vpõ God, and say: Is not the Lord amõg vs? Tush, ther can no misfortune happen vs. * Therfore shal Sion (for youre sakes) be plowed lyke a felde: * Jerusalem shall become an heape of stones, and the hyll of the temple shalbe turned to an hye wodde.

We shall bringe vp seuen shepherdes, and eyght princes vpon them: these shall subdue the lande of Assur with the swearde, & the lande of * Nimrod with their naked weapens. * Thus shall he deliuer vs from the Assirian, when he commeth within our land, and setteth hys fote wythin our borders. And the remnaūt of Jacob shal be amonge the multytude of people, as the dewe of the Lorde, and as the droppes vpon the grasse, that tarryeth for no man, and waiteth of no body. * Yea, the residue of Jacob shall be amonge the Gentiles, & the multitude of people, as the lyon among the beastes of the wodde, and as the Lyons whelpe amonge a flocke of shepe: Whyche (when he goeth thorowe) treadeth downe, teareth in peces, and there is no mā that cā helpe. Thyne hāde shalbe lyft vp vpon thyne enemyes, and all thyne aduersaries shall perysshe. The tyme shal come also, sayeth the Lord: that I wil take thy horses frome the, & destroye thy charettes. I will breake downe the cytyes of the lande, and ouerthowe all thy stronge holdes. * All wytchcrafres wyll I rote oute of thyne hande, there shall no moe southsayinges be within thee. * Thyne ydols & thyne ymages wyll I destroye out of the, so that thou shalt no more bowe thy selfe vnto the worckes of thyne owne handes. Straungers shal dwel at Asdod, and as for the pryde of the Philistines, I shal rote it out. * Thyrdly blouste will I take awaye from their mouth, and their abhominacions from amonge theyr teeth. Thus they shalbe lefte for our God, yea, they shalbe as a prince in Juda, & Accaron lyke as a Jebusite. And so wil I compase my house rounde about with my men of warre, goynge to and fro: that no oppressoure come vpon them any more. For that haue I sene nowe with myne eyes. * Reioyce thou greatlye. O doughter Sion, be glade, O doughter Jerusalem. For lo, thy kynge cometh vnto the, euen the righteous and Sauioure. Lowly and symple is he, he rideth vpon an asse, and vpon the foole of an asse, I wil rote oute the charrettes from Ephraim, and the horse from Jerusalē, the battel bowes shalbe destroyed. He shall geue the doctryne of peace vnto the Heathē, and his dominion shalbe from the one sea to the other, and from the floudes to the endes of the worlde. Thou also thorowe the bloude of thy couenaunte shalte let * thy prysoners oute of the * pytte wherin is no water. Turne you nowe to the stronge holde, ye that be in prison, and longe yet to be delyuered. And thys daye I bringe the word, that I wyl rewarde the double againe. For Juda haue I bente out as a bowe for me, and Ephraim haue I fylled. Thy sonnes: O Sion, wyll I rayse vp against the Grekes, and make the as a gyauntes swearde, the Lorde God shalbe sene aboue them, and hys dartes shall go forthe as the lyghtenynge. The Lord God shall blowe the tromper, and shall come forthe as a storme oute of the southe. The Lorde of hoostes shall defende them, they shal consume and deuoure, and subdue thē wyth * stynge stones. They shal drincke and rage, as it were thorowe wyne. They shalbe fylled like the basens, and as the hornes of the aulter. The Lorde their God shal delyuer them in the day, as the flocke of his people: For as precious stones of a diademe they shalbe set vp ouer his lande. O howe prosperous and goodlye a thing shall that be? The corne shall make the yonge men chearful, and the newe wine the maydens.

Praye the Lorde then byrymes to geue the latter rayne, * so shall the Lorde make bright cloudes, & geue you raine ynough for al the increase of the felde. For vaine is the answer of Idols. The sothsayers se lyes, and tel but vaine dreames, the comforte that they geue, is nothing worth. Therefore, go they astraye like a flocke of shepe, & are troubled, because they haue no * shepherde. My wrothful displeasure is moued at the shepherdes, & I wyl visit the goates. For the lord of hostes wil graciously visit his flocke, the house of Juda, and holde them as a goodly fayre horse in the battel. Out of * Juda shall come the helmet: the nayle, the batelbowe, and all the princes together. They shal be as the giātes, whiche in the battel treade downe the myre vpon the stretes. They shal fight, for the Lord shalbe with thē, so that the horsemen shalbe confounded. I will comforte the house of Juda, and preserue the house of Joseph. I wyl turne them also, for I pepe them: and they shalbe lyke as they were, when I had not caste them of. For I the Lorde am their God, and wyl heare them. Ephraim shalbe as a giaunt, & their hert shalbe chearful as thorow wyne: yea, their childrē shal se it, and be glad: & their heart shall reioyce in the Lorde. I wil blowe for them, and gather them together, for I wyl redeme them. They shall increase. as they increased afore. I wyll sowe them amonge the people, that they may thinke vpon me in farre cōtrees, they shal liue with their childrē, and turne agayne. I wyl bryng them againe also from the lande of Egypt, and gather them out of Assiria. I wyl cary them into the lande of Gilead, and to Libanus, and they shal wante nothynge. He shal go vpon the sea of trouble, and smyte the sea waues, so that all the depe floudes shalbe dryed vp. The proude boastynge of Assur shalbe caste downe, and the scepter of * Egypte shalbe taken awaye. I wyll comforte them in the Lorde, that they maye walke in his name, sayeth the Lorde.

¶ The. xi. Chapter.

Open thy dores, O Libanus, that the fyre may consume thy Cedre trees. Howle ye fire trees for the Cedre is fallen: yea, al the proude are wasted away. Howle (ye oke trees of Basan) for the mighty stronge wod is cut downe. Men maye heare the shepherdes mourne, for their glori is destroyed. Men maye heare the Lyons whelpes roare, for the pryde of Jordan is wasted away. Thus saith the lord my god: Fede the shepe of the slaughter, which shal be slayne of those that possesse thē: yet they take it for no synne, but they that sel them, saye: The Lord be thanked, I am riche: yea, their owne shepherdes spare thē not. Therfore wil I nomore spare those that dwell in the lande, (sayeth the Lord) but lo, I wyll delyuer the people, euerye man into hys neighbours hāde, & into the hād of his king: that they maye smyte the lande, and out of their handes I wyll not delyuer them. I haue loued you, sayeth the lord: and yet ye saye: wherin haste thou loued vs? * Was not Esau Jacobs brother, sayeth the Lord? * yet haue I loued Jacob, and hated Esau: * yea, I haue made hys hylles waste, and his heritage a wylderneile for dragōs. And thoughe Edom sayde: well, we are destroyed, we wyll goe buylde vp agayne the places that be wasted: yet (sayeth the Lorde of hoostes) * what they buylded, that brake I downe: So that it was called a cursed lande, and a people whome the Lorde hathe euer bene angrye withall. Behold, I shal corrupt your sede, & cast dounge in your faces, euē the dounge of your solēpne feastes, & it shal clene fast vpō you. And ye shal knowe, that I haue sente this cōmaūdemēte vnto you: that my * couenaūt, which I made with Leui, might stād sayeth the lorde of hoostes: I made a couenaūt of life & peace with him: thys I gaue hym, that he myghte stande in awe of me: and so he dyd feare me, and had my name in reuerēce. The law of truethe was in hys mouth, and there was wyckednelle founde in hys lippes. But as for you, ye are gone cleane out of the waye, and haue caused the multytude to be offended at the lawe: * ye haue broken the couenaunte of Leui, sayeth the Lord of Hoostes. Therfore wyll I also make you to be despysed, and to be of no reputation amonge all the people: Because ye haue not kepte my wayes, but haue bene partiall in the lawe. * Haue we not all one father? * hathe not one God made vs? * why doeth euery one of vs then dealy se his owne brother, and so breake the couenaunte of oure fathers? Nowe hathe Juda offended: yea, the abhominacyon is done in Israel and in Jerusalem, * for Juda hath defiled the Sanctuary of the Lorde, whiche he loued, and hath kept the doughter of a straunge God. But the Lorde shall destroye the man that doth thys: yea, (both the master and the scoler) oute of the tabernacle of Jacob, wyth hym that offereth vp meatofferynge vnto the Lorde of hoostes. Nowe haue ye brought it to thys poynte agayne, that the aulter of the Lorde is couered with teares, weppynge & mournynge: so that I wyll nomore regarde the meatofferynge, neyther wyll I receaue or accepte any thyng at your handes. IN conſyderacyon that the bokes before are founde in the Hebrue tonge, receaued of all men: and that the other folowyng, whiche are called Hagiographa, (becauſe they were wont to be redde, not openly and in cõmen, but as it were in ſecrete and aparte) are nether founde in the Hebrue, nor in the Calde: in whiche tonges they haue not of longe tyme bene wayted (in leſſe tho it were happly the boke of Sapience) wherupon it were nowe very harde to repaire & amende them: And that alſo they are not receaued nor taken as legitimate & leafull, as wel of the Hebrues of the whole Churche, as S. Hierome therewith: we haue ſeparate them, & ſet them aſyde, that they may the better be knowen: to thintent that men may know of which bokes, witnes ought to be receaued, and of whiche not. For the ſayde S. Hierome (readyng of the boke of Judith (whiche is Hagiographa) ſayeth, that the auctozitie therof is not eſteamed worthy and ſufficyent, to confirme and ſtablyſſh the rũynges that lyghten diſputacyon. And generally of all the bokes called Hagiographa, he ſayeth, that men maye reade them to the edifyyng of the people: but not to confirme and ſtrengthen the doctrine of the Churche. I leaue oute here the lawe (as they call it of Canon. c. Sancta Romana. xv. diſtinct. where he theweth hys Judgemente. Lykewiſe the gloſe of. c. Canones. xxi. diſtinct. whiche ſaieth, that men reade them, but not in generall: as thoughe he ſhoulde ſaye, that generally and thozowly they are not alowed. And not without a cauſe: For that they haue bene cozrupted and falſifyed in many places, it appeareth ſufficiently by Euſebius in hys boke called Hiſtoria Eccleſiaſtica: Whyche thynge is eaſye to be knowen, euen nowe a dayes in certayne poyntes, namely in the bokes of the Machabees: whoſe ſecond boke S. Hieromconfeſſeth that he founde not in the Hebrewe, by the meanes whereof it is become vnto vs the moze ſuſpect, and the leſſe receaued. In lyke maner is it of the third and fourth boke of Eldras, whiche S. Hierome proteſteth that he wouilde not haue tranſlated, eſteaming them for dreames: where as Joſephus yet in his booke of hyg Antiquities declareth the ſumme of the matter after the maner of a ſtozye, as well of the boke of Machabees, as of the thyrde of Eldras: all thoughe he eſteme the bookes compiled from the raygne of kynge Artaxerxes vnto hus tyme, to be Hagiographa. Wherfore then, when thou wilt mayntayne any thinge for certen, rendzing a reaſon of thy fayth, take hede to proceade therin, by the ſpyrytge and ptrthe Scriptures, for lowyng S. Peter, which ſayth: he that ſpeaketh, let him ſpeake as though he ſpake the wozde of God. He ſayth the wozd of God, as a thinge moſt true and certen, opened by the prophetes, and Apoſtles, inſpired with the holy gooſt: of whome we haue witneſſe moze cleare then the daye. Lawers haunge greate deſyre to confirme & ſtablyſhe their opinions by the lawe of man, ſaye, that they ſhame to ſpeake without lawe: How much moze feare and dzeade then ought to haue, that ſaieth he is a Chriſtian, the whiche holdeth not him ſelfe, or reaſteth not in the lawes of the ſpyrytge God: but in mennes inuencions, iudginge of all thinges accozdyng to them, and leanynge to an vncerten ymagination and phantaſye? Let vs therfore that are builded on the foundacion of the holy Prophetes and Apoſtles, and on the heade cozner ſtone (on whyche they them ſelues were founded, and whiche they preached, that is Jeſus Chriſt, the ſure ſtone) leaue the thinges that are vncerten, to folowe the certẽ: holding vs and reaſtyng vs in them, and faſtenynge our ancre there, as in a ſure place. For oure Chriſten fayth conſyſteth not in doutfull thynges, but in playne and moſte certen aſſurance, and in moſt trũe peerſwayſyon, taken and confyrmed by infallyble veritie. In whiche God graunt vs to walke perpetualyye, to the intent that accozdynge to it (fulfyllyng his holy wyll in vs, and ſetteyng aſyde all inuencyons cõtrarie vnto him) we may lyue to his honoure, and to the edyfyynge of hys Churche.

AND ✶ Josias helde the feast of Easter in Jerusalē vnto the lord, & slewe the passeouer the.xiiii. day of the first moneth. He set the priestes also in ordre (accordinge to their dayly courses) beyng arayed in lōge garmētes in the tēple of the lord. And he spake vnto the Leuites the holy ministers of Israel, that they should hallow thē selues vnto the lorde, to set the holy arcke of the lorde, in the house that kynge Salomon the son of Dauid had builded, & sayde: ye shal nomore beare the arcke vpon your shulders. Now serue your lord, & take the charge of hys people of Israell, after your byllages and youre trybes: accordīg as kyng Dauid the kynge of Israell hathe ordeined, and accordynge as Salomon hys sonne hath honorably prepared: yea, looke that ye all do seruice in the temple accordyng to the ordynge & distribution of the principal men, which are appointed out of the tribes, to doe seruice for the children of Israell. ✶ Kyll the Passeouer, and prepare Exo.12.d offerynges for your brethren, and do accordyng to the commaundement of the Lorde, whyche was geuen vnto Moses. And vnto B the people that was foūde, Josias gaue. xxx thousande of sheepe, lambes, kiddes, & goates. & thre thousande oxen. These the kīng (of hys kynglye liberalytie) gaue vnto the people, accordinge as he had promysed: and to the Priestes for the Passeouer, he gaue two. M. sheepe, and an hundreth oxen. Moyse ouer Jechonias and Semeias, and Nathanaell hys brethren, and Halabias, Jehiell, and Josabad gaue them to the Passeouer fiue thousande sheepe, and fiue hundred bullockes. And whē these thīges were brought to passe, the Priestes and the Leuites stode goodlye in their order, and had the vnleuened breade throwout the trybes. And after the ordryng of the principall men in the trybes, they offered vnto the Lorde in the Ex.12.d sight of the people accordīg ✶ as it is written in the booke of Moses, and so they rosted the Easter lambe as accordynge was. As for the thankoffrynges and the other, they dight them in kettels and pottes, and set them before the people with good will, and afterwarde before them selues, and the Priestes. For the Priestes offered the fat, vntil the time was expired, but the Leuites prepared for thē selues and for theyr brethren the chyldren of Aaron. The holy singers of the chyldren of Asaph stode in theyr order, accordynge as Dauid dyd ordeyne, So dyd Asaph, Zachary & Jeduthun, whiche were appoynted by the kynge. Moyse ouer the porters and doze keepers stode by the dozes and that diligentlye, so that none went out of hys standynge and seruyce: for their brethren, the Leuytes, prepared for them. Thus were al thynges perfourmed, that belonged to the offeryng of the Lorde. In that daye they helde the Passeouer and offered thankesoffrynge beside the sacrifice of the Lorde, accordynge to the commaundement of kynge Josias. So the children of Israell, whiche were then present, helde an honourable Passeouer, & the feaste of swete breade, vii. dayes longe. Yea, suche a Passeouer was not kept in Israell, from the time of the prophete Samuell. And all the kynges of Israell helde not suche an easter as thys whitly kyng Josias held, and the priestes, the Leuites, the Jewes, and al Israel, of all them that were at Jerusalem. And in the.xviii. yere of the raygne of Josias, was thys passeouer kepte. And wyth a perfyte hearte dyd kynge Josias ordre all his workes, before the Lorde, and the thynges that were written of hym in tymes paste, concernynge those that synned, and were vngodly agaynst the lord before al the people, & that soughte not the woorde of the Lorde vpon Israell. ✶ After all these actes of kynge Josias. Pharao the king of Egipt went vp, & came towarde Carmis by Euphrates, and Josias wente to mete hym. Then sente the kyng of Egypt vnto Josias, sayinge: What haue I to do with the. O kynge of Juda? I am not sent of the lord to fight against the, for my warre is vpon Euphrates, goe thou thy way home agayne in al the haste. And Josias wold not turne agayne but his charet, but bnderstode to fight agaynste hi, and herkened not vnto the word of the prophet, whyche he tolde hym oute of the mouthe of God, but pitched a batell agaynste hym in the feilde of Mageddo. And the Prynces preached to kyng Josias. The said the kyng D vnto hys seruauntes: Carye me awaye oute of the batel, for I am sooze wounded. And immediatlye hys seruauntes toke him awaye oute of the fronte of the batayle. Then sate he vp vpon the seconde charet, came to Jerusalem, dyed, and was buryed in hys fathers sepulchre. And in al Jewrye they mourned for Josias: yea, the rulers also with theyr wiues made lamentacion for him vnto thys daye: And thys was done euer kyll in Israel. These thynges are written in the boke of the storyes of the kynges of Juda: namelye, all the actes and worckes of kyng Josias, his kynglye power and mastely, hys bnderstandyng in the law of god, and what he dyd; yea, thynges whiche are

Wherfore nowe we certifie our Lorde the kynge, that yf this city be builded & occupied agayne, & the walles therof set vp a newe, thou canste haue no passage into Celosiria and Phenices. Then wrote the kyng to Rathimus the storye wryter to Balthemus, to Sabbellius the scribe, & to the other officers & dwellers in Siria & Phenices, after thys maner. Then the thre yonge 3 men, that kepte the kynges personne, and watched hys bodye, communed amonge them selues, and spake one to another: Let euery one of vs saye some thynge, and loke whose sentence is wiser and more excellent then the other, vnto hym shall kynge Darius gene greate gyftes, and clothe hym with purple. He shall gene hym vessels of golde to drynckein, clothes of golde & coueryngs: he shal make hym a costely charet and a bridle of golde, he shal gene him a bonet of white sike, and a cheyne of gold about hys necke: yea, he shalbe the seconde and principall nexte vnto kynge Darius, and that because of hys wisdō, and shalbe called the kynges kynsman. So, euery one wrote hys meanynge, sealed it, and layd it vnder the kynges pelow, and sayde: when the kyng ariseth, we wil geue him one writyngs, and looke whose wordē the kynge C and his chiefe lordes iudge to be the moste wisely spoken, the same shall haue the victory. One wrote: wyne is a stronge thyng.
v. g. soueters of ỹ kyng. v. g. yong mē.
The seconde wrote: The kynge is stronger. The thyrde wrote: Women haue yet more strengthe, but aboue all thynges the trueth beareth awaye the victorye. Nowe when the kynge was ryen vp, they tooke theyr writynges and delyuered them vnto him, and so he red them. Then sent he forth to call all hys chiefe lordes, all the debytes and rulers of the countres of Medea, and Persia. And when they were set downe in the councel, the wrytynges were red before them. And he commaunded to call for the ponge men, that they mighte declare theyr meanynges them selues by mouthe. So when they wer sent for, & came in, the kinge spake vnto them: Shewe vs and make vs to vnderstande what the thinges are that ye haue wrytten. Then beganne the fyrste (whiche had spoke of the strength of wyne) and sayde: O ye men, * wyne is marueilous stronge, and ouercommeth the, that dryke it: it disceaueth the mynde, and bryngeth forthe the poore man, and the kynge to dotage and banyte. Thus doethe it also with the bondeman, and wyth the free, wyth the poore and ryche: it taketh awaye theyr vnderstandynge, and maketh them careles and merye, so that none of them remembreth any hennesse or for dewtie. It causeth a man to thynke also, that the thynge whyche he dothe, is honest and good: and remembreth not that he is a kinge, nor that he is in auctorite, and that he ought not to do suche thinges. Moreouer, when men are dronckynge, they forget all frendeshyp, all brotherly fayethfulnes and loue: but as soone as they are dronckē, they draw out the swerde and wyll fyghte, and when they are layed downe from the wyne, and so ryssen vp agayne, they can not tell what they did: iudge ye now is not wyne the strongest? For who woulde els take in hande to do suche thynges? And when he had spoken this, he helde his tonge.

¶ The.iiij. Chapter.

Then the seconde (whiche had said) that the kynge was stronger, beganne to speake, sayinge: O ye men, are not they the strongest & most excellent, that conquere the lande, and the sea, and all that is in the sea, and in the earth? Now is the king lord of al these thynges, & hath dominion of thē al, and loke what he commaundeth, it is done. If he sende his men forthe a warfare, they go and breake downe hylles, walles, and towres. They are slayne, and slaye (other men) them selues, and ouerpasse not the bynges worde. If they get the victory, they bringe the kynge al the spoyle. Likewyse, the other that medle not wyth warres and fyghtynge, but tyll the grounde: whē they reape they bringe tribute vnto the kynge. And yf the kynge alone do but commaunde to kyll, they kyll: yf he commaunde to forgyue, they forgeue: yf he cōmaunde to smyte, they smyte: if he bid driue awaye, they dryue awaye: yf he commaunde to buylde, they buylde: yf he commaunde to breake downe, they breake downe. If he cōmaunde to plāte, they plant: The commen people, and the rulers are obedyente vnto hym. And the kynge in the meane season syteth hym downe, eateth, and dronketh, and taketh hys reste: then kepe thy watche rounde aboute the kynge, and not one of them darre get hym oute of the waye, to do his owne busines, but must be obedyente vnto the kynge at a woorde. Iudge ye nowe, O ye men, howe shoulde not he go farre aboue vnto whome men are thus obedyente? And whan he had spoken thus, he helde hys tonge. The thyrde, whose name was Zorobabel, whyche had spoken of wemen and of truth, began to say after this maner: O ye men, it is not the greate kynge, it is not the multytude of men, neither is it wine that excelleth: Who is it then that hath the lordshyp ouer thē? Haue not wemen borne the kynge, and all the people that rule thyse thynges? Haue not wemen borne them, and brought them vp, that plant the vines, wherout the wine commeth? They make garmentes for all men, they gyue honoure vnto all men, and without women can not men lyue. If they gather golde and syluer and all precyous thynges, and se a fayre well fauoured woman, they leaue altogether and turne their eyes onely to the woman, and gape vpon her, and haue thyse desyre vnto her, then vnto the syluer and golde, or any maner of precious thynge. * A man leaueth hys father that brought him vp, leaueth his owne natural countre, and cleaueth vnto the wōman: yea, he ieopardeth his lyfe with the womā, and remembreth neyther father, nor mother, nor countre. By this then ye must nedes knowe, that women haue dominion ouer you. Doth it not greue you? A man taketh his swearde, and goeth hys waye to steale, to hyr, to murther, to sayle vpon the sea, and seeth a Lion, & goeth in the darkenes: and when he hathe stollen, dysceaued and robbed, he bringeth it vnto hys loue. Agayne, a man loueth his wyfe better than father or mother: yea, manye one there be, that renne out of their wyttes, and become bondemen for theyr wiues sakes: many one also haue perysched, haue bene slayne, and haue synned because of women. And now beleue me, I knowe a kinge, which is greate in his power, and all landes stande in awe of him, and no man dare laye hande vpon him: yet did I se, that Apame (the doughter of the greate kynge Bartacus) the kynges concubyne, sat beside the kynge vpon the ryghte hande, and toke of hys crowne from his heade, and set it vpon her owne heade, and smote the kynge with her lefte hande. Moreouer, the kynge loked vpon her with open mouthe: yf she laughed vpon

vpon hym, he laughed also: but yf she toke any displeasure with hym, the kynge was layne to flatter her, and to gyue her good wordes, tyll he had gotten her fauoure a-gayne. O ye men, are not wemen then stronger? Greate is the earthe, and hye is the heauen, and swyfte is the course of the sunne, * he compasseth the heauen rounde about, and fetcheth hys course againe to his owne place in one daye. Is he not excellente that dothe this? Yea, greate is the truethe, and stronger then all thynges. All the earth calleth vpon the trueth, the heauen prayseth it, all workes shake and tremble at it, and with it is no vnrighteouse thinge. Wyne is vnrighteous: the king is vnrighteous: wemē are vnrighteous: all the chyldren of men are vnrighteous: yea, all their workes are vnrighteous, and there is no trueth in thē; in their vnrighteousnes also shal they be destroyed and perysche. As for the trueth, * it endureth, and is alwaye stronge: it lyueth and conquereth for euermore worlde without ende. The trueth acceypteth no persones, it puttech no differēce betwyxte rych or poore, betwixte the mighte or symple, but doth right vnto euery mā, whether they be euell or good, & al men are lousingly dealte wyth all in the workes of it. In the iudgemēt of it, there is no vnrighteous thynge, but strength kyngdom and power and maieste for euermore. Blessed be the God of trueth. And with that he helde hys tonge, and all the people cryed, and sayde: Greate is the trueth and above all. Then sayde the kynge vnto him: Aske what thou wylte, more then is appoynted in the writynge, and I shal geue it the, for thou arte founde wyser then thy companyons, thou shalt sit next me, and be my kynsman. Thē sayde he vnto the kynge: Remembre thy promyse and bowe, which thou hast bowed and promysed (in the day whē thou camest to the kingedom) to buylde vp Jerusalem, and to sende agayne all the vessels and Jewels, that were taken awaye oute of Jerusalem: whiche Cirus seperated, when he offred in Babilon, and wouldest sende them againe. And thy mynde was to buylde vp the tēple, which the Edomites brent, when Jerusalē was destroyed by the Chaldees. This onely (O Kynge) is the thynge that I requyre, this is the maieste: whyche I desyre and aske of the: that thou perfourme the bowe, whyche thou wyth thyne owne mouthe haste made vnto the, kynge of heauen. Then darius the kynge rose vp, and kyssed hym, * and wrote a letter vnto all the debites, and shreues, to all the Lordes, and nobles, that they should conueye him forth, and all them that woulde go vp wyth hym. He wrote a letter also vnto al the Shreues that were in Celosyria, and Phenices, and vnto Libanus, that they shoulde brawe Cedre trees from Lybanus vnto Jerusalem, to buylde the cytye withall. Moreouer, he wrote vnto all the Jewes that were gone oute of hys realme into Jewrye because of the fredome, that no officer, no ruler, nor Shreue, should come to theyr dores, and that all theyr lande whyche they had conquered, should be fre and not tributary: And that the Edomites should geue ouer the cytyes and villages of the Jewes, which they had taken in: yea, & that they should yearly geue xx. talentes to the buildynge of the temple, vntyl the tyme that it were fynished, and to the dayly halowynge of the brentoffrynges (as it is commaunded) ten talentes yearly also: And that all they whyche came from Babylon to buylde the cytye, should haue fre lybertye, they and theyr chyldren, and all the priestes. He wrote the greate-nesse also, and commaunded that the holye garmentes should be geuen them, wherein they mynystred: and commaundementes should be geuen to the Leuytes, vntyll the daye that the house were fynyshed, and Jerusalem buylded vp: and commaunded that al they that watched the cytye should haue theyr pozcions and wages. He gaue ouer also all the vessels that Cyrus had seperated from Babilon: and al that Cyrus had geuen in commaundemēt, the same charged he also, that it should be done, and sent vnto Jerusalem. Now when this yonge man was gone forth, he turned his face towarde Jerusalem, and praysed the kynge of heauen, and sayde: * Of thee commeth the victorye, of thee commeth wysdome and clearnesse, and I am thy seruaūte. Blessed arte thou, whiche haste geuen me wysedome: thee wyl I prayse, O Lord, thou God of oure fathers. And so he toke the letters, and went vnto Babilon. And when he came there, he tolde this vnto all hys brethren that were at Babilon, and they prayssed the god of their fathers, that he had geuen them refreshinge and lyberte to go vp, and to buylde Jerusalem and the temple (wherin the name of the LORDE is called vpon) and they reioyced wyth instrumentes and gladnesse seuen dayes longe.

And they appointed the Leuites (that were aboue. xx. yeare olde) vnto the seruice of the Lorde: so Jesua, and hys sonnes, and his brethrē, all the Leuites stode together, and performed the lawe and ordynaunce in the house of the Lorde. And they perceiued that it was they which were come againe out of captiuitie, and would builde the temple vp a newe vnto the Lorde God of Israell. So they went to Zorobabel and Jesua, and the rulers of the villages, and sayde vnto them. Shall we buylde wyth you also? For we lykewise haue heard your Lorde, and we walke after the same maner, from the dayes of Asbazareth the kynge of Assiria, which brought vs hyther. The Zorobabell and Jesua, and the rulers of the vyllages of Israell, sayde vnto them. It is not mete, that ye shoulde buylde the tẽple of oure God with vs: we oure selues alone

1.Esd.b.a NOwithstandynge in the .ii. yeare of the raygne of Darius, * Aggeus & zacharye the sone of Addo prophecied vpon thē in Jewry, & Jerusalē, i the name of the God of Israel. * Then Zorobabell the sone of Salathiel, & Jesua the sonne of Josedec stode vp, & begā to buylde the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem, whan the Prophetes of the Lorde helped theym. At the same tyme came Sisēnes the vnderchefe in Syria and Phenices, with the landlordes & his companyons, and sayd vnto thē: Who hathe bydden and commaunded you to buylde the house, to make the coūte and all other thinges againe? And who are the workemen that buylde them? Neuertheles, the elders of the Jewes hadde suche grace of the Lorde, that they wolde not be let (thoughe they were prouoked therevnto) but builded on styll, vntyll the tyme that king Darius were certified therof, & an answere receyued from hym. The letter that these men sente vnto kynge Darius, was after thys maner. Sisennes the vnder Shefe in Syria, and Phenices, and the landelordes with their cōpanions, whiche are head rulers in Syria and Phenices, sende their salutacion vnto Darius the kynge. We certifie the Lorde the kynge, that we came into the lande of Jewry, and wente to Jerusalem: where we founde them buyldyng the greate house of GOD, and the temple, B with great costlye free stone, & with goodlye tymber for the walles: yea, they make great hast wyth the worke, and helpe one another, and it goeth forthe prosperously in their handes, and with great dilygence and worshyppe is it made. Then asked we the elders, who had commaunded theym to make vp the house, and the buyldinge, and this we did, to the intent that we might certifie the perfectly, and wryte vnto thee, the name of those that were the rulers of the worcke. So they gaue vs this answere: we are the seruauntes of the Lorde, whyche made heauen and erth: & as for this house, 1.

Then Salmanasar layed the foundacyon of the Lordes house at Jerusalem, and euer sence haue C they builded, and yet is it not ended. And therfore, O kynge, if thou thinkest it good, let it be sought in the Libraries and rolles of kynge Cyrus, yf it be founde then, that it is done wyth the counsell and consent of kynge Cyrus, and yf oure Lorde the king be so mynded, let him wryte vnto vs therof. 1.Esd.6.a

In the first yere of the raygne of Cyrus, the same kynge Cyrus commaunded that the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem shoulde be buylded agayne (and odoures to be made there continually vnto the Lorde) whose heigth shalbe .x. cubites, and the bredth, threscore cubites, and fourefquare with thre hewen stones, wyth a lofte of tymbre of the same countrey: yea, with a newe lofte and the expenses therof to be geuen of the house of kynge Cyrus. And the ornamētes of golde and syluer, that Nabuchodonosor toke out of the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem, shalbe set agayn in the temple at Jerusalē, where they were afore. And therfore, we besought god oure Lorde earnestly because of these thynges, and he was mercyful vnto vs, & heard our prayer. And I separated from amonge the rulers of the people, and frō the Priestes of the temple xii. men, and Sebeia, & Asania, and ten men of their brethren with them. And I weyed them the golde and the siluer, and al the priestly ornamentes of the house of oure God, whiche the kynge, and hys counsell, and hys Princes, and whole Israell had geuen. And when I had weyed it, I gaue them an hundred and fiftye talentes in siluer, and an hundred talentes of siluer vessel, an hundred talētes of golde, & of golden vessell seuen tymes twentye, and vessels of other metal: (yea, of good metall) ewelue, glisterynge as the golde, and sayde vnto them: ye are holy vnto the Lorde, and the vessels are holye, and the golde and the siluer is promysed vnto the Lorde God of oure fathers. Be diligent now and kepe it, vntyl the tyme that ye deliuer it to the rulers of the people, to the Priestes, to the Leuites, and to the princypall men of the cytyes of Israell in Jerusalem, and in the

And from the ryuer of Thra, we brake vp the twelueth day of the firste moneth, tyll we came to Jerusalem. And when the thyrde daye was paste, the weyed gold & siluer was deliuered in the house of the Lorde the fourthe daye, vnto Marimoth the sonne of Joz the Priestes, and with him was Eleazar the sōne of phineas, and with them were Josabdus the sonnes of Jesuet, Rhedias, and the sonne of Banus, and certayne of the Leuites to the nūbre, and to the weight: & the weight of them was wrytten vp the same tyme. As for those that were come oute of captiuitie, they offred sacrifice vnto the Lord the God of Israel: euen twelue oxen for all Israell. lxxxvi. rammes, lxxii. chepe. xii. goates for synne, twelue kyne for a thanckoffryng all to the sacrifyce of the Lorde. And the kinges cōmyssyon deliuered they vnto the Stewardes and debities of the kynge, and to the vnderchyeues in Celosiria, and Phenices. * Nowe, when these thynges were done, the rulers came vnto me, and sayde: The generacyen of Israel, the Princes, the Priestes, and Leuites, the straunge people and indwellers of the lande, haue not put awaye their vnclennesse, frome the Cananites, Hethites, Pherezites, from the Moabites, Egypcians, and Edomites. For both they and their sonnes haue myngled themselues with the doughters of them, & the holye sede is myxte wyth the outelandyshe Heathen, and sence the beginnyng of their raigne, haue the rulers & heades bene partakers of their wyckednesse. * As soone as F 1.Esd. 9.a I had hearde these thynges, immediately I rent my holy garmentes, and pulled oute the heare of my heade and my beerde, & sat me downe sorowfull and heuy. So al they that were moued therowe the wordes of the God of Israell, came vnto me: and I sat stil, full of heuynesse vnto the euenynge sacrifice. Then stode I vp frome fastyng, hauynge rent clothes and the holy garment, kneled downe vpon my knees, helde oute vp my handes vnto the Lord, and sayde: O Lorde, I am confounded and ashamed before thy face, for our synnes are become many vpon our heades, and our wickednesses are exalted vnto the heauen: for sence the tyme of oure fathers, we are in great sinne vnto this day. And for the sinnes of vs and our fathers, we with our brethren, & wyth oure priestes haue bene delyuered vnto the kinges of the earth, into the swerde, & into captiuitie, and became a spoyle with confusyon and shame vnto this daye. And now, O Lord God, how great is thy mercy that we haue gotten of thee: in that thou hast lefte vs a roote and a name in the place of thy Sanctuarye, to dyscouer oure lyght in the house of the Lord our God, & hast geuen vs meate at al tymes of our ministracyon. And whē we were in captiuitie we wer not forsakē of the lord our god: but he made the kynges of Persia gracyous, and fauourable vnto vs, so that they gaue vs vitailes, and meate: yea, and leaue to buyld vp the temple of oure Lorde God agayne, to repayre the wasted places of Sion, & to dwel in Jewry and Jerusalē. And now, O lorde, what shall we saye, hauyng all these thyn-

For we haue broken thy commaundementes, which thou gauest vnto vs by the handes of thy seruauntes the prophetes, sayinge: The lande that ye goe vnto, and thatis geuen you for an heritage to haue in possession, is defiled with the vncleannes and filthynes of the heathen, and with their abhominatiō haue they poluted it altogether. Therefore, shal ye not ioyne your doughters vnto their sonnes, nor mary your sonnes vnto theyr doughters. Moreouer, ye shall neuer seke to make peace with them, that ye maye increase and eate the best in the lande, and that ye may vnder the inheritaunce of the lande, vnto youre children for euermore. As for the thynge that nowe happeneth vnto vs, it commeth all for our wycked workes, and greate synnes, yet hast thou geuen vs such a rote, that we are come agayne into oure owne lande, and we are so wycked that we haue broken thy statutes & commaundementes agayne, and mingled oure selues with the vnclennes of the out landisshe heathen. O Lorde, arte thou angrye with vs: wylte thou roote vs cleane out: that oure rote and name remaine nomore. O Lorde God of Israell thou arte true, for oure roote endureth yet vnto thys present daye. And beholde, nowe are we before the in our sinnes, nowe can we not stād

So when Jechonias the son of Jehely one of the chyldren of Israell cryed, he sayd vnto Esdras: we haue synned agaynste the Lorde, because we haue maryed outlandysshe womē of the heathen. Nowe arte thou ouer all Israel. We wyll sweare an othe therefore vnto the Lorde, that we shall put away all our wyues, whiche we haue taken of the heathen, with their children: lyke as it is appoynted the by oure fore elders. Stande vp then, open thou it, and declare it playnlye vnto vs, accordynge to the lawe of the Lorde: for the matter belongeth vnto the, and we wyl helpe the, quite thy selfe manly. So Esdras arose, and tooke an othe of the rulers, of the Priestes, and of the Leuites, and of Israel, to do after these thynges: & they sware.

1.Esd.x.b Then Esdras stode vp frō the courte of the temple without, & wēt vnto the chāber of Jonathas the son of Nasabus, and remayned there & dyd eate no meate, nor dronke drinke, for the multitude of the wylfulnes of the people. And there was made a proclamaciō in al Jewry & at Jerusalē, for al such as were gathered at Jerusalē out of captiuite, that whosoeuer came not to Jerusalē within two or three dayes (according to the iudgement of the olde Lordes of the councel) hys goodes shoulde be taken from him, and be excluded from the congregaciō of the captiuite. And in thre dayes were all they of the tribe of Juda and Ben Jamin gathered together at Jerusalem, the twentieth day of the nynth of moneth. And the whole multitude sat trēbling in the court of the temple, for it was wynter. So Esdras arose vp, and sayd vnto them: ye haue done wrongfully, in that ye haue taken outlandysshe wyues to maryage, and so to increase the synnes of Israell. And nowe knowledge the same, and gene prayse vnto the Lorde God of oure fathers, and performe hys wyl, departynge from the heathen of the lande, and from the outlandisshe wyues. Then cryed the whole multytude with a loude voyce, and sayd: lyke as thou hast spoken, so wyl we do: but for so muche as the people are many, & the wynter here, we maye not stande wythoute the house: agayne, this worke is not a thynge, that can be finished in a daye or two, for we be many that haue synned in these thynges. Ordeyne therefore, that the rulers of the multitude and they that dwell with vs, and as many as haue outlandisch wyues, that the priestes also & iudges of euery place may stande in the time appointed, til they swage the wrathe of the Lorde in thys busynesse. Then Jonathas the sonne of Ezelye, and Ozias and Thecan receaued the charge of thys matter, and Bozosamus, and Leius, and Sabbatheus helpeth them thereto. After this, all they shode by that were come out of captiuite. And Esdras the Prieste chose vnto hym the principall men from a monge the fathers accordynge to their names, and in the newe moone of the tenth moneth they sate together, to examen thys matter. And so the matter was a determenynge (concernynge the men that had outlandysh wyues) buryll the newe moone of the fyrst moneth. And of the priestes that had myxt them selues wyth outlandysshe wyues, there were foundē. * Of the sonnes 1.Esd.x.d.

that be heade rulers in Siria and Phenyces, shall not medle nor haue anye thynge to do with that place. I Cyrus haue commaunded also, that they shall buylde the house of the Lorde whole vp, and haue ordeyned them, to helpe those that be come out of captiuitie: tyll the house of the Lord be fynyshed: and out of the tribute and taxynge that is yearly raised vp in Siria, and Phenices, diligentlye to geue them a certayne summe to the offringe of the lorde: and the same to be deliuered vnto Zorobabel the officer, that he there wythall maye ordeine oxen, rammes, lābes, and corne, salte, wine, and oyle, and that continuallye euery yere: after the expenses * whyche the Priestes that be at Jerusalem, shewe to be made dayly, this shalbe geuen vnto them without delay, that they may offre sacrifices dayly to the hyest God, for the kynge and for his seruauntes, and to praye for theyr lyues. Let it be proclaimed also on euery syde, that whole euer breaketh or dispiseth this commaundemente of the kynge, shalbe hanged vpon a galowes (made of his owne good) and all his goodes shalbe ceasoned vnto the kynge. The Lorde therfore (whose name is there called vpon) roote oute, and destroye all the kynges and people, that vndertake by violence to hynder the same, or to deale vncourteously with the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem. I Darius the king haue ordeyned, that these thynges shalbe done with all diligence.

THē Sisines the vnderchefe in Celosiria, and Phenices, & the other lāde Lordes with their companions, obeied the thinges that king Darius had ordeined, and were diligent in the holy workes, & were felow helpers with the olde rulers of the Jewes. And so the worcke of the Sanctuary went forth & prospered, whē Aggeus + & Zachary prophecyed. And they perfourmed al thinges thorow the commaundemēt of the Lorde God of Israell, and after the deuyse of Cyrus, Darius and Artaxerses kynges of Perssia. And thus was our house fynyshed vnto the .xxiiii. day of the moneth Ader in the .vi. yeare of kynge Darius. And the chyldren of Israell, the Priestes and the Leuytes, and the other that were come out of captyuitye, and suche as were ioyned vnto them, did accordynge as it is written in the boke of Moses. And in the dedication of the temple: they offered an hundred oxen, two hundred rammes, foure hundred lambes, and twelue goates, for the synnes of all the people of Israell, after the nombre of the tribes of Israell. The priestes also & the Leuites were araied in their prieskely garmētes, after the tribes, ouer all the worckes of the Lorde God of Israel, accordynge to the boke of Moses, and the porters by all dores. All the chyldren of Israell (with those that were come oute of captiuytie) kelde the Passouer the fouretenth daye of the fyrste moneth, when the Priestes and the Leuites were sanctyfyed. They that came out of captiuity, were not all sanctifyed together: but the Leuytes were all sanctifyed together, and so all they that came out of captiuitie, kylled the Easter lambe for their brethren, for the Priestes and for themselues. And the chyldren of Israell that came oute of captyuitye, and escaped frō al the abhominacion of the heathen, sought the Lorde, & kepte the feast of the vnleuened breade seuē dayes longe, eatynge and drinkynge & were merye before the Lorde: that the Lorde had turned the deuyce of the kynge of Assiria, and confoyted theyr handes to the worckes of the Lorde God of Israel.

¶ The. viii. Chapter.

AND after him * whē Artaxerses the kynge of Persians raygned, there went vnto him Esdras the sonne of Saraias, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Helchiach, the sonne of Sallum, the sonne of Sadoch, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Amarias, the sonne of Azarias, the sone of Boccus, the sonne of Abiu, the sonne of Phineas, the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron the fyrste Priest. This Esdras went vp from Babylon (for he had good vnderstandynge in the lawe of Moses, that was geuen of the Lorde God of Israel, to be taughte and done in dede.) And the kynge fauoured him, and dyd him greate worshippe and honour after all hys deslyres. There went vp with him also certayne of the children of Israel, of the Priestes, of the Leuites, of the singers, porters and ministers of the temple at Jerusalem. In the seuenth yeare of the raygne of kyng Artaxerses, in the fiueth moneth, that is in the seuenth yere of the raygne, they went from Babilon in the newe moone of the .v. moneth, and came the hye waye to Jerusalem after his commaundement, lyke as the Lorde had prospered their iourney. For in these Esdras gat great instruccion, that he shoulde leaue none of the thynges behinde, which are in the lawe and commaundementes of God. And he taughte whole Israel all rygheousnes and iudgementes. Then came the Secretaries of kyng Artaxerses, & deliuered the writinges (that were come from Artaxerses the kynge) to Esdras the Priest and reader of the lawe of the Lorde: And this is the coppye of the letter: Kynge Artaxerses

Artaxerxes sendeth his greetynge vnto Esdras the Prieste, and reader of the lawe of the Lord. Of frendshyp & good will, I haue ordeyned and charged, yf there be any of the Jues, of the priestes & Leuites of my realme, whiche desyreth and is content to go wyth the vnto Jerusalē, that he may do it. Ther fore, yf any man be minded to beare the cōpany, let them come together, and go with the lyke as I am content & my seuē frendes, my counceilers) to se what they do at Jerusalē and in Jewry, and kepe the thynges accordynge as thou hast in the lawe of the Lorde: and to bryng the gyftes vnto God the Lorde of Israell, that I and my frendes haue promysed to Jerusalem, all the syluer and golde, that is in the cōtrey of Babylon, vnto the Lorde to Jerusalem, wyth the thynge that is geuen for the people in the Lordes temple at Jerusalē: yea, that the same syluer and golde maye be gathered, and ore, rammes, shepe and gotes, and other that belonge to these thynges: & that they may offre sacrifices vnto the lord, vpon the aulter of theyr Lorde, whiche is at Jerusalem. And what soeuer thou & thy brethren will do with the syluer and golde, that do after thy mynde, accordynge to the commaundement of the Lord thy God, and lykewise, with the holy vessels that are geuē the, for the seruice of the house of the lord thy God: and other thynges what soeuer is necessarye for the, to the wrathe of the temple, that shalbe geuē the of the kinges treasure, and lode what thou wyth thy brethrē wylt do with the golde and syluer, that do after the wyll of the Lorde. And I kynge Artaxerxes, haue commaūded the keepers of the treasures in Syria and Phenices, that whatsoeuer Esdras the Prieste, and reader of the lawe of the Lorde doth wryte, it shalbe geuen him: till an hundred talentes of syluer, and of golde in lyke maner. Of corne also an hundred measures, and til an hundred vessels of wine, and the other plenteous thynges without nūmbre. Let all thynges be done after the lawe of the hyest God, that the wrathe of God aryse not in the realme of the kynge, and of his sonnes.

I commaunde you also, that ye require no tribute of the Prieستes, Leuites, singers, and ministers of the temple, nor of the writers, and that no man haue authorite to medle any thynge agaynste them.

As for the (O Esdras) set thou Judges and arbiters in the whole lande of Syria and Phenices, after the wysedome of God: and learne al such as are ignorāut in the law of God thy Lorde, and lette all them that offende agaynste the lawe, be punysshed: whether it be with death, with payne to be condemned in money, or to be banished.

Then sayde Esdras the wryter. * Blessed be the God of oure fathers, that hathe geuen to good a mynde and will into the herte of the kynge, to magnifye his house that is at Jerusalem, and hathe made me to be accepted in the syght of the kyng, of his counsell, of hys frendes, and of his nobles. And so I was stedfast in my mynde, accordyng as the Lorde my God helped me, & I chose out men of Israell to go vp with me. * And these are the heades, (after their kinredes and houses of their fathers) that wente vp with me from Babylon, out of the kyngdō of Artaxerses: Of the sonnes of Phares, Gerſonius: Of the sonnes of Siemarith, Amenus. Of the sonnes of Dauid, Actus, the sonne of Cecilia. Of the sonnes of Phares, Zachary: and with him there turned againe an hundred and fiftie men. Of the sonnes of the captayne of Moabilon, Zarael, and with him. ij. C. and. l. men. Of the sonnes of Zachnes, Jechonias, Zechely, and with him two hundred and fiftie mē. Of the sonnes of Salamaalias, Gotholy, & .lxx. with him. Of the sonnes of Saphacia: zarias, Michely, and with hym foure score. Of the sonnes of Joab, Abdias, Jehely, & with him two hundred and twelue men. Of the sonnes of Bania, Salimoth, the sonnes of Josaphia, and with him an hundred and thre score men. Of the sonnes of Beer, zachary Bethei, and wyth hym two hundred and. lxiij. menne. Of the sonnes of Elead, Johannes Ezechū, and with hym an hundred and ten menne. Of the sonnes of Adonicam, whose that were the last, & these are their names. Eliphalā the sonne of Bebel, and Semeias, and with him. lxx. men. All these called I together by the water Thia, where we pytched oure tentes thre dayes, and there I mustered them. * As for the sonnes of the Prieستes and Leuytes, I founde none there. Then sente I vnto Eleazar, and Ecceiom, and Maalmain, and Maladam, and Enathan, and Samea, & Joribumathan. Eunagan, zachary, Mosollamun (these were the elders, and men of experyence) and I sente them worde, that they shoulde come vnto Loddeus, whiche was by the place of the treasurye, and commaunded them, that they shoulde speake vnto Loddeus, and to his brethren, and to those that were in the treasurye, to sende vs such men, as myght execute the Prieستes office in the house of the Lorde oure God. And wyth the myghtye hande of oure Lorde God, they brought vnto vs men of good experyence, from amonge the sonnes of Moolius, the sonne of Leui, the sonne of Israell, Sebriam, and the sonnes, and his

And of Israell, of the children of Fozo, Ofi, and Remias, & Geddias, and Melchias, Michelus, Eleazarus, Jemmebias, and Banas. And the children of Jolaman, Chamias, zachari, Jeizrelus, Jodius, Errimoth, and Elias. And of the sonnes of Jathoim, Eliadas, Liasimus, and zochias, Lozmoth, Sabdis, and Tebedias. And of the sonnes of zebes, Johannes, Amanias, zabdias, and Emmeus. And of the sonnes of Bannus, Olammus, Maluchus, Jeddus, Jasub, Asabus, and Jezimoth. And of the sonnes of Addin, Maatus, and Mosias, and Caleus, & Raanas, Maalias, Mathathias, Besell, Bannus, & Manasses. And of the sonnes of Naue, Nones, Afeas, Melchias, Sameas, Simon, Beniamin, Malchus, and Marras.

And of the sonnes of Asom, Carianeus, Mathathias, Bannus, Eliphalach, Manasses, Semei. Of the sonnes of Bannus, Jeremy, Moodias, Abiamas, Johell, Baneas. Nelias, Jona, Marimoth, Eliasib, & Mathaneus, Elias, Oztas, Bielus, Semeidus, zambzis, and Joseph. Of the sonnes of Nobeus, Idelus, Mathathias, Sabadus, zeheda, Sedmi, Jesseus, & Bancas. All these had taken ouelandish wemen to mariage, & they put them away with their children. The priestes and Lenites, and all they that were of Israel, dweite at Jerusalem, and thozowout al the land, in the new moone of the seuenth moneth, and the children of Israell were in their dwellynges: And the whole multitude came together by on the flooze at the Easte syde of the holye pozte of the Temple. And they spake vnto Eldzas the hye Priest and reader, that he would bzing the lawe of Moses, which was geuen of the Lozd God of Israel. And they applyed their mynde all vnto the lawe. And Eldzas the priest and reader of the lawe, stode by vpon a pulpyt of woodde, whiche was maw therefore: and vpon hys ryght hande there stode by him Mathathias, Samus, Ananias, Azarias, Urias, Ozechias, and Balsamus: Vpon hys left hāde stode Faldeus, Misael, Malachias, Abulchas, Sabus, Mathias, & zachary. So Eldzas prayfed the Lozde the moost hye God, the Almyghtie God of Hoostes. And all the people answered: Amen: and belde by their handes, fell downe flat vpon the earth, and prayfed the Lozde. And Jesus, Beneas, Sarebias, Jaddim⁹, Accub⁹, Sabbathe⁹, Calithes, Azarias, Jozadus, Ananias, & Phylias the Lenites syte theyr handes vpwarde, and bowed their faces to the grounde, and prayfed the Lozde: Those were they whiche tanghte the lawe of the Lozd, and red the lawe of the Lozde, in the congregation: and euery man set them before that vnderstode the lawe. Then spake Atharates vnto Eldzas the hye Prieste, & reader, and to the Lenites that tanght the multitude, saying: This daye is holy vnto the Lozd, & all they that had herd the law, wepte. So Eldzas sayde: * departe youre 2. ¶ The. ii. Chapter.

THus sayeth the Lorde: I brought thys A people out of bondage, I gaue the my cõmaũdementes, by my seruaũtes the prophetes, which they would not heare, but despised my councels, The mother that bare them, sayeth vnto them: Go youre waye ye childzen, for I am a widdowe & forsaken: I bzought you vp wyth gladnesse, but wyth sozowe and heuinesse haue I lost you: for ye haue synned before the Lozde youre God, & done the thing that is euel before him. But what shall I nowe do vnto you? I am a wyddowe and forsaken: go youre waye, O my childzen, and aske mercye of the Lozde.

B As for me, O father, I call vpon thee for a wytnesse ouer the mother of these chyldzen which would not kepe my couenaunt, that thou bzynge them to confusion, and theyr mother to a spoyle, that she beare no moze.
Let theyr names be scatred abzoade amõge the heathen. Let them be put oute of the earthe, for they haue thought scorne of my couenaunte. Wo be vnto the Assur, thou that hyddest the vnrighteous by the.

Gen. 19. c Thou wycked people, remembze what I dyd vnto Sodome and Gomozre, whose lande is turned to pitch and asshes. Euen so also wyll I do vnto all them, that beare me not, sayeth the almyghtye Lozde. Thus sayeth the Lozde vnto Eldzas: tell my people, that I wyll geue them the kyngedome of Jerusalem, whiche I would haue geuen vnto Israel. Their glozye also wyll I take vnto me, and geue them the euerlastynge tabernacles, whyche I had prepared for those. The tree of lyfe shalbe vnto them a swete smellynge oyntement: they shal neiwaye, and ye shall receaue it. Praye for youre selues a fewe dayes, that they maye dwel therin. Nowe is the kyngedome prepared for you, therfore watche. Take heauen and earth to witnesse, for I haue bzoke the euel in peces, and created the good, for I lyue sayeth the Lozde. Mother embzace thy childzen, and bzinge hõ vp with glad-nesse: make their fete as fast as a pyller, for I haue chosen the, sayeth the Lozde. And those that be deade wyll I rayse vp agayne Resurrectio from theyr places, and bzynge them oute of the graues, for I haue knowen my name in Israel. Feare not thou mother of the chyl-dzen, for I haue chosen the, sayeth the Lozd.

And for thy helpe I shall sende the my sernauntes Elaye, and Jeremye, after whose councel I haue sanctyfyed and prepared for the twelue trees wyth dyuerse frutes, and as many welles, flowynge with mylke and honye, and seuen mountaynes, where vpon there growe roses and lilies, wherin I wyll fyll my chyldzen with ioye. Execute iustice for the wyddowe, be iudge for the father-les: geue to the poore: defende the cõtrothtelle: clothe the naked: heale the wounded and syeke: laughe not a lame mã to scorne: defende the creepell, and let the blynde come into the lyghte of my clearnes: & whersoeuer thou findest the deade, take thẽ, & bury them, and I shall geue the, the first place in my resurrection. Holde styll (O my people) and take thy rest, for thy quietnes is come.
Feede thy chyldzen, O thou good nozsle, stablyshe theyr fete: As for the seruauntes whome I haue geuen the, there shall not one of them perysshe. For I wyll seke them from thy mumbze, bexe not thy selfe. For when the daye of trouble and heuines commeth, other shall wepe and be sozowefull, but thou shalte be mery and plenteous. The heathẽ shalbe gelous, but thei shalbe able to do nothynge against the, saith the lozd.
My handes shal couer the, so that thy chyl-dzen shal not se the fyre euerlastynge. Be toykull, O thou mother wyth thy childzen, for I wyl deliuer the sayeth the Lozd. Remembze thy deade chyldzẽ, for I shal bzing them out of the earth, and shew mercy vnto them, for I am mercyful, saith the Lozde almyghtye. Embzace thy childzen, vntyll I come, and shewe mercye vnto them, for me welles ranne ouer, and my grace shal not fayle. I Eldzas receaued a charge of the Lozde vpõ the mount Oxeb, that I shoulde go vnto Jsraell. But when I came vnto Jsrael, they set me at noughte, and despysed the commaundemente of the Lozd. And therfore I saye vnto you, O ye heathen, that heare and vnderstande: Loke for youre shepherde, he shall geue you euerlastynge rest, for he is nye at hande, they shall come in the ende of the worlde: Be readye to the rewarde of the kyngedome, for the euer lastynge lyghte shall shyne vpon you for euermoze. Flie the shadowe of this worlde, receaue the ioyfulnesse of your glozy. I testifye my sauioure openlye, O receaue the gyfte that is geuẽ you, and be glad, geuing thanckes vnto him, that hath called you to the heauenly kyngedome. Aryse vp, & stãde faste: beholde, the numbze of those that be sealed in the feaste of the Lozde, whiche are departed from the shadowe of the worlde, and haue receaued glozious garmentes of the Lozde. Take thy numbze O Sion, and shut vp thy purpyred, which haue fulfilled the lawe of the Lozde. The numbze of thy chyldzen whome thou longedest, for, is ful-fylled, beseche the power of the Lozde, that thy people whyche haue bene called from euer hyghet and hyghet, which I marueled at greatlye. So asked the aungell, and sayde: Sir, what are theise? He aunswered & sayde vnto me: Theise be they, that haue put of the mortal clothinge, and put on the immortall, and haue testifyed and knowe-leged the name of GOD. Nowe are they crowned, and receaue the rewarde. Then sayde I vnto the aungel: what yonge per-sonne is it, that crowneth them, and geueth them the palmes in theyr handes? So he aunswered, and sayde vnto me: It is the sonne of God, whome they haue knowele-ged in the worlde. Then beganne I greatly to commende them, that stode so stiffe for the name of the Lorde. And so the aungell sayd vnto me: Go thy waye, and tel my peo-ple, what maner of thynges, and how great wõders of the lord thy God, thou hast sene.

¶ The. iii. Chapter.

IN the thirtie yere of the fal of the cytye, I was at Babilõ, and laye troubled vpõ my bed and my thoughtes came by ouer my heart: for I sawe the desolacion of Siõ, and the plenteouse wealthe of them that dwele at Babilon: and my spyryte was sore moued, so that I beganne to speake fearful wordes to the most hyest, and sayd: O lord, Lord thou spakest at the begynnynge, whẽ thou plantedst the earthe (and that thy selfe alone) and gauest commaundemente vnto the people, and a bodye vnto Adam, whyche was a creature of thy handes, and hast brethed in him the brethe of lyfe: and so he lyued before the, and thou leddest him into Paradyse, whyche garden of pleasure thy ryghte hande had planted, or euer the earth was made: And vnto him thou gauest commaundemente to loue thy waye, whiche he transgressed, and immediatlye thou ap-poyntedest deathe in hym, and in his gene-racions. Of him came nacions, tribes, peo-Gen. 6.b ple, and hynredes oute of numbre. * And B euerye people walched after theyr owne wyll, and dyd vyce thynges before the: and as for thy commaundementes, they despy-Gen viii b sed them. * But in processe of tyme, thou broughtest the water floude, vpon those that dwelte in the worlde, and destroyedst them. And lyke as the death was in Adam, so was the water floude also in these. Ne-uertheleste one of them thou lefte̊st: namely, Noe with his houshoulde, of whome came all ryghteouse men. And it happened that when they that dwelte vpon the earth, be-ganne to multiplye, and had gotten manye childzen, and were a greate people, they be gan to be more vngodly thẽ the first. Now, when they a lyued so wickedly before the

* thou didest chose the a man from amonge them, whose name was Abrahã. Him thou louedst, and vnto him onely thou shewedst thy wil, and madest an euerlastynge cone-naunte with him, promisinge him, that thou wouldest neuer forsake his sede. * And vnto him thou gauest Isaac, * vnto Isaac also thou gauest Jacob & Esau. As for Ja-C cob thou dydest chose hym, & put backe E-sau. * And so Jacob became a great multy-tude. And it happeneth that whẽ thou led-est his sede out of Egypt, * thou broughte-test them vp to the mount Sion, bowing downe the heauens stretynge fast the earth, mouynge the grounde, makynge the dep-thes to shake, and troublynge the worlde. And thy glorye wente thorowe foure por-tes of fyre, and earth quakes, and wyndes, and colde: that thou myghtest geue the lawe vnto the sede of Jacob, and dylygence vnto the generacion of Israell. And yet forgatest thou not awaye from them that wycked hearte, that thy law myght bryng forthe fruite in them. For the first Adã bare a wycked heart, trãsgressed, and was ouer-come, and so be all they that are borne of Rom. 8.a hym. * Thus remayned weakenes with the lawe, in the heartes of the people, with the wyckednesse of the rote: so that the good departed awaye, and the euel abode styll. So the tymes passed awaye, and the yea-res were broughte to an ende. * Then did-1.reg.16c dest thou rayse the vp a seruaunte called Dauid, * whome thou commaundedst to 2.reg.b.a buylde a cytye vnto thy name, and to offre vp incense & sacrifice vnto the therin. This was done nowe many yeares. Then the inhabiters of the cytye forsoke thee, and in all thynges dyd euen as Adam and all hys generacions had done: for they also had a wycked heart. And so thou gauest thy cytie ouer into the handes of thyne enemyes. D Are they of Babylon then better and more ryghteous then thy people, that they shall therfore haue the dominion of Sion? For when I came there, and sawe theyr vngod-lynes, and so greate wyckednesse: that it coulde not be numbred: yea, when my soule sawe so many euell doers (in the thyrtye yeare) my hearte fayled me, for I saw, how thou sufferest them in such vngodlynes, and sparest the wycked doers: but thyne owne people haste thou roted oute, and preser-ued thyne enemyes, and this haste thou not shewed me. I cannot perceaue how this happeneth. Wo they of Babylon then bet-ter, then they of Sion? Or is there anye other people, that knoweth the, sauynge that people of Israel? Or what generacion hathe so beleued thy couenauntes, as Ja-cob? And yet their rewarde appeareth not, and their labour hath no frut. For I haue gone here and there thorowe the Heathen, and I se that they be ryche and wealthye, and thynche not vpon thy commaundementes. Wepe thou therefore oure wyckednesse nowe in the balaunce, and theires also that dwell in the worlde, and so shall thy name be no where founde but in Israel. Or where is there a people vpon earth, that hath not synned before the? Or what people hath so kept thy cõmaundementes? Thou shalt finde, that Israel by name hath kept thy preceptes, but not the other people and Heathen.

¶ The.iiii. Chapter.

A AND the Aungel that was sent vnto me (whose name was Uriel) gaue me an answere, & said: Thy hearte hath take to much vpon it in this worlde, & thou thinkest to cõprehende the waye of the hyest. Then sayd I: yea, my Lorde. And he answered me, & sayd: I am sent to shew the three wayes, and to set forth three similitudes before the: whereof if thou canst declare me one, I will shewe the also the way, that thou desirest to se: & I shal shewe the from whence the wicked hert cõmeth. And I sayd: Tell on my Lorde. Then saide he vnto me: Go thy way, wepe me the weight of the fire, or measure me the blaste of the wynde, or call me againe the daye that is past. Then answered I, and sayde: What man borne is able to do that? Why requirest thou suche of me? And he sayde vnto me: If I shoulde aske the, how depe dwellinges are in the sea? Or howe great water springes are vpon the firmament? Or how great water springes are in the beginning of the depe? Or which are the out gonges of paradise? Paradise ture thou wolest say vnto me: I neuer went downe yet into the depe nor hel, neither did I euer clyme vp into heauen. Neuertheles, nowe haue I asked the but onely of fyre, and wynd, and of the daye, where thorowe thou hast trauayled, and from the whiche thou canst not be separated: and yet canste thou geue me no answere of theym. He sayde moreouer vnto me: Thyne own thinges, & such as are growen vp with the, canst thou not know: howe shoulde thy bessell then be able to comprehende the waye of the Hyest, and nowe outwardly in the corrupte worlde, to vnderstande the corrupcion that is cuident in my sighte? Then sayde I vnto hym: It were better that we were not at all, then that we should liue in wickednes, & to suffre, & not to knowe wherfore. He answered

2.Sa.23.c toke suche a counsell, & said: Come let vs go, & fight against the sea, that it may depart away before vs, & that we may make vs yet more woddes. The floudes of the sea also in like maner, toke this deuice, & said: Come, let vs go vp, & fyght agaynste the trees of the wood, that we maye make oure lande the wider. The thoughte and deuise of the wood was but vayne, and nothyng worth, for the fyre came and consumed the wood: The thoughte of the floudes of the sea, came lykewyse to naughte also, for the sãe flode vp and stopped theym. If thou were iudge nowe betwyxte these two, whome wouldest thou iustifye, or whome wouldest thou condempne? I answered and sayde: Verelye it is a foolysche thoughte that they bothe haue deuysed. For the grounde is geuen vnto the wodde, and the sea also hath his place to beare his floudes. Then answered he me, and sayde: Thou haste geuen a ryght iudgement, why iudgest thou not thy selfe also? For like as the grounde is geuẽ vnto the wodde, and the sea to hys floudes: euen so * they that dwell vpon Esa.45.c earth, maye vnderstande nothynge, but John.3.c that which is vpon earth: and he that dwel 1.cor.ii.b. leth aboue the heauens, maye onely vnderstande the thynges, that are aboue the heuens. Then answered I, and sayd: I beseche thee, O LORDE, let me haue vnderstandynge: for it was not my mynde to be curyous of thy hye thynges, but of suche as we daylye medle withall, namelye, wherefore that Israell is blasphemed of the Heathen, and for what cause the people (whome thou euer haste loued) is geuen ouer, to be punysched of vngodlye nacyons, and why, the lawe of oure fathers is broughte to naught, and the writen couenauntes come to none effecte, and we passe awaye oute of the worlde as the grashoppers, and oure life is a verye feare, and we are not worthy to optayne mercye. What wyll he do then vnto hys name, which is called vpon ouer vs? Of these thynges haue I asked questyon. Then an- C swered he me, and sayde: The more thou searchest, the more thou shalte maruel, for the worlde hasteth faste to passe away, and can not comprehende the thynges that are promysed for the ryghteous in time to come, for * this worlde is ful of vnryghte- 1.Joh.b.c ousnes and weaknesse. But as concernyng the thynges whereof thou askest me, I wyll tell thee. The euel is sowen, but the destruction thereof is not yet come.

If the eupl nowe, that is sowen, be not turned vpsyde downe, and yf the place where the euell is sowne, passe not awaye, then can not the thynge come that is sowen wyth good. For the ozne of eupll sede hathe bene sowen in the hearte of man frome the begynnynge, and howe muche vngodlynesse hathe he broughte vp vnto thys tyme? And howe muche shall he yet bryng forth, vntyl he come into the barne? Ponder nowe by thy selfe, when the corne of euell sede is cutte downe, howe greate a barne shall it fyll? I aunswered and sayd: Howe and when shall these thynges come to passe? Wherfore are oure yeares few and cupll? And he answered me, sayinge: Haste not thou to muche vpon the Hyest, for thy hastines to beadoue him is but baine, thou makest to muche a do. Did not the soules also of the righteous aske question of these Apoc. 6. b thynges in their holynesse, saying: * Howe longe shall I hope of thys sach pon? Whan commeth the frute of my barne, and my reward? And vpon this Jeremiel the Archãgel gaue theym aunswere, and sayd: Euen when the numbre of the sedes is fylled in you, for he hathe weyed the worlde in the balaunce in measure and numbre hathe he measured the tyme, and moueth it not, vntyll the same measure be fulfylled. Then answered I, and sayd: O Lorde, Lord, now are we all full of synne, and for oure sake paraduẽture it is not, the barne of the righteous shal not be fylled, but because of the B sinnes of them that dwell vpon the earthe. So he answered me, and said: Go thy waye to a woman wyth chyld, and asked of her, whe she hath fulfylled her nyne monethes, yf her childebed maye kepe the byrthe any longer with in her. Then said I: No Lorde that can she not. And he sayde vnto me: In hell the secrete places of soules are like the preuye chambre of a woman. For lyke as a woman that trauayleth, maketh hast, whe the tyme & necessite of the birth is at hãde. Euen so doth the haste to deliuer it that is commytted vnto her. Lorde what thou desyrest to se, it shall be shewed the from the begynnynge. Then answered I, and sayd: If I haue founde fauoure in thy sight, and yf it be possible, or yf I be mete therefore, shewe me then, whether there be more to come, then is past, or more past then is for to come. What is past, I knowe: but what is for to come, I know not. And he said vnto me: Stande vp vpon the ryght side, and I shall expounde the similitude vnto thee. So I stode, and beholde, an whote burnig ouen went ouer before me: and it happened that when the flamme was gone by, the smoke had the vpper hand. After this there wente ouer before me a watery cloude, and sente downe muche rayne with a storme: & when the stormye rayne was past, the droppes remayned styll. Then said he vnto me: like as the raine is more then the droppes, and as the fire exceadeth the smoke, euẽ so the measure of the thynges that are passe, hath the vpper hande. Thẽ went the droppes and the smoke aboue: and I prayed & sayde: Maye I lyue (thinckest thou) vntyll that tyme? Or what shall happen in those dayes? He answered me, and sayde: As for the tokens wherof thou askest me. I maye tell the of them in parte: but as touchynge thy lyfe, I maye not shewe thee, for I am not sent therfore.

A NEuertheles, as concernynge the tokens, marke this: Behold, the dates shal come, that they which dwel vp on erth, shalbe taken in a great numbre, & the way of the truth shalbe hid, & the land shalbe baren from faith: but * iniquite shal Mat 24 a

But yf God graunt the to lyue, thou shalt se after the iij. tropet, that the sũne shal sodenly shyne againe in the nyght. And the mone thre tymes in the day, & bloud shal drop out of the wood, & the stone shal geue his voice, & the people shall be bnquiet: and euen he shall rule, whome they hope not that dwel vpon earth, and the fowles shall flit, and the Sodomitishe sea shall caste out his fyshe, and make a noyse in the nyghte, whiche manye shal not knowe, but they shal all heare the voyce therof. There shalbe a confusyon also in many places, and the fyre shall be ofte sent againe, and the wilde beastes shall go theyr waye, and monsterous wemen shal beare monsters, and salte waters shall be founde in the swete: one frende shall fyghe against another: then shal al wit and bnderstandyng be hid and put aside into their secrete places, and shalbe sought of many, and yet not be founde: then shall bnryghteousnes, and bolupteousnes haue the vpperhande vpon earth. One lande also shall aske another, and saye: Is ryghteousnesse gone thorowe thee? And it shall saye: No.
B At the same tyme shall men hope, but nothyng optayne: they shal labour, but their wayes shal not prosper. To shew the such tokens I haue leue, and yf thou wylt pray agayne, and wepe as nowe, and faste seuen dayes, thou shalte heare yet greater thynges. Thẽ I awaked, and a fearfulnes was thorowe all my bodye, and my mynd was feble and carefull, so that I almost sowned withall. So the aungell that was come to talke with me, helde me, cõforted me, and set me vpon my feete. And in the seconde nyghte it happeneth, that Salathiell the captaine of the people came vnto me, saying: Where hast thou bene? and why is thy cõ-

Then sayde I vnto hym: Go thy waye frome me, and come not nye me: and he heard it, and as I sayde: so went he hys waye fro me. And so I fasted seuen dayes, mournyng and weppyng, like as Uriel the aungell commaunded me. And after seuen dayes it happened, that the thoughtes of my hearte were berye greuous vnto me again, and my soule receaued the spirite of vnderstandynge, and I beganne to talcke wyth the moste Hyest again, and saide: O Lorde, Lorde, of euerye wood of the earthe and of all the trees thereof, thou haste chosen the one onely vyneyarde: and of all landes of the whole world, thou haste chosen the one pyt: and of al flowres of the ground thou haste chosen the one lylye: and of all the depthes of the sea, thou haste fylled thee one ryuer: and of all buylded cyties thou haste halowed Syon vnto thy selfe: and of all the foules that are created, thou haste named thee one doue: and of all the cattell that are made, thou hast prouyded the one shepe, and amonge all the multitudes of folckes, thou haste gotten thee one people, and vnto thys people whome thou loueddest, thou gauest a lawe, that is proued of all. And nowe, O Lorde, why haste thou guen this one people ouer vnto many? And vpon the one rote thou haste prepared other, and why haste thou scattered thy one onely people amonge many, whiche treade them downe? yea, wyche haue euer wythstande thy promyses, and neuer beleued thy couenaunte? And though thou weraest enemye vnto thy people, yet shouldest thou punyche them with thyne owne handes.

Nowe when I had spoken theese wordes the aungell that came to me the nyghte afore, was sente vnto me, and\ sayde vnto me: Heare me, and herken to the thynge that I saye, and I shall tell the more. And I sayde: speake on my Lorde. Then sayde he vnto me. Thou art sore vexed and troubled for Israelles sake. Louest thou that people better then him that made them? And I sayde: No Lorde, but of verye greke and compassion haue I spoken. For my eeynes payne me euerye houre, because I would haue experyence of the waye of the moste hyest, and to seke oute parte of hys iudgement. And he sayd vnto me: that thou mayest not. And I sayde: wherefore Lorde, where vnto was I borne then? Or why was not my mothers chyldebedde then my graue? So hadde I not sene the myserye and trouble of Jacob, and the trauayle of my people of Israell. And he sayde vnto me: Numbre the thynges that are not yet come: gather me together the droppes, that are scattered abrode: make me the floures greene agayne, that are wythered: open me the thynge that is closed: and bryngе me forth the wyndes, that are shutte vp:

Shewe me the Image of a voyce, and then shall I declare the thynge, that thou labourest to knowe. And I sayd: O Lorde, LORDE, who maye know theese thynges, but he that hathe not hys dwellyng wyth menne? As for me, I am vnwyse: howe maye I then speake of theese thynges wherof thou askest me? Then sayde he vnto me: lyke as thou canste do none of theese thynges that I haue spoken of, euen so canste thou not fynde oute my iudgement, or in the ende, the loue that I haue promysed vnto my people. And I sayde: Beholde: O LORD, yet arte thou nye vnto theym that haue no ende: and what shal they do, that haue bene before me, or me that be nowe, or they that shall come after vs? And he sayde vnto me: I wyll speken my iudgemente vnto a ryuer. Lyke as there is no slacknesse of the laste, euen so is there no swyftenesse of the fyrste. So I aunswered and sayde: couldest thou not make those (that haue bene made, and be nowe, and that are for to come) in one, that thou myghtest shewe thy iudgemente the sooner? Then aunswered he me, and sayde: The creature maye not haste aboue the maker, nether maye the worlde holde them at once, that shall be created. And I sayde: Howe haste thou sayde then vnto thy seruaunt, that thou liuing maker, haste made the creature lyuinge at once, and the creature bare it? euen so myghte it nowe also, beare them that be present at once.

And he sayde vnto me: Aske the chyldebed of a woman, and saye vnto her: If thou bryngest forthe chyldren. why doest thou it not together, but one after another. Praye her therefore, to bryngе forthe ten children at once. And I sayde: she can not, but muste do it one after another. Then sayde he vnto me: Euen so haue I geuen a childebed vnto the earthe, for those that be sowen vpon it by processe of tyme. For lyke as a younge chylde maye not bryngе forthe thynges that belonge to the aged: euen so haue I ordeyned the worlde which I made. And I asked, and sayde: Seynge thou haste nowe geuen me a waye, I will speake before thee: for oure mother of whom thou hast tolde me, is yet yong, and nowe she draweth nye vnto age. He aunswered me, and sayde: Aske a woman that beareth chyldren, and the shall tell thee. Say vnto her: Wherfore are not they (whō thou haste nowe brought forth) lyke those that were before thee, but lesse of stature? And she shal answere thee: They that be borne in the youth of strength are of one fashion, and they that be borne in the tyme of age, (when the childhode fayleth) are otherwise. Consider nowe thy selfe, howe that ye are lesse of stature then those that were before you, & soore they that come after you, lesse then ye, as the creatures, whiche now begynne to be old, and haue passed ouer the strength of youth. Then sayd I: lord I beseche, yf I haue founde fauoure in thy sight, shewe thy seruaunte, by whome doest thou viset thy creature?

¶ AND he sayd vnto me: In the begynning, when the grounde was made: before the worlde stode, or euer the windes blewe, before it thundred & lightened, or euer the foundacions of paradise were layed, before the fayre flowres were sene, or euer the mouable powers were stablished, before the innumerable multitude of angels were gathered together, or euer the highnesses of the ayre were lifted vp, afore the measures of the firmamēt were named, or euer the chimneys in Sion were hote, & or the presēt yeres were sought out, and euer the innencyons of them, that nowe synne, were put aside, before they were sealed, that nowe gather fayth for a treasure: then dyd I consyder and ponder all these thynges, and they all were made thorowe me, and thorowe none other: By me also they be ended, and by none other. The answered, & I said: which shalbe the parting a sunder of the tymes? Or whē shalbe the ende of the.i, & the begynning of that foloweth? And he sayd vnto me: From Abraham vnto Isaac, when Jacob and Esau were borne of hym, Jacobs hande helde fyrst the heele of Esau: For Esau is the ende of thys worlde, and Jacob is the begynnynge of it that foloweth.

The hande of man betwyxte the heele and the hande. Other question (Esdras) aske thou not. I answered then, and sayde: O Lorde, Lorde, yf I haue founde fauoure in thy sight, I beseche the shew thy seruaunte the ende of thy tokens, whereof thou shewedest me part the last nyght. So he answered, & sayd vnto me: Stande vp vpon thy fete, & heare the perfecte voyce & sounde. There shall come a greate motion, but the place wher thou standest shal not be moued. And therfore, when thou hearest the wordes, be not afrayed: for of the ende shal the worde, and foundacyon of the earthe be vnderstande. And why: The worde therof trembleth and quaketh, for he knoweth, that it must be chaunged at the ende. And it happeneth, that when I had hearde it. I stode vp vpon my fete, and herkened: and beholde, there was a voyce that spake, and the sounde of it, was lyke the sounde of many waters, and it sayde: Beholde, the dayes come, that I wyll begynne to drawe nye, and to visit them that dwell vpon earthe, and wyll begynne to make inquicision of them, what they be that haue hurte equite with vnrighteousnes. and when the lowe estate of Sion shall be fulfylled: And when the worlde, that shall vanyshe awaye, shall be vnsealed, then wyll I doe these tokens. The bokes shall be opened before the firmamente, and they shal see all together, and the chyldren of a yeare olde shal speake with theyr voyces: the women wyth chylde, shall bringe forth vntimelye chyldren of thre or foure monethes olde, and they shall lyue, and be rayled vp: And sodenlye shall the sowen places appeare as the vnsowen, the full storehouses shall sodenlye be founde emptye, and the trompet shall geue a sounde, whiche when euerye man heareth, they shal be haskelye afeared. * At that tyme shall frendes fyghte one agaynste another lyke enemyes, and the earthe shall stande in feare with them. The springes of the welles shall stande styll, and in thre houres they shall not renne. Whosoeuer remayneth from all these thynges that I haue tolde the, shal escape, and see my saluacion, and the ende of youre worlde. And the men that haue receaued, shal se it, they that haue not tasted deathe frome their birthe: and the heaerte of the indwellers shalbe chaunged, and turned into another meanynge: For euyll shalbe putte oute, and discepte shalbe quenched. As for fayth, it shall florysche, corruption shall be ouercome: And the trueth, whyche hathe bene so longe withoute fruite, shalbe declared. And it happeneth, when he talcketh with me, that I loked demurely vpon hym, before whome I stode, and these wordes, sayd he vnto me: I am come to shewe thee, the tyme of the nyghte for to come.

Matth.7 & Mat.10a

If thou wylt praye yet more, and fast seuen dayes a gayne. I shal tell the more thynges, and greater then before: For thy voyce is hearde before the hieth: for why? the mightye hathe sene thy righteous dealynge, he hathe sene also thy chastyte, whyche thou hast had euer sence thy youth: and therfore hath he sente me to shewe the al these thinges, and to saye vnto the: Be of good comforte, and feare not, and haste not wyth the

tymes

tymes that are paste to thynke vayne thinges, and make not hast of the latter tymes. And it happened after thys, that I wepte agayne, & fasted seuen dayes in lyke maner, that I myghte fulfyll the thre wekes, which he told me. In the eyghte nyght was my heart vered within me agayne, & I beganne to speake before the Hyest, for my spirite was greatlye set on fyre, & my soule was in distresse, and I sayde: O Lorde, thou spakest vnto thy creature from the begynnynge (euen the fyrste daye) and saydest.

Gen.1.a. *Let heauen and earthe be made, and thy worde was a perfecte worcke. And thē was there the spirite, and the darcknesses were yet on euery syde, and silence: there was no mans voyce as yet from the. Then cōmaundedst thou a fayre lyght to come forth oute of thy treasures, that thy woorcke myghte appeare and be sene. Vpon the seconde day thou madest the spirite of the firmament, & commaundedst it to parte a sundre, and to make a deuision betwyxte the waters, that the one parte myghte remayne aboue: And the other beneth. Vpon the thyrd day thou bzoughtest to passe, that the waters were gathered in the seuenth parte of the earthe: fyue partes haste thou dryed vp, and kepte them, to the intent that men might sow and occupye husbandry therin. As soone as thy worde went forth, the woorcke was made. For immediatly ther was greate & innumerable fruite, and manye diuerse pleasures & desires of temptacion, floures of chaungeable colowre and smelle, and thys was done the thyrde day. * Vpon the fourth day thou commaundedst that the sunne shoulde geue hys shyne, and the moone her lyghte: the starres dydest thou set in order, * & gauest them a charge: to do seruyce euen vnto man, that was for to be made. Vpon the fifte daye thou saydest vnto the seuenth parte (where the * waters were gathered) that they shoulde bzynge forth diuerse beastes, foules, and fyshes. And so it came to passe, that the domme waters, and without soule, brought forth lyuyng beastes, at the commaundemente of God, that all people myghte prayse thy wonderous worckes. Then didest thou preserue two soules, the one thou calledest Enoch, and the other Leuiathan, and dydest separate the one frome the other: for the seuenth parte (namelye, where the water was gathered together) myght not holde them bothe. Vnto Enoch thou gauest one parte, whiche was dryed vp the thyrde daye, that he shoulde dwell in the same parte, wherein are a thousande hylles. But vnto Leuiathā thou gauest the seuenth parte, namely the moyst, and haste kepte him to deuoure what thou wilte, and when. Vpon the fyrst daye thou gauest commaundemente vnto the earthe, that before the, it shoulde bzynge forth beastes, cattell, and al that crepe, and beslydes this) Adam also, whome thou madest Lorde of all thy creatures. Of hym come we all, and the people also, whome thou haste chosen specially vnto thy selfe. All thys haue I sayde nowe and spoken before the, that I myght shewe howe that the worlde is made for oure sakes. As for the other people, whyche also come of Adam, thou haste sayde that they are nothynge, but be lyke a spitle, and haste lykened the haboundaunce of them vnto a dzoppe (that falleth) frome the rofe of the house. And nowe, O LORDE, the heathen, which haue euer bene reputed as nothyng, haue begonne to be lordes ouer vs, & to deuoure vs: but we thy people (whō thou hast called the fyrst bozne, thy onely begotten, and thy feruente louer) are geuen into their handes and power. If the worlde nowe be made for oure sakes, why haue we not the inheritaunce in possession wyth the worlde? How longe shal this indure?

AND it happened after that I hadde spokē out these wordes, ther was sēt vnto me an angell, whiche had bene by me also the nyghtes afore, & he sayde vnto me: Vp Eldras, and heare the woordes that I am come to tell the. And I sayde: speake on, Lorde my God. Then sayde he vnto me. The sea is sette in a wyde place, that it myght be deape and greate: But the entraunce is narowe, and smalle lyke a ryuer. For who woulde goe into the sea, to loke vpon it, and to rule it? If he wente not thorowe the narowe, howe myghte he come into the bzoade? Item another: A citye is buylded, and sette vpon a bzoade felde, and is full of all goodes, the entraunce is narowe, and sodayne, lyke as yf there were a fire at the eyghte hande, and a depe water at the left, and as it were onely one strayte pathe betwixte them bothe, so smal, that ther could but one man go there. If thys citye were nowe geuen to an heyre, and he neuer wente thorowe the parelous waye, howe woulde he receaue hys inheritaunce? And I sayde: It is so Lorde. Then sayde he: Euen so is Israell also a porcyon. And why? for theyr sakes haue I made the worlde: and when Adam transgressed my statutes, then was the thynge iudged that was done. Then were the entraunces of the worlde made narowe, full of sorowe and trauayle. They are but fewe and cupl, full of perelles and laboure. For the entraunces of the fore world, were wyde and sure, and bzought immortal fruite. If they

nowe whyche are entred into this worlde, maye not comprehende theſe ſtrayte and bayne thynges, much leſſe maye they comprehende & vnderſtande the ſecret thiges. Why dyſquyeteſt thou thy ſelfe then, ſeinge thou art but a corruptible mā? And what wouldeſt thou knowe, where as thou art but mortal? And why haſt thou not receaued into thyne heart the thynge that is for to come, but that is preſente? Then Deu. 8.a B ſayde I: O Lorde Lorde, * thou haſte ordeyned in the lawe, that the ryghteous ſhoulde inherete theſe thynges, but that the vnfaythfull and vngodlye ſhoulde perysche. Neuertheleſſe, the ryghteous ſhall ſuffre ſtraite thinges, and hope for wide: for they that haue lyued vngodly and ſuffred ſtraite thinges ſhall not ſe the wyde. And he ſaid vnto me: There is no iudge aboue GOD, and none that hath vnderſtandynge aboue the hieſt. For there be many that periſche, becauſe they deſpyſe the law of God, that is ſet before them. For God hathe geuen ſtrayte commaundement to ſache as come, that they knowe what they do, and howe they ſhoulde lyue: and yf they kepte this, thei ſhould not be puniſhed. Neuertheleſſe, they were not obedient vnto him, but ſpake againſt him: imagined vaine thinges, and purpoſed to ſynne, and ſayd moreouer, that there was no God, and that God regarded it not. His wayes haue they not knowen, hys lawe haue they deſpyſed, and denyed his promyſes: in hys ſtatutes and ordynaunces haue they not bene faythfull and ſtedfaſte, and haue not perfourmed hys worckes. And therefore Eldras: vnto the full plentye: and to the emptye, emptynelle. Beholde, the tyme ſhall come, that theſe tokens, whyche I haue ſolde the, ſhal come to paſſe, and the bride ſhal appeare, and the earth that nowe palleth away, ſhalbe ſhewed: and who ſo euer is delyuered from the forſayde euels, ſhall ſe my wonders. For my ſonne Jeſus ſhalbe openlye declared, with thoſe that be with hym: and they that remayne, ſhall be merye in ſoule hundred yeares. After theſe ſame yeares ſhall my ſonne Chriſt dye, and al men that haue life, and the worlde ſhalbe turned into the olde ſylence ſeuen daies, lyke as in the fore iudgementes, ſo that no man ſhall remayne. And after ſeuen dayes, the worlde that yet awaked not, ſhalbe rayſed vp, and ſhall dye corrupte. And the earthe, ſhall reſtore thoſe that haue ſlepte in her, and ſo ſhall the duſte thoſe that dwel in ſylence, and the C ſecrete places ſhal delyuer thoſe that be cōmitted vnto them. And the moſt hieſt ſhall be openlye declared vpon the ſeate of iudgement, and all miſery ſhal vanyſh away, and longe ſuffeinge ſhalbe gathered togeather. But the iudgement ſhal continne, the trueth ſhal remayne, and fayth ſhall ware ſtronge, the worcke ſhall folowe, and the rewarde ſhalbe ſhewed: the ryghteouſnelle ſhall watche, and the vnryghteouſnelles ſhall beare no rule. Then ſayde I: * Abraham prayed firſt for the Sodomites, + & Moſes for the fathers that ſynned in the wyldernelle, and he that came after hym for Iſrael, in the tyme of Achas and Samuel: and * Dauid for the deſtruccyon + and Salomon for them that came into the Sanctuarye, * and Helyas for thoſe that receaued rayne. and for the deade, that he myghe lyue, and Ezechias for the people in the tyme of Sennacherib: and dyuerſe other in lyke maner, whyche haue prayed for many. Euen ſo nowe, ſeynge the corrupt is growen vp, and wyckednes increaſed, and the ryghteous haue prayed for the vngodlye, wherfore ſhall it not be ſo nowe alſo?

He anſwered me, and ſayde: This preſente worlde is not the ende, there remayneth muche honoure in it, therefore haue they prayed for the weake. But the daie of dome ſhalbe the ende of this tyme, & the begynnynge of the immortalite for to come, when in all corruption banyſhed, all bolupteouſnes is louſed, al myſbeleue taken awaye, righteouſnes growen, and the berye ſpryng vp. Then ſhal no man be able to ſaue hym that is deſtroyed, nor to oppreſſe hym that hathe gotten the victorye. I aunſwered then, and ſayde: This is my fyrſte and laſt ſayinge: that it had bene better, not to haue geuen the earthe vnto Adam: or els when it was geuen hym, to kepe hym that he ſhoulde not ſynne. For what profyt is it for men nowe in this preſente tyme to lyue in heynes, and after death to loke for punyſhement, O thou Adam, what haſt thou done? For thoughe it was thou that ſynned, thou artenot fallen alone, but we all that come of the. For what profyt is it vnto vs, yf there be promyſed vs an immortall tyme, where as we medle with deadlye worckes? and that there is promyſed vs an euerlaſtinge hope, where as oure ſelues are euell and bayne, and that there are lated vp for vs dwellynges of healthe and fredome, where as we haue lyued euel, and that the worſhyppe of the hyeſt is kepte to defende them, whiche haue led a patiente lyfe, where as we haue walked in the moſte wycked wayes of al? And that there ſhalbe ſhewed a paradyſe, whoſe frute endureth for euer, wherein is fredome and medicine, where as we ſhall not go in, for we haue shal shyne above the starres, where as our faces shalbe blacke and darcke? For whyle we lined and dyd unryghteously, we considered not that we shoulde suffre therefore after deathe? Then answered he me, and sayde: This is the consideracion & thought of the batayle, whyche manne hathe upon earth: That yf he be overcome, he shall suffre as thou haste sayde. But yf he gette the victorye, he shall receaue the thynge that I saye. For thys is the lyfe, whereof Moses spake unto the people, whyle he lyned, sayinge: * Chose the lyfe that thou mayest lyue. Neuertheleſſe, they beleued hym not, neyther the Prophetes after him. No, nor me, which haue spoken unto them that heupnes shoulde not reache unto them to their destructiō, lyke as ioy is for to come ouer those that haue suffred thē selues to be enfourmed in saluacion. I answered then, & sayd: I know lorde, that the hyest is mercyful, in that he hath mercy upon them, whyche are not yet in the worlde, and upō those also that walcke in hys lawe: and that * he is pacient and longe sufferynge towarde those that haue synned in their worckes, and that he is liberall to geue where as it requireth: And that he is of greate mercye, for he multiplied his louynge kyndnes towarde those that are presente, & that are past, & to them which are for to come. For if he multiplied not his mercyes, the worlde shall not be made liuinge, with those that dwel therein. He geueth also, for yf he gaue not of hys goodneſſe, that they whyche haue done cupill, myghte be eased frome theyr wyckednelle, the ten thousande parte of menne shoulde not be made lyuynge.

And yf the iudge forgaue not those that be healed wyth his worde, and yf he wolde destroye the multytude that styueth, there shulde be very few lefte in an innumerable multytude.

Rom. 2. a

A And he answered me, saying: the most hyest made this world for many, but the worlde to come for few. I wil tel the a similitude Esdras: as whē thou askest the earth, it shal say unto the, that it giueth much molde, wherof earthē vessels are made, but litle of it that golde cometh of. Euen so is it with the worke of thys world. * There be many created, but fewe shalbe preserued. Then answered I, & sayd: then swalowe up the wil, thou soule, & deuour the understādyng, for thou arte agreed to herken and to geue care, and wyllynge to prophecye: For thou haſt no longer space geuē the, but only to lyue, O Lorde, wylt thou not geue thy seruaunte leaue, that we maye praye before thee, and that thou mayeſt geue sede unto oure hearte, and buylde oure understandynge, that there maye come frupte of it: And that euery one, whych is corrupte, and beareth the state and place of a manne, may lyue? For thou arte alone, and we all are one worckemanshyppe of thy handes, lyke as thou haste sayde: and lyke as the bodye is fashioned nowe in the mothers wombe, and thou geueſt the membres, and thy creature is preserued in fyre and water: and nyne monethes doeth thy worcke suffre thy creature, whyche is fashioned in her: but the thynge that preserued, and it that is preserued, shall bothe be kepte together: And when tyme is, the wombe delyuereth the thynge that is kepte and growen in her. For thou haste commaunded the breastes to geue mylche unto the fruite, that the thynge whiche is created and fashyoned, maye be norysshed for a tyme: and when thou dispoſeſt and ordreſt it with thy mercye, bryngeſt it up with thy ryghteouſnes, nurtureſt it in thy lawe, and reformeſt it wyth thy understandynge, mortifyeſt it as thy creature, and maketh it lyuynge as thy worcke. Seyng then that thou destroyedeſt him, which with so great laboures is created and fashyoned thorowe thy commaundemente, thou couldeſt lyghtly ordeyne also, that the thinges whicheis made, myghte be preserued. And this I speake nowe of all men in generall: as thou knoweſte, but of thy people, for whose sake I am sorye, and of thy inheryteraunce: for whose cause I mourne, and of Israell, for whome I am wofull: and for Jacob, for whose sake I am greued, therefore begynne I to praye before the, for my seife and for them, for I see the fall of vs, euen of vs that dwell upon earthe. But I haue hearde the swiftneſſe of the iudge whiche is to come: therfore heare my voyce, and understande my woordes, and I shall speake before thee. Thys is the begynnynge of the woordes of Eldras, before he was receaued: O LORDE, thou that dwelleſt in euerlastynguelle, whose eyes are lyfte up in the ayre, whose sloole is exceadynge hye, whose glorye and maieſtye maye not be comprehended, before whome the hooſtes of heauen stande wyth trembynge, whoſe keppynge is turned in wynde and fyre, whoſe woorde is true, whoſe talkynge is stedfaſt, whoſe commaundemente is stronge, whoſe ordynaunce is fearefull, whoſe lohe dryeth up the depthes, whoſe wrathe maketh the mountaynes to melte awaye, and whoſe trueth beareth witnes: O heare the prayer of thy seruaunte, and

marke with thyne eares the peticion of thy creature. For whyle I lyue, I wil speake, and so longe as I haue vnderstandynge, I wyll aunswere. O loke not vpon the synnes of thy people, whiche serue in the truth. Haue no respecte vnto the wycked studies of the heathen, but to the desyre of those that hath kept thy testimonies with sorowes. Thincke not vpon those that do walke faynedlye before the, but vpon them, whyche do feare thee. Let it not be thy wyll to destroye them, whyche haue had beastlye maners, but to loke vpon them that haue clearlye taught thy lawe. Take thou no indignacion at them, whiche are worse then beastes: but loue thē, that alway haue put theyr trust in thy righteousnesse and glorye: for we and oure fathers haue al the same syckenes and C dysease, but because of oure synnes thou shalte be called mercyfull. For yf thou haste mercye vpon vs, thou shalte be called mercyfull, where as we haue no workes of righteousnes: for the righteous whiche haue laied vp many good workes together, shall oute of theyr dedes receaue rewarde. For what is man, that thou shouldest take displeasure at him? Or what is the corrupptible & mortal generacio, that thou shouldest 2.par.6. be so roughe towarde him? For of a truth 1.Joh.1.b there is no man among them that be borne, but he hathe dealte wyckedlye: and amonge the faythful there is none, whiche hath not done amisse. For in this (O Lord) thy righteousnes and thy goodnes shalbe praysed and declared, if thou be merciful vnto thē, which are not rich in good workes. Then answered he me and sayde: Some thynges haste thou spoken a right, and accordynge vnto thy wordes it shalbe. For I wil not bereue consydre the workes of them, whiche haue synned before death, before the iudge-Gen.4.a. mente, before destruccion, but * I wyll reioyse ouer the worcke and thoughte of the righteouse. I wyl remembre also the pilgremage, the holy makig and the rewarde. Lyke as I haue spoken now, so shall it come to passe. For as the husbande man soweth muche sede vpon the grounde, and planteth many trees, and yet alwaye the thyng that is sowen or planted, is not all kepte safe, neither dothe it all take rote: Euen so is it of them that are sowen in the worlde, they shall not all be preserued. I answered then and sayde: If I haue founde grace, then let me speake. Lyke as the husbande mans sede perisheth, yf it receaue not raine in due season, or yf there come to muche rayne vpon it: Euen so perisheth man also, whiche is created with thy handes, and is lyke vnto thine owne ymage & to thy selfe, for whose sake thou haste made al thynges, and likened him vnto the husbande mans sede. Be not wroth at vs, O Lord, but spare thy people, and haue mercye vpon thyne owne inheritaunce: O be merciful vnto thy creature. Then answered he me, and sayde: Thinges presente are for the presente, and thinges to come, for suche as be to come. For thou lackest yet muche, seynge thou mayest loue my creature aboue me: I haue ofte tymes drawen nye vnto the, but neuer to the vnrighteous. In this also thou arte maruelous before the hiest in that thou haste humbled thy selfe, as it becommeth the, and haste not regarded thyne owne selfe, that thou arte had in suche honoure amonge the righteous. Therfore shall great wretchednes and miserye come vpon them, that in the latter tyme shall dwel in the worlde, because they haue walked in grea e nyde. But vnderstāde thou for thy selfe, and seke oute glorie for suche as be lyke the: for vnto you is paradyse opened, the tree of lyfe is planted, the tyme to come is prepared, plēteousnes made ready, a citye is buylded for you, and a rest is prepared: yea, perfecte goodnes and wysedome. The rote of euell is marked from you, and into hel flyeth corrupcion in forgetfulnes. Sorowes are banyshed awaye, and in the ende is shewed the treasure of immortalytie. And therfore aske thou no more questyons concernynge the multytude of them that perysshe. For they haue taken lybertye: despysed the hiest, thoughte scorne of hys lawe, and forsaken hys wayes. Moreouer, they haue troden downe hys righteouse, and * said psa.14.a in theyr hearte, that there is no GOD: yea, and that wyttynglye, for they dye. For lyke as the thynge that I haue spoken of, is made readye for you: Euen so is thyrste and payne prepared for them. For it was not hys wyl that men should come to naughte, but they whiche be created, haue defyled the name of hym, that made them, & are vnthanckful vnto hym, whyche prepared lyfe for them. And therefore is my iudgemente nowe at hande. These thinges haue I not shewed vnto all men, but vnto fewe, namelye vnto thee, and to suche as be lyke the. Then answered I and sayd: Beholde, O Lorde, nowe haste thou shewed me the multitude of the tokens, which thou wylte begynne to do at the laste: but at what tyme and when, thou haste not shewed me.

a HE answered me the, & sayd: Measure thou the time diligently in it selfe, whē thou seyst the one part of the tokens come to passe, whiche I haue tolde the before: so shalt thou vnderstande, that it is the very same tyme wherin the hyest will begyn to visit the world, which he made. And whē ther shalbe sene an earthquake & vprore of the people in the world, the shalt thou wel vnderstande, that the moste hyest spake of those thinges, frō the dayes that were before the, euen frō the begynnynge. For lyke as all that is made in the worlde hath a begynnyng and ende, and the ende is manyfest: Euen so the tymes also of the hyest haue playne beginninges in wonders and sygnes, and the ende in working, and in tokens. And euery one that shalbe saued, and shall be able to escape by hys workes and by fayth, wherein ye haue beleued, shall be preserued frome the sayde parels: and shall see my sauiour in my lande, and within my borders, for I haue halowed me frome the worlde. Then shall they be in carefulnesse, whiche now haue abused my wayes: And they that haue cast them out dispytefullye, shal dwel in paynes. For suche as in theyr lyfe haue receaued benefites, and haue not knowen me, and they that haue abhorred my lawe, whyle they had yet fredome, and when they hadde yet open leasure of amendement and conuersion, and vnderstode not but dispysed it: the same muste know it after death in paine. And therfore, be thou no more careful howe the vngodly shalbe punished, and howe the righteous shall be sab ued, and whose the world is, and for whom the worlde, and when it is. Then answered 4.Esd 8 b I, and sayde: * I haue talked before, and nowe I speake, & wyll speake also here after, that there be many moe of them, which perysh, then shalbe saued, like as the flouds is greater then the droppes. And he answered me, sayinge: like as the felde is, so is also the sede: as the floures be, so are the colours also: suche as the workman is, suche is also the worke: And as the husbande mā is him selfe, suche is his husbandry also, for it was the tyme of the worlde. And when I prepared for them that are nowe, or euer the worlde was made, wherein they shulde dwell, then was there no man that wythstode me. Nowe when euerye one was, and the maker also in the worlde, which is now prepared, and the moneth that ceased not, and the lawe, which is vnsearcheable, their maners were corrupt. So I considred the worlde: and beholde, there was parel, because of the thoughtes that were come into it. And I sawe, and spared them greatly and haue kepte me a wonderye of the grapes, and a plant from amonge manye generacions. Let the multitude perysh the, whiche are growen by in vayne, and lette my grape and mynedery be kept: euen my plāe, for with great laboure haue I made it by. Neuertheles, yf thou wylte take vpon the yet seuen dayes mo (but thou shalt not fast in them) goe thy waye then into the felde of floures, where no house is buylded, and eate onelye of the floures of the felde, taste not fleache, drinke no wine, but eate floures onely. Praye vnto the hyest continuallye, so wyl I come, and talke with thee. So I c went my waye, & came into the felde which is called Ardath (like as he commaunded me) and there I sate amonge the flowres, and did eate of the herbes of the felde, and the meate of the same satisfyed me.
After seuen dayes, I sate vpon the grasse, & my hearte was vexed within me, lyke as afore: and I opened my mouth, and beganne to talcke before the hyest, and sayde: O Lorde: thou that shewest thy selfe vnto vs, * thou hast declared and opened thy selfe Exr.19.d vnto oure fathers in the wyldernes, in a and.24.a place where no man dwelleth, in a baren Deu.4.b place, when they came oute of Egypte, and thou spakest, sayinge: heare me, O Israell, and marche my wordes: thou sedest of Jacob: Beholde, I sowe my lawe in you, and it shal bryngе fruite in you, and ye shall be honoured in it for euer. For oure fathers whiche receaued the law, kepte it not, and obserued not thyne ordinaunces and statutes, and the fruite of thy lawe, was not declared: for it mighte not, for why? It was d thyne. * For they that receaued it, perished Deu.32.e because they kept not the thynge that was sowen in them. It is a custome when the grounde receaueth sede, or the sea a ship, or a bessel meate and drynche, that when it perisheth, or is broke wherin a thig is sowē, or wherin any thing is put: the thinges also perysh, and are broken, which are sowē or put therin. But vnto vs it hath not hapd pened so: For we that haue receaued the lawe, perysh in synne, and our heart, which also receaued the lawe: not withstandynge * the law perysheth not, but remayneth in Esa.40.a his labour. And when I considered these 2.Esm.2.a thinges in my heart after thys maner, I looked aboute me wyth myne eyes, and vpon the ryght syde. * I sawe a woman, whyche 4.Esd.ix mourned sore, made greate lamentacion, and wepte wyth loude voyce: Her clothes were rent in peces, and she had ashes vpon her heade. Then let I my thoughtes goe, that I was in, and turned me vnto her, and sayde. Wherefore wepest thou? Why arte thou so sore & discomforted? and she sayde vnto me: Sir, let me bewayle my selfe, and take

take yet moze sozowe: foz I am soze dexed in my minde, & bzoughte dexpe lowe. And I sayde vnto her: what apleth the? Oz who hath done anye thynge to the? tell me: She sayde: I haue bene vnfruitefull and baren, and haue had an husbande thyztye yeares. And these .xxx. yeares I doe nothynge els daye and nyghte and all houres, but make my prayer to the hyest. After thirtye yeares God heard de me thy handmayden, loked vpon my mesery, consydred my trouble, and gaue me a sonne, and I was glad of hym, so was my husbande also, & all my neyghboures, and we gaue greate honoure vnto the Mighty e. And I nozyshed him with great trauayle. So when he grewe vp, and came to the tyme, that he shoulde haue a wife, I made a feast.

A ¶ The .x. Chapter.

AFdit happened that when my sone went into his chaber, he fel doune, & died: the ouerthrew we al the lightes and al my neighbours rose vp to cõfoze me. The tok I my rest vnto the .ii. day at nyght: & whē they had all rested: that they might comfozte me, I rested and also rose vp by nyghte, and fled, and am come hyther into thys felde, as thou seyst: and am purposed not to come i the city, but to remaine here: and neither to eate noz drynche, but contynually to mourne and to fast, vntyll I dye. Then let I my meditacions and thoughtes fall, that I was in, and spake to her in displeasure: Thou foolysche woman, seyst thou not oure heupnes and mournyng, and what happeneth vnto vs? howe Syon oure mother is all woful and sozy, and howe she is cleane bzoughte downe and in miserye? seynge we be al now in heuinesse, and make oure mone (foz we be all sozowfull.) As foz the heupnes that thou takest, it is but foz one sonne. Demaunde the earthe, and she shal tell the, that it is she, whyche oughte (by reason) to mourne, foz the fall of so many e that growe vpon her. Foz from the begynnynge, all menne are bozne of her, and other shall come: And beholde, they walcke all most all into destruccion, and manye of them shalbe rooted oute. Who shoulde then (by reason) make moze mourning then she, that hathe loste so great a multytude? And not thou, whyche art sozye, but foz one. But yf thou wouldest saye vnto me: My mourning is not like the mourning of the earth, foz I haue loste the fruite of my body, whyche I bare wyth heuines: But the earthe is accozdynge to the maner of the earthe, and the present multytude goth agayne into her as it is come to passe. Then saye I vnto the: lyke as thou hast bozne with trauayle and sozowe; euen so the earthe also from the begynnynge geueth her frut vnto man, foz hym that made her. And therefoze withholde thy sozowe and heupnes by thy selfe * and loke what happeneth vnto the, bearet it strongelye. Foz yf thou iudgest the marke and ende of God to be ryghteous and good, and receauest hys councell in tyme, thou shalt be commended therin. Go thy waye then into the cytye, to thy husbande. And she sayde vnto me: that wyll I not do, I wyll not go into the cyty, but here wyll I dye. So I cõmuned moze wyth her, and sayde: Doe not so, but be counceled, and folow me: foz how many falles hath Sion? Be of good confozte because of the sozowe of Jerusalem, foz thou seyst that our sanctuary is layed waste, and our aulter broken, our temple destroyed, oure playnge of instrumentes and synginge layed downe, the thankesgeuyng put to silence, * our myrth is damshed away, and the light of our cãdlestycke is quenched, the arcke of the conenaunte is taken from vs, all oure holye thynges are defiled, and the name that is called vpon oure vs, is dishonozed: Oure children are put to shame, oure Pozestes are bzente, our Leuites are carped awaye into captimte, oure virgins are defiled, and oure wyues raupshed, oure righteous men spoyled, and our children destroyed, oure younge men are bzought e in bondage, and our stronge mozthyes are become weake: and Sion (whyche scale is the greatest of all) is lowled bp from her worshippe: Foz she is delyuered into the handes of them that hate vs. And therefoze, shake of thy great heuines, and putte awaye the multytude of sozowes: that the mpghtye maye be mercyful vnto the, and that the hyest maye geue the reste from thy laboure and trauayle. And it happened, that when I was talkynge with her, her face dyd shyne and glysster, so that I was afrayed of her, and mused what it mpghte be. And immediatlye the earthe oute a greate voyce, berye feareful, so that the earthe shoke at the noyse of the woman: and I looked, and beholde, the woman appeared vnto me nomoze: But there was a citye buylded, and a place was shewed from the grounde and foundacion. Then was I afrayed, and cried with a loude voyce, and sayd: Where is Uriel the aungell, * which came to me at the fyrste? Foz he hathe caused me to come in manye consyderacions and hye thoughtes, and myne ende is turned into corruptiõ, & my prayer to rebuke. And as I was speakynge these woozdes, he came vnto me, and loked vpon me, and I laye as one that had bene dead, and myne vnderstandyng was altered, and he toke me vp by the ryght hande, and conforted me, and sette me vpon my feete, and sayde vnto me: what ayleth thee? and why is thyne vnderstandyng vexed? and the vnderstandynge of thy hearte, and whereforе arte thou sorye? And I sayd: Because thou haste forsaken me: and I haue done * accordynge to thy wordes, I wente into the felde, and there haue I sene thinges that I am not able to expresse. He sayde vnto me: Stande vp, and be manly, and I shal geue the exhortacyon. Then said I: speake vnto me my Lorde, forsake me not, lest I dye in vayne: for I haue sene that I knewe not, and hearde that I do not knowe. Or shall my vnderstandynge be disceaued, and my mynde? But now I beseche thee, that thou wylte shewe thy seruaunte of thys wonder. He answered me then, and sayde: heare me, and I shall enfourme thee, and tell the wherefore thou arte afrayed, for the hyest hathe opened manye secrete thynges vnto thee. He hathe sene that thy waye is ryghte, and that thou takest sorowe contynually for thy people, and makest great lamentacion for Syon: and therefore vnderstande, the vision which thou sawest a litle whyle a go after this maner: Thou sawest a woman mourning, and thou hast conforted her: Neuertheleste, nowe sepst thou the vnkyndenesse of that woman no more, but thou thoughtest there was a cytie builded: and like as she tolde the of the fall of her sonne, so is thys the answere: The woman whome thou sawest, is Sion, and where as she tolde thee, that she hathe bene thirtie yeares vnfrutefull and baren, those are the .xxx. yeares, wherein there was no offeryng made in her. But after thyrtie yeares Salomon buylded her, and offred, and then bare the baren a sonne. And where as she tolde the: that she nourysched hym with labour, that was the dwellinge of Jerusalē. But where as she tolde the that her sonne dyed whan she came into her chamber, that is the fall of Jerusalē. And thou sawest her likenesse, how she mourned for her sonne: and what els happened vnto hee, I haue shewed the. And nowe God seeth, that thou art sorye in thy mynde, and suffrest frome thy herte for her, and so hathe he shewed the her clearnesse, and the fayrenesse of her bewtie. And therefore I bad the thee remayne in the felde wher no house is builded. For I knew that the Hyest would shewe this vnto the, therfore I commaunded the to go into the feld, where no foundacion nor building is. For in the place where the Hyest wil shew hys cytie, there shalbe no mans buildinge. And therfore feare not, and let not thine hert be afrayed, but go thy way in, and se the glorious and fayre buyldinge, and how great it is, and howe great thou thinckest it after the measure of thyne eyes, & then shalte thou heare as muche as thyne eares maye comprehende. For thou arte blessed above many other, and art called with the Hyest, as the fewe. But to morowe at nighte thou shalt remayne here, and so shall the Hyest shewe the visions of hye thynges, whiche he wil do vnto them, that dwel vpō earth in the last dates. So I slept the same nighte lyke as he commaunded me.

THen sawe I a dreame: and beholde, there came vp from the sea, an Aegle, which had .xii. winges, and thre heades: And I saw, & beholde, he spred his winges ouer all the earthe, and all the wyndes of the ayre blewe in theym, and so they were put together agayne. And I beheilde, & out of hys fethers there grew out other lytle contrarye fethers: the heades rested, the heade in the middest was greater then the other, yet rested it with the residue. Moreouer I saw, that the Aegle flew with his winges, and raygned vpon earth, and ouer all them that dwell vpon the earth: & I sawe that al thynges vnder heauen were subiect vnto him, & no man shake agaynst him, no not one creature vpon earth. I saw also that the Aegle stode vp vpon his clawes, & gaue a sounde with his fethers, and a voyce, sayinge after this maner: watche not al together, slepe euery man in his own place, & watche for a tyme, but let the heades be preserued at the last. Neuertheleste, I sawe that the voyce went not out of his heades, but frome the myddest of his bodye. And I numbred hys contrarye fethers: And beholde, there were eyghte of theym. And I loked, and beholde, vpon the ryghte side there arose one fether, and raygned ouer all the earthe. And it happened, that when it raygned, the ende of it came, and the place therof appeared no more. So the nexte folowynge stode vp, and raygned, and had greate tyme: and it happened, that when it raygned, the ende of it came also lyke as the firste; so that it appeared no more. Then came there a voyce vnto it, and sayde: Heare thou that haste kepte in the earthe so longe, thys I saye vnto the, before thou begynnest to appeare no more: There shall none after thee attayne vnto thy time. Then arose the thirde: and raygned as the other afore, and appered no more also. So wente it wyth all the residue one after another, so that euerye one raygned, and then appeared no more. Then I looked, and beholde, in processe of tyme the fethers that folowed

wed were set vp vpon the ryght syde, that they myghte rule also: and some of theim ruled, but wythin a whyle they appeared no moze: for some of them were set vp, but ruled not. After this I loked, & beholde, the twelue fethers appeared no moze: nor the two wynges: and there was no moze vpon the Aegles body, but two heades that reSted, and sixe fethers. Then sawe I also, that the sixe fethers were parted in two, and remayned vnder the heade, that was C vpon the ryght side. for the foure contynued in their place. So I loked, and beholde, they that were vnder the winges, thought to set vp them selues and to haue the rule. Then was there one set vp, but shortlye it appeared no moze, and the seconde was sooner awaye then the first.

And I beheld, and lo, they two thought also vp them selues to raygne: and when they so thoughte, beholde, there awaked one of the heades that were at rest, namely, it that was in the myddest, for that was the greatest of the two heades. And then I saw, that the two heades were fylled wyth him, and the head was turned wyth them, that were by hym, and dyd eate vp the two vnder wynges, that would haue raygned. But this head put the whole earth in feare, and bare rule in it, ouer al those that dwelt vpon earth with much laboure, & he had the gouernaunce of the worlde, ouer all the soules that haue bene. After this I looked, and beholde, the head that was in the middest sodenly appeared no moze, lyke as the wynges: then came the two heades, which ruled vpon earthe, and ouer those that dwelte therein. And I beheld, and loe, the heade vpon the right side, deuoured it that was vpon the lefte syde.

And I heard a voyce, whiche sayde vnto me: loke before the, and consyder the thing that thou seyst. Then I sawe, and beholde, as it were a lyon that roareth, renaynge hastely oute of the wod, and he sent out a mans voyce vnto the Aegle, & sayde: Heare thou; I will talke with the, and the Hyest shall saye vnto thee: Is it not thou that haste the dirtozy of the foure beastes, whom I made to raigne vpo earthe, and in D my worlde, and that the ende of their tymes might come thozowe them? And the fourth came, & ouerwanne all the beastes that were past, & had power ouer the world with great fearfulnesse, and ouer the whole compasse of the earthe wyth the most wycked labour, and so longe tyme dwelt he vpon the earth wyth dyssceate, and the earth hast thou iudged not with truth. For thou hast troubled the meke, thou haste hurt the peaceable and quiet, thou hast loued lyes, and destroyed the dwellynges of them that brought forth fruite, and hast cast down the walles of such as dyd the no harme. Therfore is thy wzongeous dealynge and blasphemye come vp vnto the Hyest: and thy pryde vnto the myghtie. The Hyest also hath loked vpon the pzoude times, and beholde, they are ended, and their abhominacions are fulfylled. And therefore appeare no moze thou Aegle, and thy hozrible winges, and thy wycked fethers, & thy vngracyous heades, and thy sinful clawes, and al thy vayne body: that the earth maye be refreshed, and come agayne to her selfe, when she is deliuered from thy violence, and that she may hope for the iudgement and mercy of him that made her.

¶ The .xii. Chaptey.

A And it happened whē the Lyō spake these wozdes vnto the Aegle, I saw, & behold, the head that afore had the vpperhande, appeared no moze: nether dyd iiij. winges appeare any moze, that came to him, & were set vp to raygne: & their king dome was smale and full of vprore. And I sawe, and beholde, they appeared no moze, and the whole body of the Aegle was brente, and the earth was in greate feare. Then I awaked oute of the traunce of my mynde, and from greate feare, and sayd vnto my spirite: Lo, this hast thou geuen me in that thou searchest out the wayes of the Hyest: lo, yet am I weery in my minde, and very weake in my spzite, and litle strength is there in me, for the greate feare that I receaued this nyght. Therfore wil I nowe beseche the Hyest, that he wyll confozte me vnto the ende: and I sayde, Lozde, Lozde, yf I haue founde grace before thy syghte, and yf I am iustified with the before many other, and yf my prayer be come vp before thy face, comfozte me then, and shewe me thy seruaunt the interpzetation and plaine difference of this hozrible sight, that thou mayest perfectly cōfozte my soule: for thou hast iudged me worthy, to shew me the last of tymes. And he sayd vnto me: thys is the interpzetacyon of this syghte. The Aegle whom thou sawest come vp from the sea, is the kingdome + whiche was sene in the vi- Wan. 7.8
sion of thy brother Daniel, but it was not erpounded vnto him, for nowe I declare it B vnto thee. Beholde, the dayes come, that there shal ryse vp a kyngdom vpon earth, and it shall be feared aboue all the kyngdomes that were before it. In the same kingdome shal twelue kinges raigne, one after another. For the seconde shall beginne to raygne, and shal haue moze tyme then the other twelue: and this do the twelue winges signifie, whiche thou sawest, As for the voyce

boyce that thake, and that thou saweſt go oute from the heades, but not from the body, it betokeneth, that after the time of the kyngdome there shal aryſe greate stirrynges, and it shal stande in parel of fallynge: neuertheles it shall not yet fall, but shalbe set into his begynnynge. And the eight vnderwinges which thou saweſt hange vnto the wynges of hym, betoken, that in him there shal aryſe eyght kynges, whoſe tyme shalbe but small, and theyr yeares swyfte, and two of them shall beare. But when the myddeſt tyme commeth, there shalbe foure kepte in the time, when his time beginneth to come, that it maye be ended, but two shalbe kepte vnto the ende. And where as thou saweſt three heades reſtynge, this is the interpretation. In hys laſte shal the Hyeſt raiſe vp three kingdomes, and call many agayne into them, and they shall haue the dominion of the earthe, and of thoſe that dwel therin, with much labour, aboue all thoſe that were before them. Therefore are they called the heades of the Aegle: for it is they that shall bryng forth his wyckednes againe, & that shall performe and fynyſhe his laſt. And where as thou saweſt, that the greate heade appered nomore, it sygnifyeth that one of them shall dye vpon his bed, and yet with payne, for the two that remaine, shalbe slaine with the sword. For the swearde of the one shall deuoure the other, but at the laſte, that he fall thoroowe the swearde hym ſelfe. And where as thou saweſt two vnderwynges vpon the heade, that is on the ryght syde, it signifieth that it is they, whome the Hyeſt hath kept vnto theyr ende: this is a small kyngdom, and full of trouble. The 2. yon whome thou saweſt ryſynge vp out of the wod, and roaringe, and ſpeakynge vnto the Aegle, and rebukinge hym for his vnrighteouſneſſe, is the wynde, whiche the Hyeſt hath kept for them, and for theyr wyckednesſe vnto the ende: he shall reproue them, and rent them a ſunder before them. For he shall ſet them ſyuynge before the iudgement, and shal rebuke them: for the reſydue of my people shall be delyuer with trouble, thoſe that be preſerued ouer myne endes: and he shall make them ioyfull vntyl the commynge of the daye of iudgemente, whereof I haue ſpoken vnto the from the begynnynge.

This is the dreame that thou saweſt: and this is the interpretacion. Thou onely hast bene mete to know the ſecret of the Hyeſt. Therfore wryte al theſe thynges that thou haſte sene in a booke, and hyde them, and teache them the wyſe in the people, whoſe hertes thou knoweſt may comprehende and kepe theſe ſecretes. But wayte thou here thy ſelfe yet ſeuen dayes mod, that it maye be ſhewed the, whatſoeuer it pleaſeth the Hyeſt to declare vnto the: and with that he wente hys waye. And when all the people perceaued, that the ſeuen dayes were paſt, and I not come agayne into the cytye, they gathered them all togethere from the leaſte vnto the moſte, and came vnto me, and ſayd: what haue we offended the: and what euel haue we done agaynſt the, that thou forſakeſt vs, and ſyttest here in this place? For of all people thou onely arte left vs, as a grape of the byne, and as a candell in a darcke place, and as an hauen and ſhyppe preſerued from the tempeſt. Haue we not els aduerſite enough, but thou muſt forſake vs? Were it not better for vs, that we had bene dyent with Sion? For we are not better then they that dyed there: & they wept with loude voyce. Then anſwered I them and ſayd: Be of good comfort O Iſrael, and be not heuy thou houſe of Jacob: for the Hyeſt hath you in remembraunce, & the mighty hath not forgotten you in the temptacion. As for me, I haue not forſaken you, neither am I departed fro you: but am come in to this place to pray, becauſe of the miſerye of Iſrael, that I might ſeke mercye for the lowe eſtate of youre Sanctuarye. And now go youre waye home euery man, and after theſe dayes wyll I come vnto you. So the people went their waye vnto the cityе, lyke as I commaunded them: but I remayned ſtyll in the felde ſeuen dayes, as the Aungel bad me, and did eate onely of the flowres of the felde, & had my meat of the herbes in thoſe dayes.

AND it happened after the ſeuē dayes, that I dreamed a dreame by nighte.

And beholde, there aroſe a wynde from the ſea, that it moued all the floudes therof. And I loked, and beholde: the man was ſtronge, and increaſed with the clowdes of heauen: and when he turned his countenaunce to conſidre, al the thinges trembled that were ſene vnder hym: and when the boyce went out of his mouth, al they dyent that heard him, lyke as the earthe when it feleth the fyre. After theſe I ſawe, and beholde, there was gathered together a multytude of men oute of numbre from the foure wyndes of the heauen, to fyghte agaynſte the man, that came oute from the ſea. And I loked, and beholde, he graued hym ſelfe a greate mountayne, and flewe vp vpon it. But I would haue ſene the borders or place, whereonte the hyll was grauen, and I coulde not. I ſawe after theſe, that all they whyche came to fyghte agaynſte hym, were ſore afrayed and yet

durste they fyghte. Neuertheles, when he sawe the fearsnes and violence of the people, he neuer lyfte vp hys hande, nor helde swearde, nor anye weapen: but onelye (as I sawe) he sente oute of hys mouthe as it hadde bene a blaste of fire, and oute of hys lyppes the wynde of the flamme: And oute of hys tonge he caste out sparkes and stormes, and they were all myxte together: the blaste of fire, the wynde of the flammes, and the great stormе, and fell wyth a ruche vpon the people, whyche was prepared to fyght, and dzente them vp euerychone: So that of the innumerable multytude there was nothynge sene, but onely duste & smoke. When I sawe thys, I was afrayed. Afterwarde sawe I the same manne come downe from the mountayne, and callyng vnto him another peaceable people: And there came muche people vnto hym: some were glaade, some were sozy, some of them were bounde. so that they were caried and dzought forth. Then was I syche thozowe greate feare, and I awaked, and sayde: thou haste shewed thy seruaunte all thy wonders frome the begynnynge, and hast counted me wozthy, that thou myghtest receaue my prayer: shewe me nowe yet the interpzetacyon of thys dzeame. For thus I conysder in my vnderstandynge: Woe vnto them that shall be lefte in those dayes, & muche mooze woe vnto them that are not lefte behynde: For they that were not lefte, were in heynes. Nowe vnderstaude I the thynges that are layed vp in the latter dayes, whyche shall happen vnto them, and to those that are not left behynde. Therefoze are they come into great parelles and many e necessyties, lyke as these dzeames declare. yet is it easter, that he whyche suffereth hurte, come in these, then to passe awaye as a cloude oute of the worlde, and not to se the thynges that shall happen in the laste. Then aunswered he me, and sayde. The interpzetacion of the sighte shal I shewe thee, and I will open vnto the, the thing that thou hast required. For thou haste spoken of them that are left behynde, and thys is the interpzetacyon. He that taketh awaye the parell in that tyme, hathe kept hym selfe. They that be fallen into harme, are suche as haue wozckes and layth vnto the mooste myghtye. Knowe thys therfoze, that they which be left behynde, are moze blessed, then they that be dead. Thys is the meanynge of the vision. Where as thou sawest a man commynge vp frome the depe of the sea, the same is he whome God the Lyest hath kept a greate season, whyche by hys owne selfe shall delyuer hys creature, and he shall ozdze them that are lefte behynde. And where as thou sawest that oute of hys mouth there came a blaste of wynde, fire and stormе, and howe that he lyfte vp neyther swearde nor weapen, but that the ruchinge in of him destroyed the whole multytude, that came to fight agaynste hym: it signifieth, that the dayes come, when God wyll delyuer them that are vpon earthe, and in a traunce of wynde shal he come vpon them, that dwel in the earthe. And one shall undertake to fight agaynst another, one city against another, one place agaynste another, * one people agaynste another, and one realme agaynste another. When thys commeth to passe, then shall the tokens come, that I shewed the before: and then shall my sonne be declared, whome thou sawest clyme vp as a man. And when all the people heare hys voyce, euerye man shall in their owne lande leaue the batayle that they haue one agaynst another, and an innumerable multitude shall be gathered together, as they that be willynge to come, and to ouercome him by fightyng. But he shal stande vpon the toppe of the mounte Sion. Neuertheles Sion shal come, and shalbe shewed, beyng prepared and duylded for all men, lyke as thou sawest the hyll grauen forth without any handes. But my sonne shal rebuke the people that are come, for their wyckednes, with the tempest, and for their euyll ymaginations: and their payne wherewith they shalbe punished, are lykened vnto the flame: And without anye laboure shall he destroye them, euen by the lawe, whyche is compared vnto the fire. And where as thou sawest that he gathered another peaceable people vnto hym: those are the ten tribes, whiche were caryed awaye prysoners oute of their owne lande, * in the tyme of Oseas the kynge, whome Salmanasar the kyng of Assiria toke prisonner, and caryed them ouer the water, and so came they into another lande. But they gaue them this councell, that they shoulde leaue the multitude of the heathen, and to goe forth into a farther countre, where neuer mankynd dwelte: that they myghte there kepe their statutes, whiche they neuer kepte in their owne lande. And so they entred in at the narowe passages of the water of Euphrates, & so God shewed tokens for them, * and helde styll the stoude tyll they were passed ouer, for thozowe the countre there was a great way, namely of a yere & a halfe iourney, for the same region is called Asareth. Then dwelt they there vntil the latter time: & when they come forthe agayne, the Lyest shal helde styll the springes of the streame agayne, that they may go thozowe, therfoze sawest thou the multytude with peace. And they that be lefte behinde of thy people, are thole that be founde within my border. Now whē he weltroyeth the multitude that is gathered together, he shal dedōbis people that remayne, & then shal he shewe them greate wonders. Then sayde I: O Lorde, Lorde, shewe me thys, wherefore haue I sene the man comminge vp from the depe of the sea? And he sayd vnto me: Lyke as thou canste neyther seke out nor knowe thele thynges that are in the depe of the sea, euen so mayest thou not se my son, or thole that be wyth hym, but in the time of the day. This is the interpretacīō of thedreame, which thou sawest, therfore, thou onelye arte here lightened, for thou hast forsaken thyne owne law, and applied thy diligence vnto myne, and 3.reg.3.a 2.Esd.9.7.a sought it. * Thy life hast thou ordred i wisdō, & hast called vnderstāding thy mother, and therfore haue I shewed the, the treasure of the hieh. After thre dayes I wyl shew the more, & talke with thee more at large: yea, heuye & wonderous thinges will I declare vnto the. Thē wente I forth into the felde, geuinge prayse and thankes greatlye vnto God, because of his wonders, whyche he did in time, and because he gouerneth the same, and suche as is in time, and there I sate thre dayes.

¶ VVon the thirde daye, I sat vnder an oke tre, thē cāe there a voice vnto me out of the bush, & sayd: Esdras, Esdras, & I sayde: here am I lorde, & stode vp vpon my fete. Then spake he vnto me: * in Exod.3.a the bushe dyd I appeare vnto Moses, & talked with him, when my people serued in Egipt. And I sent him, & led my people out of Egipt, & brought hym vpon the mount Sion, where I helde him by a longe season, and told him my wonderous workes, & shewed him the secretes of the times, & the ende, and commaunded him, sayinge: These wordes shalte thou declare, and not hyde theym. And nowe I saye vnto thee, that thou laye vp in thy heart the dreames that thou hast sene, and the interpretacions, which I haue shewed thee: For thou shalte be receaued of all, thou shalte be tourned and remayne with my councell, and with suche as be like thee, vntyll the tymes be ended. For the worlde hathe loste hys youthe, & the tymes begynne to waxe olde. For the tyme is deuided into twelue partes, and ten partes of it are gone all readye, and halfe of the tenth part: yet remayneth there, that whiche is after the halfe of the tenth parte. Therefore, prepare and ordre thy house, and reforme thy people: comforte suche of them as be in trouble: and tell nowe of the destruction: let go from thee mortal thoughtes: cast awaye the burthens of man: put of the weake nature: laye vp in some places the thoughtes that are moost heuye vnto the, and haste thee to flye frome these tymes: for suche euel and wyckednelle as thou haste nowe sene happen, shall they doe, yet muche worse. * For the weaker that the Mat.24.a and wyckednelle encreale, in them that dwell vpon earthe. For the truethis fledde farre awaye, and leasinge is harde at hande. For nowe hasteth the dilson to come, that thou haste sene. Then answered I before the, and sayde: Beholde Lorde, I wyll goe as thou haste commaunded me, and reforme the people whyche are present. But they that shalbe borne afterwarde, who wyl exhorte or rebuke theym? Thus the worlde is sette in darcknes: and they that dwel therein, are wythoute lyght: For thy lawe is hydded, because no man knoweth the thynges that are done of thee, or that shall be done. If I haue founde grace before the, sende the holye goost into me, and I shall wryte all that hathe bene done in the worlde sence the beginning, which was written in thy lawe, that men maye finde the path, and that they whiche wyl lyue in the latter dayes, maye lyue. And he answered me, sayinge: Goe thy waye, gather the people together, and saye vnto theym: that they seke thee not for fourtye dayes, ¶ but loke thou gather the manye bare trees, and take with thee Sarea, Dabria, Selemia, Ecanus, and Asiil, these fine, whyche are readye to wryte swyftlye, and come hyther, and I shall lyghte a candle of vnderstandynge in thyne heerte, whych shall not be putte oute, tyll the thynges be perfourmed, whiche thou shalte begynne to wryte. And then shalte thou declare some thinges openlye vnto the perfecte, and some thinges shalte thou shewe secretlye vnto the wyse. To morowe thys houre shalte thou beginne to wryte. Then wente I forthe (as he commaunded me) and gathered all the people togethet, and sayde: Heare these woordes, O Israell: Oure fathers at the begynnynge were straungers in Egypte, frome whence they were deliuered, and receaued the lawe of lyfe, * whi- Deu.4.b che they kept not, whyche ye also haue transgressed after them. Then was thys land and the lande of Sion parted amonge you by lot, to possesse. But youre fathers and ye your selues also haue done vnrighteoulnes, and haue not kepte the wayes whiche the Lorde commaunded you. And for so muche as he is a righteous iudge, be toke from you in tyme the thynge that he had genen you. And nowe are ye here and your brethren amonge you. Therefore yf so be that ye wyl subdue your owne understãdyng, and reforme your hearte, ye shall be kept alyue, and after deathe shall ye obteyne mercy. For after deathe shal the iudgement come, when we shal lyue agayne: and then shall the names of the righteous be manifest, and the workes of the ungodlye shall be declared. Let no man therfore, come now vnto me, nor aske anye question at me these fourtye dayes. So I tooke the fyue men (as he commaunded me) and we wente into the felde, and remayned there. The nexte daye Ezec. 3. a Apo. 10 b a voyce called me, sayinge: Esdras, ✠ open thy mouthe, and dryncke that I gene thee. Then I opened my mouthe, and beholde, he reached me a ful cuppe, whiche was full as it were with water, but the colour of it was lyke fyre. And I toke it and dranke. And when I had dronchen it, my heart had understandinge, and wysdome grew in my breste: for my spirite was kepte in remembraunce, and my mouthe was opened, and shut nomoore. The Hyest gaue vnderstandinge vnto the fyue men, that they wrote the hye thinges of the nighte, whiche they vnderstode not. But in the nyght they dyd eate bread: as for me, I spake in the daye, & helde not my tonge by night. In. xl. dayes, they wrote two hundred and foure bokes. And it happened when the fourtye dayes were fulfylled, that the Hyest spake, saying: The first that thou hast written, speake openly, the worthy and unworthy may reade it. But kepe the. lxx. laste, that thou mayest shewe onelye to suche as be wyse amonge thy people. For in theym is the sprynge of understandyng, the fountayne of wisdome, & the streame of knowledge. And I dyd so.

B Behold, speake thou in the eares of my people the woordes of the prophecye, whiche I wyll put in thy mouth, sayeth the lorde: & caused them to be written in a letter, for it is the truethe. Feare not the ymaginacions agaynste thee. Let not the vnfaithfulnes of the troubletthe, that speake agaynst the. For al the vnfaythfull shal dye in their vnfaythfulnesse. Beholde, sayeth the lorde: I wil bring plages vpō the worlde, the swerde, honger, deathe, & destruction, for wickednes hathe the hyper hande in al the earthe, & their shameful workes are fulfilled. Therefore sayeth the lorde: I wyll holde my tongue nomore vnto their wyckednesse, whiche they doe so ungodlye: neyther wyll I suffre them in the thynges, that they begin with al so wickedlye. Beholde, the innocent bloude of the troubled cryeth vnto me, and the soules of the righteous complayne continually, and therfore, sayeth the Lorde: I wyl surely auenge, and receaue vnto me. ✠ Beholde, my people is ledde as a flocke of shepe to be slayne, I wyl not suffre them nowe to dwel in Egypte, but wyll bringe them oute with a myghtye hande, and a stretched out arme, and smyte it with plages, as afore, and wyll destroye all the land of it. Egypte shal mourne, and the foundacions of it shalbe smitten with the plague & punishement, that god shal bringe vpon it. They that til the grounde, shal mourne: for their sedes shalbe destroied, thorow the blasting and hayle, and an horrible starre. Woe worthy the worlde & ẏ̄s that dwelt therein, for the swearde and their destruction drawe nye, and one people shall stande vp to fyghte agaynste another, and swardes in their handes. For men shall be vnstedfaste, and some shall doe violence vnto other: they shall not regarde theyr kyng and princes, the wayes of their dopinges and hãdeliges shalbe in their power. A mã shal desire to go into the citye, and shall not be able. For because of their pryde the cityes shalbe broughte in feare, the houses shall shake, and men shall be afrayde. A man shal haue no pitie vpon his neighbour, but one shall prouoke another vnto battayle to spoyle their goodes, because of the honger of bread, and because of the greate trouble. Beholde, I gather and call together all the kynges of the earthe, whyche are frome the vprisinge, from the Southe, from the East and Libanus to tourne vnto them, and reſtore the thynges that they haue genen them. Lyke as they do yet this daye vnto my cholen, so wyl I do also, and recompense theym in their bosome. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: My ryghte hande shal not spare the sinners, and my swearde shal not cesse ouer them, that shedde the innocent bloude vpon earthe. The feare is gone out from hys wrath, and hathe consumed the foundacions of the earthe, and the sinners lyke the strawe that is kyndled. Woe worthe them that synne, and kepe not my cõmandements, sayeth the Lorde: I wyl not spare them. Go youre way ye children from violence defile not my Sanctuary: for the Lorde knoweth all them that synne agaynste hym, and therefore delyuereth he them vnto dearthe & destruction: For nowe are the plages come vpon the worlde, and ye shal remayne in theym. For GOD shall not delyuer you, because ye haue synned agaynste hym. Beholde, an horrible vision commeth from the Earthe, wher ge-nerucions of Dragons shall come out, and the people of the Arabies with many charettes, and the multytude of them shalbe as the wynde vpon earthe, that all they which heare them ragynge in their wrath, maye feare, and be afrayed, and as the wylde bores oute of the wood, so shall they go oute, and with greate power shal they come, and stande fightynge with them and shall waste the porcion of the lande of the Assyrians. And then shall the Dragons haue the vpper hande, not remembrynge theyr byrthe, and shall turne about sweareynge together in greate powre, to persecute them. But these shalbe afrayed, and kepe silence at theyr power, and shall fle: and one oute of the lande of the Assyrians shall beleege them, and consume one of the, and in theyr hoost shall be feare and dreade, and strife amonge theyr kynges. Beholde, cloudes from the East, and fro the North, vnto the South, and they are verye horrible to loke vpon, full of wrathe and stormes. They shall smyte one vpon another, and they shall smyte at the greate starre vpon earthe, and theyr starre, and the bloude shalbe from the sweorde vnto the belye, and the smoke of man vnto the Camels lytter: And there shalbe a greate fearfulnes and tremblynge vpon earth, and they that se the wrathe shalbe afrayed, and a tremblynge shal come vpon them. And then shall there come greate raynes frome the South and from the North, and part fro the Weste, and from the stormye wynde, from the Easte, and shall shut them vp ageyne and the cloude whyche he rayseth vp in wrathe, and the starre to cause feare towarde the East and West winde, shalbe destroyed: and the greate cloudes shalbe lyfte vp and the myghtye cloudes ful of wrath, and the starre: that they maye make all the earthe afrayed and them that dwel therin, and that they maye powre oute ouer all places an horrible starre, fire and hayle, and flyinge sweardes, and manye waters: that all feldes maye be full, and all ryuers, and they shal breake downe the cities and walles, mountaynes, and hylles, al trees, wod, and the grasse of the medowes, and al their frute. And they shal go stedfast vnto Babilon, and make her afrayed, they shall come to her and beleege her: the starre and all wrathe shall they poure oute vpon her.

Then shal the dust and smoke go vp vnto the heauen, and all they that be about her shal bewayle her: & they that remayne vnder her, shall do seruyce vnto them that haue put her in feare. And thou Asia that comfortest thy selfe also vpon the hope of Babylon, and art a worshyp of her prison: wo be vnto the thou wretche, because thou hast made thy selfe lyke vnto her, and hast decked thy doughters in whoredome, that they might triumphe and please thy louers whyche haue alwaye desyred to commytte whoredom with the, thou hast folowed the abhominable ciepe in all her workes and inuencions. Therfore sayeth God: I wyll sende plages vpon the wyddowhode, pouertye, honger, warres, and pestylence, to waste thy houses wyth destruccio & death, and the glorie of thy power shall be dryed vp as a floure, when the heate ryseth that is sent ouer the: Thou shalte be lyke as a poore wyfe that is plaged and beaten of wemen: so that the myghtye and louer shal not be able to receaue the. Would I so hate the sayeth the Lorde? If thou haddest not alwaye stayne my chosen exaltynge the stroke of thy handes, and sayde ouer them death, when thou waste dyonchen: set forth the bewepe of thy countenaunce. The rewarde of thy whoredome shalbe recompensed the in thy bosome, therefore shalte thou receaue rewarde. Lyke as thou haste done vnto my chosen (sayeth the Lorde) euen so shall God do vnto the, and shall delyuer the into the plage. Thy chyldren shal die of honger, and thou shalte fall thorowe the sweorde. Thy cities shal be broken downe, and all thyne shall perysh with the sweorde in the felde. They that be in the mountaynes shall dye of honger, and eate their owne flesh, and dyncke theyr owne bloude for very honger of dreade and thirst of water. Thou vnhappie shalt come thorow the sea, and receaue plages agayne. In the passage they shal cast downe the stayne cyepe, and shall rote oute one parte of thy lande, and consume the porcio of thy glory. They shal treade the downe lyke stuble, and they shal be thy fire, & shal consume the: the cyptes and thy lande, thy wood and thy frutful trees shal they burne vp with the fyre. Thy children shal they cary away captiue, and loke what thou hast, they shall spoyle it, and marre the bewtye of thy face.

WO be vnto the Babilo and Asia, wo be vnto Egipte and Siria: gyrde youre selues with clothes of sacke & heare, & mourne youre for your children, be sory, for youre destruccion is at hande. A sweorde is sent vpon you, & who wyll turne it backe? A fire is kindled amonge you, and who wil quenche it? Plages are sente vnto you, and what is he that wyll dryue them awaye? Maye anye man dryue awaye an hongrie Lyon in the wode? Or may any man quench the fyre in stubble, whan it hath begonne to burne? Maye one turne againe the arowe, that is shot of a stronge archer. The myghtye Lorde sendeth the plages, and what is he that wil driue them awaye? The fyre is kyndled and gone forthe in hys wrath, and what is he that wil quenche it? He shall cast lyghtenynges, and who shal not feare? He shall thonder, and who shall not be afrayed? The Lorde shall threaten, and who shall not vtterly be beaten to poulder at hys presence? The earthe quaketh, and the foundacios therof: the sea aryseth vp with wawes from the depe, and the floudes of it are vnquiete, and the fishes therof also before the Lorde, and before the glorye of hys power. For stronge is hys ryghte hande that holdeth the bowe, hys arowes that he shooteth, are sharpe, and shall not mysse, when they begynne to be shot into the en-B des of the worlde. Beholde, the plages are sente, and shall not turne agayne, tyll they come vpon earthe. The fyre is kindled and shall not be put oute, tyl it consume the foundacions of the earthe. Lyke as an arowe whiche is shot of a myghty archer, returneth not backwarde: euen so the plages that shal be sente vpon earthe, shal not turne agayne. Wo is me, wo is me, who shal delyuer me in those daies? The beginnynge of sorowes and greate mournyng: the begynnynge of dearth and great death, the begynnynge of warres, and the powers shal stande in feare: the begynning of euels and they shall tremble euerye one. What shall I do in these thynges, when the plages come? Beholde, höger & plage, trouble and anguish are sent, as scourges for amendement. But for all these thynges they shal C not turne from theyr wickednes, nor be alwaye myndeful of the scourges. Beholde, bitayles shalbe so good cheape vpon earth, that they shall thinke them selues to be in good case: and eus then shal mischefe grow vpon earth, warres, dearth, and great dysquyetnes. For many of them that dwel vpon earth shal perish of hunger, & the other that escape the honger, shal the swearde strope: & the deade shalbe cast out as dong, and there shalbe no man to conforte them. For the earth shalbe wasted, and the cityes shalbe caste downe: there shalbe no mã left to til the earth, and to sowe it. The trees shal gene frute, and who shal plucke them of? & gather them? The grapes shal be ripe, and who shall treade them? For all places shalbe desolate of men, so that one mã shal desyre to se another, or to heare hys voyce. For of one whole citie there shalbe tẽ lefte, and two in the felde, which shal hid thẽselues in the thycke bushes, & in the clyftes of stones: lyke as when there remayne three or foure olyues vpon the olyue tree, or as when a vineyarde is gathered: there are lefte some grapes, of them that dylygently soughte thorowe the vineyarde. Euen so D in those dayes shall there be three or foure lefte for them that searche theyr houses with the swearde. And the earth shalbe left waste, and the feldes thereof shall waxe olde: and her wayes, and all her pathes shall growe full of thornes, because no mã shall trauayle there thorowe. The doughters shall mourne, haupnge no bridegromes: the wemẽ shal make lamentacis, haupnge no husbandes, theyr doughters shal mourne, haupnge no helpe of theyr bridegrome. In the warres shall they be destroyed, and their husbandes shall perysche of honger. O ye seruauntes of the Lorde, heare these thynges, and marcke them.

Beholde, the worde of the Lorde, O receaue it: beholde the plages draw nye, and are not slacke in tarynge. Lyke as a trauaylynge woman, whiche after the .ix. moneth trayneth forth a sonne, when the hour of the byrthe is come, an houre, two or three afore that the paynes come vpon her bodye, and when the chylde commeth to the byrthe, they earye not the twinckelynge of an eye: Euen so shall not the plages be slacke to come vpon earthe, and the worlde shall mourne, and sorowes shall come vpon it on euery syde. O my people, heare my worde, make you redye to the battayle: and in all euell be euen as pyl- i.Cor.7.a

Who so occupyeth marchaundyes, as he that wyneth not, and he that buyldeth, as he that shall not dwel therin: he that soweth, as one that shall not reape: he that twisteth the vineyarde, as he that shall not gather the grapes: they that marye, as they that

And they that occupye theyr marchaundice with robbery, howe longe decke they their cities, their houses, theyr possellios, & their persones? the more wyll I punysche them for their synnes, sayeth the Lorde. Lyke as an whore enuyeth an honeste woman, so shal righteousnes hate iniquitie, when she decketh her selfe, and shall accuse her to her face, when he commeth that defendeth, whiche shall make inquisicion for all synne vpon earthe. And therfore be not ye lyke therunto, nor to the workes therof: for or

or ether it be longe, inquyrye shalbe taken awaye oute of the earthe, and ryghteousnesse shall rayne amonge you. Let not the synner saye, that he hath not synned: for coles of fyre shall burne vpon hys heade, which sayeth before the Lord God, and his glorye: I haue not synned. Beholde, the Lorde knoweth all the workes of men, theyr imaginacions, theyr thoughtes and theyr heartes. * For he spake but the worde: let the earthe be made, and it was made: let the heauen be made, and it was made. In his worde were the starres made, and he knoweth the numbre of them. He searcheth the grounde of the depe, and the treasures therof: he hathe measured the sea, and what it containeth. He hathe shut the sea in the myddest of the waters, and with hys worde hathe he hanged the earthe vpon the waters. He spreadeth oute the heauen lyke a bawte, vpon the waters hathe he founded it. In the deserte and drye wylderne hath he made springes of water, and pooles vpon the toppe of the mountaynes, that the stonnes might powre downe from the stonye rockes to water the earthe. He made man, and put his heart in the myddest of the bodye, and gaue hym breth, lyfe, and vnderstandynge: yea, and the spyrryte of the Almyghtye God, which made all thynges, and hathe searched the grounde of all the secretes of the earthe. He knoweth youre ymaginations and inuencions, and what ye thinke when ye sin, and wolde hyde youre synnes. Therefore hathe the Lorde searched and soughte oute all youre workes, and he shall bewraye you al. And when your synnes are brought forthe, ye shalbe ashamed before men, and youre owne synnes shalbe youre accusers in that daye. What wyll ye do? Or howe wyll ye hyde youre synnes before God and hys Aungels? Beholde, God him selfe is the iudge, feare hym, leaue of from youre synnes, and forget youre vnryghteousnesses, and medle nomore with them: so shall God leade you forthe, and deliuer you frō all trouble. For beholde, the heate of a greate multytude is kyndled ouer you, and they shall take awaye certayne of you, and fede the yde with Idols: and they that consent vnto them, shalbe had in derisyon, laughed to scorne, and troden vnderfoote. For vnto the places there shalbe a place, and in the next cytyes a greate insurreccion vpon those that feare the Lorde. They shall be lyke mad men, they shall spare no man: they shall spoyle and waste suche as feare the Lorde, theyr goodes shall they take from them, and shutte them oute of theyr houses. Then shall it be knowne who are my choten, and they shall be tryed as the golde in the fyre. Heare, O ye my beloued, sayeth the Lorde: beholde, the dayes of trouble are at hande: but I wyll delyuer you from the same. Be not ye afrayed, disparye not, for God is your captayne. Whoso keepeth my commaundementes and precептes (sayeth the LORD God) let not youre synnes weye you downe, and let not youre vnryghteousnesse be lifte vp. Wo be vnto them that are subdued vnto their sinnes, and tangled in their wickednesse: lyke as a felde is hedged in with bushes, & the pathe therof couered with thornes, that no man may trauaile thorow: and so is he taken, and cast in the fyre & brente.

of her fathers handmaidens, namely, that she should haue had seuẽ husbãdes, which as soone as they were gone in vnto her, were slayne of the deuil called Asmadeus.
Therefore, when she reproued the mayden for her fawte, she answered her, sayinge: God let vs neuer se sonne nor doughter of thee more vpon earth, thou kyller of thy husbãdes. Wilte thou slaye me also, as thou

Sara into an hye chambre of her house, & the daies and three nyghtes she neither ate nor dranke, but continued in prayer, & besought God with teares, that he wolde de-

But whosoeuer loueth the, and feareth the a ryght, is sure of thys, that if his lyfe be tempted and proued, it standeth in the tryinge, and if he endure in pacience he shal haue a reward, and be hylye crowned: and yf he be in trouble, God (no doute) shall delyuer him: & if his life be in chastenynge, that he shal haue leaue to come vn to thy mercy. For thou hast no pleasure in oure dampnacyon: and why? after a storme thou makest the wether fayre and stylle: after wepping and howlinge thou geuest great ioye. Thy name, O God of Israell, be praysed for euer. At the same tyme were bothe their prayers hearde in the syghte of the magestye of the hyest God. And Raphaell the holy angel of the Lord was sẽt to helpe the both, whose prayers came at one tyme together before God.

SO whẽ Tobias thought his prayer to be herde, that he myght dye, he called vnto him his sõne Tobias, & said vn-to him: Wy sonne, heare the wordes of my mouth, & lay them in thyne hert as a fũdacyõ. When God taketh awaye my soule, bury thou my body, & hold thy mother in honour all the daies of her life. For thou oughtest to remembre, what & howe great pareils she suffred for the in her wombe. And when she also hath fulfilled the tyme of her life, burie her beside me. Haue God in thy thoughte all the dayes of thy life, & beware, * lest at any time thou cõsẽt vnto sinne, and lest thou let slippe the commaũ-dementes of the Lord our God. Geue almes of thy goodes, and tourne neuer thy face from the poore: and so shall it come to passe, that the face of the Lorde shall not be tur-ned awaye frõ the. * Be mercyful after thy power. If thou hast much, geue plẽteously, if thou hast litle, do thy dylygence, gladlye to geue of that lytle. For so gatherest thou thy selfe a good rewarde in the dayes of ne-cessytie. For mercy delyuereth from all sinne, and from death, and suffreth not the soule to come in derckenes. A great cõfortatyon mercye before the hye God, vnto all them that them vse. * My sonne, kepe the well frõ all whordome, & (beleue thy wife) se that no fawte be knowen of thee. Set thy bread and wine vpon the bu-riall of the righteous, and do not thou eate and drynke therof wyth the sinners. Aske euer counsell of the wise. Be alwaye thãk-full vnto God, and beseche him, that he wil ordre thy wayes, & that what soeuer thou deuisest or takest in hãde, it maye remaine in hym. I certifye thee also my sonne, that (when thou waste yet but a Babe) I deli-uered ten talentes of syluer vnto Gabelus, at Rages, a cytie of the Medes, & his hande wryteynge haue I by me. And forasmoche as he some meanes, howe thou mayest come by hym, and receaue of hym the sayde wryghte of syluer, and geue him hys hande wryting

Thys answered Tobias his father, and sayd: father, al that thou hast cõmanded me, wil I do, & that diligẽtly. But how I shal require this money I cã not tell: Neyther doeth he knowe me, nor I hym. What token shall I geue hym? And as for the waye thyther, I neuer knewe it. Then hys father answered hym, and sayd: I haue hys hande wrytynge by me, whyche when thou shewest hym immediatly he shal pay thee. But goe thy waye nowe, and get the some a faythful man to goe wyth thee, for an hyre, that thou mayest receaue the money, whyle I am yet lyuynge. Then wente Tobias oute, and spoke the streate he founde a fayre yonge man standynge, gyrded vp, and as it were one readye to take hys iourney. And knewe not that it was as an Aungell of God, but saluted hym, and sayd: Frome whence arte thou, thou good younge man? He answered: Of the chyldren of Israell. And Tobias sayde vnto him: knowest thou the waye, that leadeth vnto the countrye of the Medes? He answered: I knowe it wel, and all those stretes haue I gone ofte tymes, and haue lodged wyth oure brother Gabelus, that dwelleth in Rages a cite of the Medes, whyche lieth vpon the mounte Ecbathanis: Tobias sayde vnto hym: I praye the, tarye for me, tyll I haue tolde my father these thynges. Then went Tobyas in, and tolde hys father all. At the whyche hys father marueled, and prayed, that he would come in vnto hym. Nowe when the aungell came in, he saluted him, and sayde: Ioye be with thee for euermore. And olde Tobias sayde: what ioye can I haue that lyt herein darkenes, and se not the light of heauen? The younge man sayde vnto hym: Be of good cheare, God shall helpe thee shortely. And Tobias sayde vnto hym: cãst thou bring my sonne to Gabelus, vnto the cite of Rages in Medea? And when thou commest agayne, I shal paye the thy hyre. And the aungell sayde vnto hym: I shall leade thy son, and bring him to the agayne. Thẽ Tobias answered him: tel me I praye thee, of what houle, or of what tribe arte thou? The aungell Raphaell sayde vnto him: asketh thou after the kinred of an hyreling, or seketh thou a gyde for thy sonne to goe wyth hym? But that I make the not carefull, I am Azarias, the sonne of greate Ananias. And Tobias answered: thou art come of a greate kynred: but I praye thee, be not displeased, that I desyred to knowe thy kynred. The Aungell sayde vnto hym: thy sonne shall I leade forthe safelye, and bryng him whole to the agayne. Then answered Tobias, and sayde: wel, go on your waye, and God be in your iourneye, and hys aungel beare you company. So when they had prepared al thynges, that they wolde take with them in their iourneye. Tobias bad hys father and hys mother farewell, & they wente on theyr waye bothe together. Now when they were gone hys mother began to wepe, and sayd: The take of our age hast thou taken awaye, and sente hym from vs. wolde God that the money had neuer bene, for the which thou hast sent hym awaye. If we had bene contente with oure pouerte, this had bene greate ryches vnto vs, that we saw our son here. Thẽ laid Tobias vnto her: wepe not, oure son shal come to vs agayne safe & sonde. & thine eyes shall see him. For I trust, that the good angel of God shal beare him cõpanye, & order wel al the thinges that he doeth: So that he shall come to vs agayne with ioye. At these wordes his mother lefte of from wepinge, and helde her tonge.

¶ The. bi. Chapter.

So Tobias went on his way, & a dogge folowed hym, & the firste nighe they arryue by the water of Tigris. Thẽ wẽt he out to wache his fete, and beholde, there came forth an horyble fyshe to deuoure him. Of whome Tobias was afrayed, and cryed with a loude voyce, sayinge: Lorde, he commeth vpon me: And the aungell sayde vnto him: Take hym by the gyll, and draw hym to the. And he dyd so, and drewe hym vpon the lande. And the fyshe beganne to leape at hys fete. Then sayd the Aungel vnto hym: take oute the bowels of this fyshe, and as for the hearte, the gall, and the leuer, kepe them by the. For these thynges are necessarye and good for medicine. Tobyas dyd so, and rosted the fyshe, and they tooke him with him in theyr iourneye: The residue they salted, as muche as was sufficient for them, tyll they came to Rages a cite of the Medes. Then Tobias asked the Aungell, and sayde vnto hym: I praye the brother Azaria, tell me where to are these thynges good of the fyth, that thou hast bydden me kepe? The Angel answered hym, and sayde: If thou layest a pece of the hearte vpo the coales, the smoke thereof dryuen awaye all maner of euyll spirites, whether it be frome man or frome woman, so that frome thence forthe, the same shall come no more vnto them. The gall is good to annoynte or to smyche the eyes wyrhall, where as there is anye blemishe in them, so that they shalbe whole.

And Tobias sayde vnto him: where wylte thou that we remayne? The Aungell aunswered and sayde: Here is a nye kynsman of thyne, one Raguell by name, which hath a doughter called Sara, and hathe neither sonne nor doughter but her. All thys good belongeth vnto thee, and thou muste mary her, and therefore delyre her of her father, and he shall geue her thee to wyfe. Then aunswered Tobias, and sayde: As I vnder stande, she hath bene maried vnto seuen husbandes, and they all are deade: and I haue heard saye, that the deuyll slewe thē: I am afrayed therfore, leste suche thynges happen vnto me also: whiche if it came to passe (seynge I am the onelye sonne of my father and my mother) I shoulde bringe them in their age with sorowe to their graues. Then sayde the Aungell Raphael vnto hym: Heare me, and I wyll tell the what they be, of whom the deuyll hath power.

Namelye, they that receaue maryage of suche a fashion, that they shut God out frō them, and from their hearte, and geue themselues to their owne lust, euen as it were an horse and Mule, whiche haue no vnderstādynge: vpon suche hathe the deuell power. But when thou takest her, and arte come into the chamber, withholde thy selfe frome her three dayes, and geue thy diligence vnto nothynge but vnto prayer with her. And in the first nyght, roste the leuer of the fishe, and the deuill shall be dryuen away. The seconde night shalte thou be receaued into the companye of the holye patriarkes. The .iij. night shalt thou optaine the blessyng of God, so that whole children shall be borne of you. After the third night, take the maiden in the feare of God: & moze for the delyre of childrē, then for any flechly lust: that in the sede of Abraham, thou mayest optayne the blessyng in children.

THen wēt they into Raguel, which receaued them ioyfully. And when Raguel loked vpon Tobias he said vnto Anna his wife: How like is this yong man vnto my sisters sonne? And when he hadde spokē thus, he said: whence be ye good brethren? They said: Of the tribe of Nephthaly, out of the captiuite of Ninive. Thē said Raguel vnto thē: know ye my brother Tobias? They said: yea, we knowe him well. And when they had spokē much good of hi, the Angell saide vnto Raguell: Tobias of whō thou askest, is this yong mans father. Then Raguell bowed hym selfe downe, and wepte, toke him about the necke, and kyssed hym, and sayde: Gods blessynge haue thou my sonne, for thou art the sonne of a good vertuous man. And Anna his wyfe, and Sara his doughter wepte also. Now when they had talked together, Raguel had kil a wether, and to make a feast. And when he prayed them to sit downe to dynner, Tobias said: I wil nether eate nor dryncke here this daye, excepte thou fyrste graūt me my peticiō, & promyse me to geue me thy doughter Sara. When Raguell herde this, he was astonnied, for he knewe what hadde happened vnto the other seuen men, that went in vnto her: and he began to feare, that it shoulde chaunce vnto hym also in lyke maner. And while he stoode so in doubte, and gaue the young man no answere, the Aungell sayde vnto hym: Feare not to geue hym thy doughter, for vnto thys man that feareth GOD, belongeth thy doughter to wife, therfore myghe none other haue her. Then sayde Raguell: I doubt not, but God had accepted my prayers and teares in hys syght: and I trust he caused you to come vnto me for the same intent, that this doughter of myne might be maried in her owne kynred, accordyng to the lawe of Moses. And nowe doubte thou not, but I wyll geue her vnto the: So he toke the right hande of his doughter, and gaue her into the right hande of Tobias, & sayd: the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob be with you, ioyne you together, and fulfyll his blessing in you. And they toke a letter, & made a writyng of the maryage. And thē made they merye, & praysed God. And Raguell called Anna his wife vnto him, & bad her prepare another chamber, & thither he brought Sara his doughter, & she wepte. Then sayd he vnto her: Be of good cheare my doughter, the Lord of heuen geue the ioye, for the heuines that thou hast suffred.

NOw, after that they had supped, they brought the ponge man in to her. Thē thought Tobias vpō the wordes of the angel: & toke out of his bag a pece of the leuer of the fish, & laid it vpō the hote coales. So the angell Raphaell tokē holde of the deuell, and sent him awaye & bounde hi in the wildernes of the hyer egipt. Then spake Tobias vnto the virgin, and sayde: Vp Sara, let vs make oure prayer vnto God to daye, to morowe, and ouermorow: for these thre nyghtes wil we reconcile our selues with God: and when the third holye night is past, we shal ioyne together in the dutye of mariage. For we are the children of holye men, and we maye not come together as the heathen, that know not God. Then tode they vp both together, and besought God earnestly, that he would preserue them. And Tobias sayde: O Lorde

God of oure fathers, prayſed be thou of heauen and earthe, of the ſea, welles, and floudes, and of all thy creatures that be therin. Thou madeſt Adam of the + moulde Gene. 2. of the earthe, and gaueſt hym Eua for an helper. And nowe Lorde, thou knoweſt that it is not becauſe of volupteouſnes that I take this ſiſter of myne to wyfe, but onelye for the loue of chyldren, in whome thy name be bleſſed for euer. And Sara ſayde: haue Sara: prayeth mercy vpon vs (O Lorde) haue mercy vpon vs, and let vs bothe come whole and ſound together to a good age. And aboute the cocke crowynge, it happened that Raguell C called hys ſeruauntes, and they went with hym, to make a graue. For he ſayde: It is chaunced nowe vnto hym peraduenture as it dyd vnto the other ſeuen men, that went in vnto her. Nowe when they had made the graue, Raguel came againe to his wife, and ſayde vnto her: Sende one of thy maydens, to looke yf he be deade, that I maye burye hym afore it be lyghte daye. So ſhe ſente a mayden to ſe, which when ſhe came into the chambre, founde them whole and ſounde, ſleepynge together. And ſo ſhe came agayne, and brought good tydynges. Then Raguell & Anna his wyfe prayſed the lord, and ſayde: Prayſed be thou, O Lorde God Raguel & Anna prayſe God. of Iſraell, for it is not happened vnto vs, D as we thought. For thou haſt deale mercyfully with vs, and put awaye from vs the enemy that perſecuted vs, and haſt ſhewed mercy vnto ponder two beloued. O Lorde, cauſe them to magnifie the more perfectlye, and to offre the ſacrifice of thy prayſe, and of their health, that all people maye knowe, that thou onelye arte God in all the earthe. And immediatly Raguel commaunded hys ſeruauntes to fill the graue, that they had made, with earth, afore it was light, & bad his wyfe prepare a feaſt, and to make ready all thinges that were neceſſarye for meate, for ſuche as wente by the waye. He cauſed two fat kyne alſo, and foure wethers to be ſlayne, and meates to be prepared for all hys neyghbours and frendes. And Raguell charged Tobias to remayne with him two wekes. As for all the good that he had, he gaue Tobias the halfe of it, and made hys writing, that the halfe whiche remayned, ſhulde fal vnto Tobias after their death.

A Then Tobias called vnto him the aungel, whō he thoughtee to haue bene a mā, & ſaid vnto him: brother Azarias, I praye thee herken vnto my wordes: If I ſhould geue my ſelfe to be thy ſeruaunte, I ſhal not deſerue thy prouidence. Neuertheles, I beſeche thee that thou wilte take the beaſtes & the ſeruāts, & go vnto Gabelus in Rages the city of Medes, & delyuer him his hand writynge, and receaue the money of hym, and praye hym to come to my marryage. For thou knoweſt thy ſelfe, that my father doeth numbre the dayes: and if I tarye one daye to longe, he wyll be ſory in hys mynde. Nowe ſeyſt thou howe earneſtelye B Raguel hath required me, ſo that I cannot ſaye hym naye. Then toke Raphaell foure Raphael ſeeketh to God his glory. of Raguels ſeruauntes, and two Camels, and wente vnto Rages the citye of the Medes: and when he hadde founde Gabelus, he gaue hym his hand writyng, and receyued all the money. He tolde him alſo of Tobias, the ſonne of Tobi, howe all thynges had C happened, and cauſed hym to come wyth him to the mariage. Nowe when he came into the houſe of Raguell, he founde Tobias ſittynge at the table: and he leped vp, Gabelus prayeth God. and they hylled eure another, and Gabelus wepte, and prayſed God, and ſayde: the bleſſynge of the God of Iſraell haue thou, for thou arte the ſonne of a righte vertuous and iuſte man, and of one that feareth God, and geueth greate almes. And bleſſynge haue D thy wyfe and youre Elders, that ye maye ſe youre chyldren, and your childres, children, vnto the thirde and fourth generacion, and youre ſede be bleſſed of the God of Iſraell, which raygneth worlde without ende. And when they had all ſayde Amen: they wente to the feaſt, but with the feare of the Lorde, helde they the feaſt of the mariage.

A NOw while yonge Tobias made lōge tariyng, by reaſō of the mariage, his father was full of care & heuynes, & thought: what ſhould be the cauſe, that my ſon tarieth ſo longe? Or why ſhulde he be kept ſo lōge ther? peraduenture Gabelus is deade, and no man wyl geue him the money. Thus begā he to be verye ſorowfull, he & Anna his wife with hi, & begā to wepe both together, becauſe their ſonne was not come agayne vnto them at the daye appoynted. As for his mother ſhe wepte with diſcom- B Tobias mother wepeth. fortable teares, and ſayde: Woe is me, my ſonne: Oh what ayled vs to ſēde the awaye into a ſtrange countrey, thou lyght of oure eyes, thou ſtaffe of oure age, thou comforte of oure lyfe, thou hope of oure generacion? Seynge all the thinges that we haue are onely in the, we ſhulde not haue ſente the awaye from vs. Then Tobias comforted her, and ſayde: Holde thy tonge, and be not diſcomforted, our ſonne is whole & ſounde: the man that we ſent hym with al is fayethful ynoughe. Neuertheleſſe, ſhe myghte in no wiſe be comforted: but dayly wente out, loked aboute, and wente aboute all the ſtretes, wherby ſhe thoughte he ſhulde come agayne: that if it were possible) the myghte se hym commynge afarre of. But Raguell sayde vnto hys sonne in lawe: O tary here, and I shall sende a messenger vnto thy father Tobias, to tell him that thou arte in good healthe. Tobias sayde vnto him: I am sure, that my father & my mother coûte euery daye, and that their hertes are sory. So when Raguell prayed Tobias wyth many wordes, and would in no wyse heare him, he delyuered Sara vnto him, and the halfe parte of all hys good: in seruauntes: and handmaidēs, in sheepe, in Camels, and in kyne, and muche money, and so sent him awaye from hym with peace and ioye, and sayde: The holye Aungell of the Lorde be with you in youre iourney, & brīg you forth safe & sounde, that ye may finde all thynges in good case with your elders, & that myne eies may se your childrē afore I dye. So the elders embraced their doughter, kyssed her, and let her go, exhortynge her to honoure her father & mother in lawe, to loue her husbande, to rule well her housholde, to kepe her house in good ordre, and to shewe her selfe cautelesse.

¶ The. xi. Chapter.

AS they now were going hommarde againe, vpon the. xi. day, they came to Charra, which lieth in the halfe waye towarde Ninine. And the Aungell sayde: Brother Tobias, thou knowest how thou haste lefte thy father: therefore yf it please thee, we two will go before, and let the housholde with thy wife and the catel come softe and sayre after vs. And when Tobias was content that they shoulde go before, Raphaell sayde vnto him. Take of the gall of the fysshe with the, for it shall be necessary. So Tobias toke of the gall, and they wente their waye. But Anna the mother of Tobias sat dayly by the waye syde vpon the toppe of an hyll, from whence she myghte se farre aboute her. And while she was waytyng there for hys comming, she looked a farre of, and anone she perceaued her sonne commynge, and rawne, & told her husbande, sayenge: Behold, thy sonne commeth. And Raphael sayde vnto Tobias: "As soone as thou commest into the house, "immediatly worshippe the Lord thy God, & "geue thankes vnto him: then go to thy fa- "ther, and kisse him: and stroke his eyes ouer "with the gall of the fysshe that thou haste "brought with the. For be sure, that his eies "shall streyght waye be opened, and thy fa- "ther shall se the lyght of heauen, and shall "reioyse at the light of the. Then the dogge that had bene with them in tyese iourney, rawne before, and came as a messenger, and wagged wyth hys tayle for gladnesse. So the blinde father arose, & began to rūne, & stombled with his fete, and gaue a seruaūt his hande, rāne to mete his sonne, receaued him, & kissed him, he & his wyfe, & they began to wepe for ioye. Now whē they hadde worshipped & thāked God, they sat down. Then toke Tobias of the fisches gall, & anoynted his fathers eyes: & taried halfe an houre, & thē began the bleinesche to go out of his eyes, & like as it had bene the white skynne of an egge, whych Tobias toke and drew frō his eies, & immediatly he receiued hys syghte. Then they prayed God, he & his wife, & al they that knew him. And Tobias sayd: O Lord God of Israell, I geue the prayse & thankes, for thou hast chastened me, & made me whole. And lo, nowe do I se my sonne Tobias. After seuen dayes, came Sara his sonnes wyfe also whole and sounde with all the housholde & catel, with camels and muche moneye of hys wyues, & wyth the money that he hadde receaued of Gabelus: and he tolde hys father and hys mother all the benefytes, whyche God had done for hi. by the mā that led him. Achior also & Nabath, Tobias sisters sōnes came, and were glad, & reioyced with him, by reason of all the good that God hadde shewed vnto hym. And so for the space of seuen dayes they made merye, and were syghte ioyfull euery chone.

¶ The. xii. Chapter.

THen Tobias called his son vnto him, & sayd: What may we gene this holye man, that wēt with the? Tobias answered his father, & said: Father, what rewarde shal we geue him? Or what thynge can deserue his benefytes? He hath bene my gide, & brought me safe agayne: he receiued the money frō Gabelus, he caused me to get my wife, he droue the euil spirite from her, he hath bene an occasiō of gladnesse to her father and mother: he delyuered me, that I was not deuoured of the fish, he hath made the to se the light of heaue: yea, we al haue receaued great good of hym. Howe should we worthelye deserue these thynges vnto him? But I praye the my father, that thou wylte desire him, if happilye he will vouche safe, to take with him the halfe of all that we haue brought. So the father and the sonne called him, toke him aside, and began to praye him, that he would be contente to take in good worthe, the halfe parte of all that they had brought. Then sayde he secretely vnto theym: Praysle ye the God of heuen, and geue thankes vnto hym before all men lyuinge, for he hathe shewed hys mercye vnto vs. It is good to hide the kinges secrete, but to shewe and to prayse the worckes of God, it is an honorable thyng.

Prayer

Prayer is good with fastynge, and mercie is better then to wolde by treasures of golde. * For mercye deliuereth from death, clenseth synne, and causeth to fynde euerlastinge life. But they that do sinne & wrought wickednes, are the enemyes of theyr owne soule. Wherefore I tell you the treuth, and wyll hide nothinge from you. * When thou prayest wyth teares, and buryedst the dead and lefte thy dyner, and hiddest the dede in thy house vpon the daye tyme, that thou myghtest burie them in the nyght, I offred thy prayer before the Lorde. And because thou wast accept & beloued of God, * it was necessarie, that tentacion shoulde trye the. And nowe hathe the Lord sente me to heale the, and to delyuer Sara thy sonnes wyfe from the euell spyryte. For I am Raphael an Aungel, one of the seuen that stode before God. Whe they hearde this, they were sore afrayed, and trembled, and fell downe vpon theyr faces vnto the grounde. Then sayde the Aungel: Peace be wyth you, feare not. Where as I haue bene wyth you, it is the wyll of God: geue prayse and thankes vnto hym. you thoughte that I dyd * eate & dryncke with you, but I vse meate that is inuisible, and drynke that cannot be seene of men. Nowe therfore is the tyme that I muste turne againe vnto hym that sente me: but be ye thankeful vnto God, and tell oute all hys wonderous woorkes. And when he had spoken these woordes, he was taken awaye out of theyr syghte, so that they sawe hym nomore. Then fell they downe flat vpō their faces by the space of thre houres, and praysed God: when they rose vp, they tolde all hys wonderous woorkes.

¶ The. xiii. Chapter.

Then olde Tobias opened his mouthe and praysed the lord, & said: Great art thou O lord for euermore, & thy kingdō world without ende: for * thou scourgest and healest: thou ledest vnto hel, & bringest out againe, and there is none that may escape thine hande. O geue thankes vnto the Lord, ye children of Israel, & praise him in the syght of the Heathē. For amōge the Heathen which know him not, hath he scattered you, to thintent that ye should shew forth his marueilous woorkes: and cause them for to know, that there is none other God almightie but he. He hathe chastened vs for our misdedes, and for his owne mercye sake shal he saue vs. Consider this, how he hathe dealt with you, & praise him with feare and drede, and magnifie the euerlastinge kynge in your woorkes. I will praise him euē in the lande of my captiuitie, for he hathe shewed his maiestie vnto a synfull people. Turne you therfore, O ye sinners, & do righteousnes before God, and be ye sure, that he wyll shewe his mercy vpon you. As for me, and my soule, we wyl reioyse in God. O praise the Lorde all ye chosen, holde the dayes of gladnesse, & be thankeful vnto him. O Jerusalem * thou cytie of God, the LORD hath punyshed the for the woorkes of thyne owne handes. O praise the Lorde in thy good thynges, and geue thankes to the euerlastynge God, that he may buylde by hys tabernacle againe in the, that he maye call againe vnto the, all such as be in captiuitie, and that thou mayest haue ioye for euermore. * With a fayre light shalt thou shyne & all the endes of the worlde shall honoure the. * The people shal come vnto the from farre, they shall bryngе gyftes, & worship the Lorde in the, and thy lande shall they haue for a Sanctuarye, for they shall call vpon the greate name in the. Cursed shall they be that dispise the, & al that blaspheme the, shalbe cōdempned: but blessed shal they be that buylde the vp. As for the, thou shalt reioyce in thy children, for they all shalbe blessed, & gathered together vnto the lorde. Blessed are they all that loue the, and that be glade of thy peace. Prayse thou the lord, O my sogle, for the Lorde oure God hathe deliuered his citie Jerusalem from all her troubles. I wyll counte my selfe happye, yf my sede remayne to se the clearnes of Jerusalem. * The gates of Jerusalē shalbe buylded with Saphire & Smaragde, & all the cōpasse of her walles with precious stones. Al her streetes shalbe paued with whit marble stone, & in al the streets shal Alleluia be songe. Prayse be the Lorde, which hath exalted her, that his kyngdom may be dyd her for euermoze. Amen. And so Tobias made an ende of his talkynge.

And after that Tobias had gotte his syght again, he lined. xlii. yeares, * & saw his childers childre. Now whē he was. C. & .xl. yere olde, he died: and was buried honorably in Ninive. For when he was fyre & fifty yeres of age he lost the syght of his eies, & whē he was thre score yere old, he gat his syght againe. The residue of his life led he in ioy & increased wel in the feare of God, and departed in peace. But in the houre of his deathe he called vnto hym hys son Tobias & seuen yonge yōgmē hys sonnes childre, & said vnto the: The destruction of Ninive is at hande, for * the word of the Lord cānot fayle, & our brethrē that are scatred oute of the lande of Israell, shall come thither again. And the whole lāde of it that hath bene wast, shalbe filled: and the house of God that was brente in it, shalbe buylded agayne: & al such as feare god, shal returne returne thyther: the heathen also shal forsake their idols, & come to Jerusalē, & dwel there, & all the kynges of the earth shall be glad of her, & worship the Lord God of Israel. And therfore my children, heare your father: * Serue the Lord in the trueth, seke after his wyl, & do the thinge that pleaseth him. Cōmaunde your children that they do right, geue almes, be myndfull of God, and euer to be thankful vnto hym in truth, and with al their power. Heare me now therfore my children, and abide not here: but in what day soeuer ye haue buried your mother beside me, get you fro hence. For I se, that the wickednes of it, shal bring it to destructiō & end. After the death of his mother, Tobias departed away fro Ninive, with his wife and childrē, and with his children childrē, & came agayne to his father & mother in law, & found them whole & in good age, and toke the care of them. And he closed their eyes, and was heyre vnto all Raguels goodes, & sawe the fifth generacyon, and his children childrē. And when he was xcix. yeare of age, he dyed in the feare of the Lord, & his kynsfolkes buried him. And al his posterite continued in a good life, & holy conuersation: so that they were loued & accepted both of God & men, and of all the people of the lande.

A ARphaxat the kyng of the Medes subdued manye people vnto his dominion, and builded a noble stronge citie whiche he called Ecbathanis. The walles of it made he of free stone, foure squared, seuentie cubites hye, and thirtie cubites brode. He made towers there vpon an hundreth cubytes hye. But vpon the foure corners euerye syde was twentye foote brode. He made the porres in the heigth, like as the towres. Thys kynge trusted in his mightie host, and in his glorious charettes. So in the twelfth yere of his raigne it happened, that Nabuchodonozor the kynge of the Assirians (whiche raygned in the greate cytie of Ninive) fought agaynste Arphaxat, and ouercame him in the great felde called Ragau, beside Euphrates and Tigris, & Jadason in the felde of Erioth the kynge of the Elithes. Then was the kyngdō of Nabuchodonozor exalted, * and his hert was lift vp: and he sent vnto al them that dwelt in Celicia, in Damascus, in Libanus, & vnto the heathen that dwelt in Carmel & Cedar, and to suche as dwelt in Galile, in the great felde of Esdrelon, to all them that were in Samaria, and beyonde the water of Jordan vnto Jerusalem, and the whole lande of Jesse, vnto the mountaynes of Ethiopia. Vnto all these dyd Nabuchodonozor the kynge of the Assirians sende messēgers. But they all with one consent would not agre vnto him, and sent the messengers agayne empeye, and put them awaye with out honoure. Then Nabuchodonozor the kynge, toke indygnacyon at all those landes, and swore by his trone, and by his kyngdome, that he would be auenged of all those countrees.

¶ The. ii. Chapter.

IN the thirtēth yeare of kyng Nabuchodonozor, vpō the. xxi. day of the first meneth, it was deuised in the court of Nabuchodonozor the king of the Assirias, that he would deſōde him selfe. So he called vnto him al the elders, al his captaines, and mē of warre, & shewed thē his secret cōcel, & told thē that his purpose was to brig the whole earth vnder his dominion. Now whē they were al content with this saying. Nabuchodonozor the king called Holofernes, the chiefe captayne of his warres, and said vnto him: Go thy way forth against al the kingdomes of the west, & specyallye against those that haue despised my cōmaūdement. * Thou shalte spare no realme, all strong cities shalt thou bring in subiectiō vnto me. Then Holofernes called together all the captaines & rulers of all the power in Assiria, and mustred the soudyers vnto the hoste (lyke as the kynge commaunded him) namely, an hundred and twētie thousande sightyng men vpon fote, and twelue thousande archers vpon horsebacke. All his ordenaunce sente he before vnto an innumerable multitud of camels, so that the hoste was wel prouyded for with oxen and smale catel, and that without numbre. He caused corne to be prepared out of all Siria for hys hooste. Muche golde and syluer also toke he oute of the kynges house. So he toke his iourney, he and al his host with charettes, horsmen, and archers, of whome there were so manye, that they couered the grounde of the lāde, lyke the grashoppers. And when he was gone past the borders of the Assyryans, he came towarde the greate mountaynes of Ange, whiche lie vpon the lefte side of Celicia: and so he wente vp into all their castels, and wanne euery stroge holde. As for the welthy cytye of Melothus, he drake it downe, and spoyled al the children of Tharsis, and the Ismaelites, whiche laye towarde the wylderne, & vpō the South syde of the lande of Chelon. He wente ouer Euphrates also, and came into Mesopotamia, and drake downe all the hie tyrys that were there, from the broke of Chambre vnto a man come to the sea: and he toke the borders in from Celicia, vnto the coastes of Japhet towarde the South. He caryed awaye all the Madianites, & spoyled all theyr goodes, and whosoever with-stode him, he slewe them with the swearde. After this he wente downe into the felde of Damascus in the tyme of harueste, & brente vp all the corne & all the trees, & caused the vines to be cut downe. And the feare of him fell vpon all them that dwelt vpo the earth.

¶ The.iii. Chapter.

SO the kynges and the prices of al cyties & landes sent their Embassitoures: namely they of Syria, and Mesopotamia, Syria, Sobal, and Libia, and Celicia, which came to Holofernes, & sayd: Let thy wrath ceasse towarde vs: It is better for vs to serue the great kyng Nabuchodonosor with our liues, & to be subiect vnto the, then that we shoulde dye and be slayne: and receaue greater hurte. Al our cyties & possessions, al mountaines and hilles, al feldes, greate and smal, catel, sheepe, goates, horses, and camels, all oure goodes, & houssholdes, be in thy power, vnder thy subiection, be it all together. We our selues also, and oure chyldren wylbe thyne owne, come vnto vs a peaceable Lorde, and vse our seruyce at thy pleasure. Then came Holofernes downe frō the mountaynes with horsmen, and greate power, and conquered all stronge fensed cyties, and all that dwelte in the lande. And oute of all cyties he toke stronge men, and suche as were mete for the warre, to helpe hym. There came lucy a feare alls vpon those countreyes, that the indwellers of al the cyties, the Princes and rulers, and the people together went forthe to mete him as he came, and receaued hym honorably with garlandes & torches, with dauntes, tabrettes & pypes. Neuertheless, thoughe they did this, yet might they not swage his rigorous stomache: but he destroyed their cities, and hewed downe their woodes. For Nabuchodonosor the kynge had commaunded hym, that he should vtterly roote out all the Goddes of the lande: to the intente that he onely myghte be called and taken for the god of the nacions: whych Holofernes wyth hys power broughte vnder hym. So wente he thorowe Syria Sobal, and thorowe all Appamia, and all Mesopotamia, and came to the Idumeans, in the lande of Gabaa and Septopoly, and toke theyr cyties, and remayned there thyrtye dayes, wherin he caused all the whole multytude of his host to be gathered together.

¶ The.iiii. Chapter.

WHen the childre of Israel that dwelt in Iewrye hearde thys, they were sore afrayed of hym. There came suche a tremblynge also and feare vpon the, that they sorowed, he shoulde do vnto the citye of Jerusalem, & the temple of the lord, as he had done to other cyties and theyr temples. So they sent into al Samaria vnto about vnto Jericho, toke in and occupied all the toppes of the mountaynes, & made faste the townes with walles, and prepared corne for them agaynste the battayle. Eliachim also the Priest, wrote vnto all them that dwelt towarde Esdrelon (which lyeth ouer against the great felde by Dothaim) and vnto all those by whome men myghte haue passage vnto them, that they should take in the wayes of the mountaynes, whereby there myghte be anye waye and passage to Jerusalem, and that they should holde dylygente watche where any strayte was betwyxte the mountaynes. And the chyldren of Israell dyd, as Eliachim the Priest of the Lorde had commaunded the. And all the people cryed earnestlye, and humbled theyr soules wyth fastynges and prayers, they and theyr wyues. The Priestes put on hearrye clothes, and layed the yonge babes before the temple of the lord, and couered the aulter of the Lorde wyth an hearrye clothe. And wyth one accorde they cryed vnto the Lorde God of Israell, that theyr chyldren should not be geuen into a prayse, & theyr wyues into a spoyle, that theyr cyties should not be laied wast, and that theyr Sanctuarye should not be vnhalowed, and so they to be a shame and rebuke vnto the heathen. Then Eliachim the hye Priest of the Lorde wente rounde about all Israell, and spake vnto them, sayinge: Be ye sure, that the Lorde wyll heare youre prayeres, if ye continue stedfast in fastynges and prayers in the sight of the Lorde. Remembre Moses the seruaunte of the Lorde, whyche ouerthrewe the Amalechites (that trusted in theyr might & power in their host, in theyr childes, in theyr chariottes and horsmen) not with weapens, but with holy prayers. Euē so shal al the enemyes of Israell be, yfye continue in thys worke, that ye haue begonne. So vpō this exhortacion they cōmmed in prayer before the Lorde. In so muche that they whiche offred vnto sacrifices vnto the Lord, offred the offrynges vnto the Lord, beynge arayd in hearry clothes and had ashes vpō theyr heades. And they all besoughte GOD from theyr whole hearte, that he would visit hys people of Israel.

¶ The.v. Chapter.

Ioseph. submit.

Holofernes vexeth Gods people.

AND wonne came to Holofernes, the prince of the warres of the Assirias, that the children of Israel prepared them selues to make resistaunce, and howe they hadde stopped the wayes betwyxte the mountaynes. Then was he exceadinge wrothe, & called all the princes of Moab, and the captaynes of Ammon, and sayde vnto them. Tel me, what people is thys, that kepeth in the mountaynes? Or what maner of Cities are they? What is their power? Or what maner of host haue they? who is their Captayne? And why do they despise vs more then all those that dwell in the East) and come not forth to mete vs, that they might receaue vs with peace? Then Achior, the Captayne of all the Ammonites, answered, & sayd: Sir, if it please the to heare, I will tell the trueth before the, concernynge this people that dwell in the mountaynes, and there shal no lye goe out of my mouthe. Thys people is of the generacion of the Caldees, they dwelt first in Mesopotamia, for they wolde not folow the Goddes of their fathers that were in the lande of the Chaldees, & so forsoke they the customes of their fore fathers (whyche had many goddes) & worshipped one god, that made heauen and earthe: Whych also commaunded them, that they shoulde goe from thence, & dwel at Haran. Now, whē there came a darthe into the whole lande, they wente downe to Egypte, & there they dwelt *fourehundred yeres, in the whiche they multiplied so greatly, that their hoste might not be numbred. And whē the king of Egypte oppressed them, and subdued thē in buildinge of hys cityes, with makyng of clape & bryche, they cried vnto God their Lorde, whiche punished the whole lande of Egypte with diuerse plages. Nowe when the kynge of Egypte let thē go their waye, and the plage ceassed, and then folowed after them, to take them, and to bryng them agayne into hys seruice, whyle they were flynge awaye, the God of heauen opened the sea, so that the waters stode faste vpon bothe the sides as a wall, and these wente thorowe the botome of the sea drye shodde. In the whiche place when an vnumerable people of the Egyptians folowed vpon them, they were so ouerwhelmed with the waters: That there remayned not one to tell thē that came after, howe it happened. So when thys people was passed thorowe the redde sea, they came into the wildernes of mounte Sinai, where neuer mā mighte dwell afore, and where the son of men had neuer rested. There wer the bitter waters made swete for thē, that they might drinke, and fourtie yeres had they meate frō heauen. Wheresoeuer they went (without bow & arowe, without buckler or swerde) there god fought for them, & caused thē to haue the victorye, yea, no mā was able to hurte this people, except it were so, that they departed vnfaithfully frō the worshipping of the lord their god. But as oft as they worshipped any other beside their god, he gaue thē ouer to be spoyled, to be slayne, & to be put to confusiō. Neuertheles, as oft as they wer sorye for repentaunce frō the worshyp of their god, the same god of heuē gaue thē power and strengthe to withstande their enemies. Moreouer, they slewe the kynges of the Cananites, Iebusites, Pherezites, Hethites, Heuites, & Ammonites, & al the mightie in Hesebon, and toke their landes & cities in possession: and so longe as they sinned not in the sight of their god, it went well with them, for their God hateth vnrighteousnesse, for in tymes past whē they went out of the waye, which God had geuē thē, that they shuld walke in it, they wer destroyed i diuerse batailles of many nacions: & many of thē were caryed away prisoners vnto a straunge countre. But nowe lately they haue turned them selues againe vnto the Lorde their god, and are come together agayne oute of the countreys, where they were scatred abrode, And thus haue they conquered these mountaynes, & dwell therin: and as for Ierusalem, where their Sanctuary is, they haue it againe in possession. And therfore my Lorde, make diligent inquisicion, yf this people haue done wickednes in the sight of their God, then let vs go vp against thē, for vndoubtles their God shall deliuer them into thy handes, & subdue them vnto thy power. But yf thys people haue not displeased their God, we shall not be able to withstande them, for their God shall defende them, and so shall we be a shame to all the worlde. Now whē Achior hadde spoken oute these wordes, all the greate men of Holofernes were wrothe and thought to slay hym, and sayde one to another, what is he, whiche dare saye that the childrē of Israel are able to withstande Nabuchodonosor the kyng and his hooste? Where as they are an vnweapened people, without strength or vnderstanding of the feates of warre? That Achior therfore maye knowe that he hathe disceaued vs, we will goe vp to the mountaynes: and when the mightye men of them are taken, he also shalbe slayne with the swearde, that al people may knowe, that Nabuchodonosor is the God of the earthe, and that there is none other without hym.

Gen.15.c Acte.7.a. Exo.12.f Gala.3.c

Note.

Israel mad adui against Achior.

Holofernes dare against Iudea. The booke ỹ whole people praise god.

SO when they had lefte of speakynge, Holofernes toke sore indignacion, and sayd vnto Achior: For so much as thou hast prophecied vnto vs, sayinge: * that the people of Israell shalbe defended of theyr GOD, I wyll shewe the, that there is no God but Nabuchodonosor. yea, when we slaye (them al as one man) thou also shalt perysshe wyth them thorowe the swearde of the Assirians, and all Israell shalbe destroyed wyth the, and then shalte thou fele that Nabuchodonosor is the Lorde of the whole earthe. Then shal the swearde of my knyghthode go thorow thy sydes, and thou shalt fall downe stycke amonge the wounded of Israell, and shalte not come to thy selfe agayne, but be vtterly destroyed with them. But if thou thinkest thy prophecy to be true, why doeste thou then chaunge thy coloure? why art thou afrayed? Thinckest thou that my workes are not able to be performed? But that thou maiest know, that thou shalte fele these thynges wyth them, beholde, from this houre forth wyll I sende the vnto ponder people, that when the punishment of my swearde (whiche they haue worthely deserued) falleth vpon them, thou mayest be punyshed wyth them. So Holofernes commaunded his seruauntes to take Achior, and to carye him vnto Bethulia, & to delyuer hym into the handes of the chyldren of Israel. Then Holofernes seruauntes toke hym, and went thorow the playne felde. But when they drewe nye vnto the mountaynes, the synge casters came oute agaynste them: Neuertheles they gat the awaye by the syde of the mountayne, and bounde Achior hande and fote to a tree, and so lefte hym bounde with wythes, and turned agayne vnto their Lorde. Notwithstandynge the chyldren of Israel wente downe ko Bethulia, came vnto him, lowsed him, brought hym into Bethulia, set hym in the myddest of the people, and asked hym what the matter was, that the Assirians had left him bounde? Osias the sonne of Ozicha of the tribe of Simeon, and Charmim (which is also called Gothoniel) were the prynceypall rulers at the same tyme. Nowe when Achior stode in the myddest of the Senatoures, and before them al, he tolde them, what answere he gaue Holofernes, to the thynge that he asked hym, and how Holofernes people would haue slayne hym for so sayinge, and howe Holofernes hym selfe was wrothe, and commaunded him for the same cause to be delyuered vnto the Israelites: that when he ouercame the chyldren of Israel, he might commaunde Achior also to be put to death with diuerse tormētes, because he sayde: the God of heauen is theyr defender. And whē Achior had plainly tolde oute all these thynges, all the people fell downe vpon theyr faces, prayinge the Lord, and poured oute theyr prayers together vnto the Lord, with a general complaynte and weepynge, and sayde: O Lorde God of heauen and of earthe, beholde, theyr pryde, and loke vpon oure lowlynes, & consyder howe it standeth wyth thy saincctes, & maketh to be knowne, that thou forsakest not those, whiche holde them fast by the, & how that thou dyngeste them lowe, that presume of them selues, & make them boast in theyr owne strengthe. So when the weepynge and prayer of the people (which they had made the whole daye longe) was ended, they confozted Achior, sayinge: The God of our fathers, whose power & strēgth thou hast praysed, shal so rewarde the, that thou shalte rather se their destructiō. When the Lorde oure God thē shall geue hys seruauntes this libertie, god be also with the amonge vs: so that yf it please the, thou withal thyne, mayest dwel with vs. Nowe when Osias had ended the councel, he toke him into hys house, and made a great supper, called the elders to it, and so they refreshed them selues after the fastynge. And afterwarde was all the people called together, which made their prayers al the nighte longe in the congregacion, and besoughte the God of Israel for helpe.

¶ The.vii. Chapter.

THe nexte day, Holofernes cōmaunded his hoste, to go vp against Bethulia. * There were an hundred & twentye thousande fyghtynge men on fote, and two & twentye thousande horsemen, besyde the preparinge of thē that were wonne: & came to them on euery side out of the countrees & cities which he had taken. All these prepared them selues vnto the battayle against the Israelites, and came on by the hyl side, vnto the top that loketh ouer against Dothaim, frō the place which is called Belma, vnto Chelmō that lieth towarde Esdrelō. Nowe when the children of Israell sawe so great a multitude of the Assirians, they fel downe flat vpon the grounde, strawed ashes vpō their heades, & prayed with one accorde, that the God of Israel would shewe his mercie vpon his people. And so they toke theyr weapons, and sat downe before the mountaynes in the narowe place and kepte the way day & nyght. But whyle Holofernes was going aboute, he founde the water spring, which from the Southe syde was conueyed into the citie by a condite: this commaunded he to be diuerte another waye, and to cut theyr condyte in sunder. There were welles also not farre frō the walles, which they digged secretly.

Osias reporteth ỳ answere of ỳ elders. Judit. 8

A Nd it happened when these woordes came to the eares of Judith a widow, which was the doughter of Merary, the son of Idox, the son of Joseph, the son of Osias, the son of Elai, the son of Jammor, the son of Jezeō, the son of Raphoin, the son of Achitob, the son of Melchia, the son of Eliā, the sonne of Nathania, the sonne of Salathiell, the sonne of Simeon, the sonne of Ruben. And her husbande was called Manasses, whiche dyed in the dayes of the barly harnest. For whyle he was bindinge the sheues together in the felde, the heate came vpon his head, and he died at Bethulia his Citie, and there was he buried be-
B side his fathers. Nowe was Judith his desolate widowe thre yeares, and sixe monethes. And in the hier partes of her house, she made her selfe a preuye chambre, where she dwelte, beynge closed in with her maydens. She ware a smocke of heere, and fasted all the dayes of her lyfe, excepte the Sabbothes, and newe moones: and the solempne dayes that the people of Israell kepte. She was a very fayre and bewtifull personne. Her husbande also had lefte her great riches, a plenteous houshold e, great vnmouable possessions, and manye catell. This Judith was a woman of very good repoze with euerye one, for she feared the Lorde greatlye, and there was no bodye that spake an euyl woorde of her. When this Judith heard, howe Osias had promysed the people, that after the fyfte daye he wolde geue vp the citye vnto the Assirians, she sente for the elders, Chambri & Charmin, & when they came i to her, she sayde: what thynge is this, wherein Osias hathe consented, that yf God helpe not within fiue dayes, he wyll geue ouer the Citie to the Assirians? Judiths prayer.

NOw whē they wer gone their way, Judith went into her closet, put on an heare smocke, strawed ashes vpō her heade, fel downe before the Lord, & cried vnto him, saying: O Lord God of my father + Simeon, which ganest him a sweard for a defence against the enemies that vsed violence, & wilfulnesse, & that raughted the virgine, and put her to dishonestye. Thou that ganest theyr wyues into a praye, and their doughters into captiuitie, & all their praye for a spoyle vnto thy seruauntes, which bare a zele vnto the: helpe me a widowe, O Lorde my God, I beseche the. For thou hast done all thinges from the begynnynge: & loke what thou hast taken in hāde & deuysed, it came euer to passe. For all thy wayes are prepared, and thy iudgementes are doone in thy euerlastynge foreknowledge. O looke nowe vpon the armies of the Assiriās, like + as it was thy pleasure some tyme to looke vpon the hoste of the Egiptians, when they beynge weapened, persecuted thy seruauntes, and put theyr trust in their charettes, horsemen, & in the multytude of their mē of warr. But thou lokest vpon their hoost, castynge a thicke darkenes before them: & when they came into the depe, the waters ouerwhelmed them. Euē so Lorde let it go with these, that truste in the power and multytude of theyr men of warre, in theyr charettes, arowes, and speres, and knowe not that thou onelye are oure God, whyche destroyest warres from the begynnynge, & that thou art the Lord. O lyfte vp thyne arme nowe lyke as euer from the beginnynge, & in thy power bring their power consaught: cause their might to fall in thy wrathe. They make theyr boost, that they wil vnhalow and defyle thy Sanctuarye, and to vnaste the Tabernacle of thy name, and to caste downe the horne of thine aulter with their sweard. Judith clotheth her selfe & prepareth her gladnes.

C The.x. Chapter.

AND whē she had left of crying vnto the lorde, she rose vp frō the place where she had lien flate before the lord & called her mayden, went doune into her house, layed the heery cloth frō her, put of the garmentes of her widdowhode, washed her body, anointed her selfe with precious thinges, of swete sauoure, braded, and platted her heere: set an houe vpō her head, & put on suche apparel as belongeth vnto gladnes, slippers vnō her fete, armeletes, spanges, earinges, fingeringes, and decked her selfe wyth all her belle araye. The Lorde gaue her also a speciall bewtye and fayrenesse: (for all this decknge of her selfe, was not done for anye voluptuousnes, and pleasure of the flesh, but of a right discretion and vertue; therfore dyd the Lorde increase her bewtye, so that she was exceadinge amiable, and well fauoured in all mens eyes. She gaue her mayden also a bottel of wine, a pot with oyle, pottage, cakes, reade and chese, and wente her waye.

B Nowe when she came to the porte of the city, she founde Ozias, and the elders of the citye waytinge there. Whiche when they sawe her, they were astonyed, and marueyled greatlye at her bewtye. Neuertheles, they asked no question at her, but let her goe, sayinge: The God of our fathers geue the his grace, & with his power perfourme al the deuice of thy hearte, that Jerusalem may reioyse ouer the, and that thy name maye be in the nombre of the holye and righteous. And all they that were there, sayde with one voyce: so be it, so be it. Judith made her prayer vnto the Lorde, and went out at the porte, she and her mayde. And as she was goynge downe the mountayne, it happened that a boute the spryngе of the daye, the spies of the Assirians mette with her, and tooke her, sayinge: Whence comest thou? Or whither goest thou? She aunswered: I am a doughter of the Hebrues, and am fled frome them, for I knowe that they shalbe geuē vnto you to be spoyled: because they thoughte scorne to yelde thē selues vnto you, that they myght finde mercy in your sighte. Therfore, haue I deuised by my selfe after thys maner: I wyll goe before the Prince Holofernes, and tell him al their secretes, and will shewe him, how he may come by them, and winne thē, so that not one mā of his host shal perysshe. And when these men had heard her wordes, and considered her fayre face they were astonied (for they wondered at her excellent bewtye) and sayde vnto her: Thou hast saued thy life by findinge oute this wyse, that thou woldest come downe to our Lorde: and be thou sure, that when thou comest vnto him, he shall intreate the wel, and thou shalte please him at the hearte: So they brought her into Holofernes pauilion, and told him of her. Nowe when she came in before him, immediatly he was ouercome, and taken with her bewtye.

Then sayde hys seruauntes: Who would despyse the people of the Jewes, that haue so fayre women? Shoulde we not by reason sighe agaynste them for theyse? So whē Judith sawe Holofernes sittynge in a Canapy, that was wroughte of purple, silke, golde, Smaragde and pretious stones, she loked faste vpon him, and fell downe vpon the earthe. And Holofernes seruauntes toke her vp agayne, at theyr Lordes commaundement.

C The.xi. Chapter. Holofernes reporteth Judith.

THen sayd Holofernes vnto her: be of good chere, & feare not in thine hart, for I neuer hurt mā that wolde serue Nabuchodonosor the king. As for thy people, yf they hadde not despysed me, I shulde not haue lifte vp my speare against them. But tell me nowe, what is the cause that thou arte departed frome them, and wherfore arte thou come vnto vs. And Judith sayde vnto him: Sir, vnderstande the wordes of thy handmayden: For yf thou wilte do after the wordes of thy handmayden, the Lorde shall bringe thy matter to a prosperous effecte. As truelye as Nabuchodonosor a lorde of the lande liueth, and as truely as his power liueth, whiche is in the, to the punishement of al men that goe wronge, al men shal not onely be subdued vnto him thorowe the, but all the beastes also of the felde. For al the people speake of thy prudent actiuitie: and it hathe euer ben reported, howe thou onelye arte good and myghty in al hys kyngdome, and thy discretion is commended in all landes. The thynge is manifest also, that Achior spake, and it is well knowen, what thou cõmaundest to do vnto hym. For this is playne and of a suretye, that oure God is so wrathe with vs (by the reason of oure sinnes) that he hathe shewed by his prophetes vnto the people, howe that for their synnes he wyll deliuer them ouer vnto the enemye. And for so muche as the chyldren of Israell knowe that they haue so displeased their God, they are sore afrayed of thee. They suffre greate hungre also, and for wante of water, they are deade nowe in a maner. Moreouer, they are appointed to slay al their catell, that they maye drynche the bloude of them, and are purposed to spende all the holye ornamentes of theyr GOD (whiche he hathe forbydden them to touch) for corne, wyne & oyle. Seyng nowe that they do these thynges, it is a playne case, that they muste nedes be destroyed. Whiche when I thy handmayden perceaued, I fled from them, and the LORDE hathe sente me vnto thee, to shewe thee these thinges. For I thyne handmayden worshyppe God, euen here nowe beside the, and thyne handemayden shal go forthe, and I wil make my prayer vnto God, and he shall tell me, when he wyll rewarde them theyr sinne: then shall I come and shewe the, and bringe the thorowe the myddest of Jerusalem, so that thou shalte haue all the people of Israell, as the shepe without a shepherde: there shal not so muche as one dogge barcke agaynste thee, for these thynges are shewed me, by the prouidence of God: And for so muche as GOD is displeased wyth them, he hath sente me to tell thee the same.

These wordes pleased Holofernes and all his seruauntes, whyche marueyled at the wysedome of her, and sayde one to another: there is not suche a woman vpon earthe, in beawtye and discrecion of woordes. And Holofernes sayd vnto her: GOD hath done well, that he hathe sente thee hither before thy people that thou mayest geue them into oure handes. And for so muche as thy promyse is good, yf thy GOD performe it vnto me, he shall be my GOD also, and thou shalte be excellent, and greate in the courte of Nabuchodonosor, and thy name shalbe spoken of in al the lande.

Then cõmaunded he her to go in where his treasure laye, & charged that she shulde haue her dwellyng there, and appoynted what shulde be geuen her from hys table. Judith aunswered hym, & sayde: As for the meate that thou haste commaunded to geue me, I maye not eate of it as nowe (leste I displease my God) but wyll eate of suche as I haue brought wyth me. Then sayde Holofernes vnto her: yf these thinges that thou haste brought with thee fayle, what shal we do vnto thee? And Judith sayde: as truelye as thou lyuest my lord, thy handmayden shall not spende all thys, til God haue brought to passe in my handes, the thinges that I haue deuised. So hys seruauntes broughte her into the tente, where as he had appointed. And as she was goynge in, she desired that she mighte haue leue to go forth by night, and before daye, to her prayer, and to make intercession vnto the Lorde. Then commaunded Holofernes his chamberlaynes, that she shoulde goe oute and in at her pleasure, to prayse vnto God those thre dayes. And so in the nighte season she wente forthe into the valley of Bethulia, and washed her selfe in the water. Then went she vp, and besought the Lorde God of Israell, that he woulde prosperre her waye, for the deliueraunce of his people. And so she went in, and remayned cleane in her tent, til she toke her meate in the euenynge. Vpon the fourthe daye it happened, that Holofernes made a supper vnto his seruauntes, and sayde vnto Vagao the chamberlayne: Goe thy waye, and perswade this Hebrewesse, that she maye be willing to consente to hepe companye with me. For it were a shame vnto al the Assirians, that a woman shoulde so laughe a man to scorne, that she were come from him vnmedled with hall. Then wente Vagao vnto Judith, & sayde: Let not the good doughter be afrayed, to come into my LORD, that she maye be honoured before hym, that she maye eate and drynche wine, and be merye with him. Vnto whome Judith aunswered: Who am I, that I shoulde saye my Lorde nay? What soeuer is good before hys eyes, I shal doe it: and loke what is his pleasure, that shall I thynche well done, as longe as I liue. So she stode vp, and dect her selfe with her apparell, and wente in, and stode before hym. And Holofernes hearte was whole moued, so that he burnt in desire towarde her. ¶ The. xiii. Chapter.

NOw when it was late in the nyght, his seruantes made haste euery mā to his lodgynge. And Bagao shut the chamber dores, & went his waye, for they were al ouerladen with wine. So was Judith alone in the chāber. As for Holofernes he lai vpō the bed al drōnkē, & of very drōkennes fel a slepe. Thē cōmaūded Judith her mayde, to stāde without before the doze, & to wayte. And Judith stode before the bed, makynge her prayer with teares, & moued her lippes secretly, & sayde: Strēgthē me, O Lorde God of Israell, and haue respecte vnto the woorckes of my handes in thys houre, that thou mayest set vp thy cyte of Jerusalem, lyke as thou haste promysed: O graunte that by thee I maye perfourme the thynge, whiche I haue deuysed thorowe the belefe that I haue in thee. And when she had spoken thys, she wente to the bedstede, and loused the sweardе that hanged vpon it, and drewe it oute. Then tooke she holde of the heerye lockes of hys heade, and sayde: Stregthē me, O LORDE God in thys houre, and with that she gaue him two stroakes vpon the necke, and smote of hys heade. Then tooke she the Canapy awaye, and rolled the deade bodye afyde. Immediatly she gat her forth, & delyuered the heade of Holofernes vnto her mayden, and bad her putte it in her wallet. And so they two wente forthe togyther after their custome, as thoughe they wouldе prayе, and so passed by the hoostes, and came thorowe the dalley vnto the porte of the Cytie. And Judith cryed a farre of vnto the watchemen vpon the walles: Open the gates (sayde she) for GOD is wyth vs, whyche hath shewed his power in Israel. And whē they heardе her voyce, they called the Elders of the citye togethеr. And they came al to mete her lytle and greate, younge and olde, for they thought not that she shoulde haue come so soone. So they lyghted candles, and gathered aboute her euerychone, but she went vp into an hye place, and caused silence to be proclaymed. When euerye man nowe helde hys tonge, Judith sayde: O prayse the Lorde oure God, for he hathe not despysed nor forsaken them, that putte their trust in him: & me his handmayden hath he performed hys mercye, whiche he promised vnto the house of Israell: yea, in my hande this same nyghte hathe he slayne the enemy of his people. And with that she

toke forth the head of Holofernes out of the wallet & shewed it thē, saying: beholde the heade of Holofernes, the captayne of the Assirians, and thys is the canapy, wherein he lay in his dronckennes: where the Lorde our god hathe slayne him by the hande of a womā. But as truly as the lord liueth, his aungell hath kepte me goynge thyther, remayning there, and commynge hyther again from thence. And the LORD hath not suffred me his handmayden to be defiled, but without any filthynes of syn hath he brought me agayne vnto you: and that with great victorye, so that I am escaped, and ye deliuered. O geue thankes vnto him euerychone, for he is gracious: and hys mercye endureth for euer. So they praysed the Lorde all togethеr, and gaue thanckes vnto him. And to her they sayd: The lorde hath blessed thee in hys power, for thorowe the hath he brought our enemies to nought. And Ozias the chiefe ruler of the people of Israel, sayde vnto her: Blessed arte thou of the lorde the hye GOD, aboue all women vpon earthe. Blessed be the Lorde the maker of heauen and earth, which hath gided thee a ryght to wounde and to smyte of the heade of the captayne of oure enemyes. For thys daye he hath made thy name so honorable, that thy prayse shal neuer come out of the mouthe of menne, whiche shall alwaye remembre the power of the Lorde, seynge thou haste not spared thyne owne selfe, but put thē i̇ ieopardy, confiorynge the anguish and trouble of thy people, and so haste helped their fall before God oure LORDE. And all the people sayde: Amen, Amen. Achior also was called, and he came. Then sayde Judith vnto hym: The GOD of Israel vnto whome thou gauest wytnes, that he woulde be auenged of hys enemies, euen he hathe thys nyghte thorowe my hande, smitten of the heade of al the vnfaythfull. And that thou mayest see that it so is: Beholde, thys is the heade of Holofernes, which in hys presūptuous pride, despysed the God of the people of Israell, and threatened with destruction, sayinge: When the people of Israell is taken, I shall cause the also to be stickte with the swerd. When Achior sawe Holofernes heade, he fel downe before vpon hys face to the grounde for dery anguish & feare, so that he sowned with al. But after that he was come agayne to him selfe, he fel downe before her, & praysed her, sayinge: Blessed arte thou of thy God, in al the tabernacles of Jacob: For all the people that heare of thy name, shal prayse the god of Israel, because of the.

IUdith sayd vnto all the people: Brethrē, heare me. Sticke vp this heade vpō oure walles, and whē the Sunne ariseth take euery man hys weapen, & sal out violētly: not as thoughe ye wolde go besyde them, but to renne vpon them, wyth vyolence. When the spies in the tentes se this, they shal of necessite be compelled to flee backewarde, and to raise vp theyr captaine to the battayle. So when their captaynes come vnto Holofernes pauilion & finde the trawe body wrapped in the bloude fearfulnes shal fal vpon them: & whē ye perceaue that they flye, folowe them wythout al care, for God shall delyuer thē vnto you, to be destroyed. Then Achyor seynge the power of GOD, wherbye he had shewed vnto the people of Israell, fell of from his Heathenysche beleefe and put hys trust in God, and let him selfe be circumcysed: and so was he numbred amonge the people of Israell, he and all hys posteryte vnto thys daye. Holofernes heade is stricken vp vpō ye walls

Nowe as soone as it was daye, they stycke vp Holofernes heade vpon the walles, and euerye man tooke hys weapen, and so they wente oute wyth an horryble crye. When the spyes sawe that, they ranne vnto Holofernes tente. And they that were wythin the tente, came before his chamber, and made a great rushynge to wake hym vp, because they thoughte, wyth the noyse to haue raysed hym. For there durste not one of the Assirians knocke, go in or open: But when the captaynes and Prynces: and all the chefe in the hynge of the Assirians hoost came together, they sayde vnto the Chamberlaynes. Go youre wayem, and wake him vp, for the mysse are crept out of their holes, and dare presume vs vnto battayle. Iud.14.b Then wente Bagao into his chamber, stode before the bed, and clapped with hys handes, for he thoughte he had bene slepynge wyth Judith. But when he had herkened perfectly wyth his eares, and coulde perceaue no slepynge, he went nyer to the bed, and spreet vp, and then sawe he the deade bodye of Holofernes lynge there withoute a heade, weltred in hys bloude vpon the earthe. Then cryed he with loude voyce, and wyth wepynge rente hys clothes, and wente into Judiths tente, and founde her not: And so he leapte oute vnto the people and sayde: one woman of the Jewes, hathe brought all Nabuchodonosors people to shame. For lo, Holofernes lyeth vpon the grounde and hath no heade. Whē the chefe of the Assirians host herde that, they rente their clothes, & there fel an intollerable fere and tremblynge vpon them, so that theyr mynde were sore afrayed. And there was an exceadinge great crie in the whole host.

NOwe when all the yooste herde that Holofernes was headed, their mynde and councel fel from them: & suche a feare came vpon them, that they vnderstode to defende the selues by flyinge awaye: one spake not to another, but hanged downe theyr heades, left al behynde thē, made hast to escape frō the Hebrues: for they hearde, that they wer hastynge to come after with their weapens, & so they fled by the wayes of the felde, and thorow al the fore parthes of the dales. And when the children of Israel saw that they fled, they folowed vpō thē, and wente downe wyth trompettes, blowynge and mahynge a greate crye after them. As for the Assirians, they had no ordre, and kept not them selues together, but fled their waye. Neuerthcles, the chyldren of Israell fell vpon them wyth one companye and ordre, and discomfyred as many as they myght get. And Ozias sente messaungers vnto all the cytyes and countrees of Israell. So all the regyons and cytye sente oute theyr best men, after them in harnesse, and smote them with the swearde, til they came to the vttermost part of theyr borders. And the other that were in Bethulia came into the tentes of the Assyrians, and take all that they wyche were fled had lefte behynde them, and so they founde greate good. And they that came ageine to Bethulia from the battaile, toke wyth them such thynges as had bene theirs: there was no numbre of the cattell, and of all costlye Jewels, so that from the lowest vnto the hyest, they were all made ryche of the spoyles of them. And Joachim the hye preiest at Jerusalem, came to Bethulia with all the elders, that they might se Judith. Nowe when she came oute vnto them, they beganne all to prayse her wyth one voyce, sayinge: thou worshypnge of the cytye of Jerusalem, thou ioy of Israell, thou honoure of oure people, thou hast done manly, and thy herte is confozted, because thou haste loued clenlynes and chastyte, and haste knowen no man but thyne owne husbande: therefore hath the hande of the Lorde confozted the, and blessed shalte thou be for euer. And all people sayde: so be it, so be it. In thirty dayes coulde the people of Israell scarse gather vp the spoyles of the Assyrians. But all that belonged vnto Holofernes, and had bene his, specyally (whether it were of gold, of syluer, precyous stone, clothynge, & al ornamentes) they gaue it vnto Judith. And al the people retoysed, both wemē, maidēs, & yonge people, wyth vyoes and harpes.

Assur came oute of the mountaynes of the Northe in Judi.7.c. the multitude of his strength. * His people stopped the water brokes, and their horses couered the valleyes. He purposed to haue brought vp my lāde, & to slaye my yonge n & B weth the swearde. He would haue caried awaye my children and virgins into captyuite, but the Almyghtie Lord hindred him, and delyuered hym into the hādes of a woman, which brought him to confusion. For theyr mighty was not destroyed of the yōg men. It was not the sonnes of Tyran that slue hym, nether haue the greate Giannres set them selues agaynst him: but Judith the doughter of Merary wyth her fayre bewty harh dyscomfyted hym, and brought hym to naughte. For she layde awaye her widdowes garmēt and put on the parel of gladnesse to the reioysynge of the childrē of Israel. She annoynted her face, and bounde vp her heare in an hoke to begyle hym. Her slyppers rauysched hys eyes, her bewtye captyued hys mynde, wyth the swearde C smote she of hys necke. The Persians were astonied at her stedfastnes, and the Medes at her boldenes. Then houled the armies of the Assirians, when my simple, (dere of thirst appered.) For he shal geue fier and wormes into their flesshe, that they maye burne and fele it for euermore. After this it happened, that after the victorye, all the people came to Jerusalem, to geue prayse and thanckes vnto the Lorde. And when they were purpyfyed, they offered all their burnt sacrifices and their promyse offeringes. And Judith offered al Holofernes weapes, and al the Jewels that the people had geuē her: and the canapie that she toke from his bed and hāged them vp vnto the LORD. The people was ioyful, as the vse is: and this ioye by reason of the victorye, wyth Judith, endured thre monethes. So after these dayes, euery mā went home againe, and Judith was in greate reputacion at Bethulia, and ryght honourably taken in all the lande of Israel. Vnto her bertue also was chastitie ioyned, so that after her husbande Manasses, she neuer knewe man all the dayes of her lyfe. Vpon the hye solempne dayes she went oute wyth greate worshyppe. She dwelte in her husbandes house an hundred and fyue yeare, and lefte her handemayde fre, and dyed: and was buryed besyde her husbande in Bethulia. And al the people mourned for her. vii. dayes. So longe as she lyued, there was none that troubled Israel, and many yeares also after her deathe. The daye wherin this victorie was gotten, was solemlye holden, and reken'd of the Jewes in the nombre of the holy dayes, and it is yet greatly holden of the Jewes euer sence vnto this daye.

Neuerthelesse, * God turned the kynges mynde, that he was gotle, that he leaped out of his seate for feare, and gat her in his armes, & helde her vp til she came to her selfe againe. And with that he helde vp his goldē rodde. & layed it vpon her necke, & embraced her frendely, & saide vnto her: * I saw thee (O Lorde) as an Aungell of God, and my hert was troubled, for feare of thy maiestye and clearenesse. ¶ The.xvi. Chapter.

The great kynge Artharxerses, whiche raigneth from India vnto Ethiopia, ouer an.C.&.xxvii. landes, sendeth vn to the princes, & rulers of the same landes, suche as lone hym, his frendly salutacion. There be many that for the sondrye frendshyppes and benefites, whiche are dyuerlye done vnto them for their worshyppe, be euer the more proude and hye mynded, and vndertake not onelye to hurte there subiectes (for plenteous benefites maye they not suffre, and begynne to imagine some thyng against those that do them good, and take not onely all vnthankefulnesse awaye frō men) but in pryde and presūption (as they that be vnmyndefull, and vnthankefull for the good dedes) they go aboute to escape the iudgemente of God, that seith all thynges, whiche iudgemente hateth and punisheth all wickednesse. It happeneth ofte also that they whiche be set in office by the hyer power, and vnto whome the busynes and causes of the subiectes are committed to be handled, waxe proude, and dekyle thē selues with sheadyng of innocente blonde, whiche bringeth thē to intollerable hurt. Whiche also with falle and dyscepefull wordes, and with lying tales, disceyue and betraye the innocente goodnesse of kynges. Nowe is it profytable and good, that we take hede, make searche therafter, and consider, not onely what hath happened vn to vs of olde: but the shamefull, vnhoneste, and noysome thinges, that the debiles haue nowe taken in hande before our eyes, and thereby to beware in time to come, that we maye make the kingedome quiete and peaceable for all men: and that we might somtyme drawe it to a chaunge: and as for the thynge that nowe is presente before oure eyes, to withstande it, and to put it downe, after the moost frendly maner. What tyme nowe as Aman the sonne of Amadathu the Macedonian (a straunger derelye of the Persions blonde, and farre from our goodnesse) was come in among vs as an aleaūt, and had optayned the frend shippe that we beare towarde all people, so that he was called oure father, and hadde in yinghe honoure of euerye man, as the next and principall vnto the king, he coulde not forbeare hym selfe from hys pryde, hathe vndertaken, not onelye to robbe vs of the kyngedome, but of oure lyfe. Wyth manyfolde dyscepte also hathe he despyed to destroye Mardocheus oure helper and preserner, whiche hath done vs good in all thynges: and innocente hether the lyke partaker of oure kyngedome, with all her people. For hys mynde was (whan he had taken them oute of the waye, and robbed vs of theym) by this meanes to translate the kyngdome of the Persians, into them of Macedonia. But we fynde, that the Jewes (whyche were accused of the wicked: that they myghte be destroyed) are no euel doers, but vse reasonable and vyghte lawes: and that they be the chyldren of the moofte hye lyuynge God, by whome the kyngdome of vs, and oure progenitours hathe bene well ordred hytherto. Wherefore, as for the letters and commaundementes, that were put forth by Aman the sonne of Amadathu, ye shall do well, yf ye holde theym of none effecte: for he that sette theym vp and inuented them, hangeth at Suse before the poorte, wyth all hys kynredde, and GOD (which hathe all thynges in hys power) hathe rewarded him after hys deserunge. And, vpon this ye shall publisshe and sette vp the coppye of this letter in all places, that the Jewes maye freely and wythout hinderaunce hold them selues after their owne statutes, and that they maye be helped, and that vpon the.xiij. daye of the.xii. moneth Adar, they maye be auenged of them, whyche in the time of their angwyshe and trouble, would haue oppressed theym. For the God that gouerneth all thinges, hath turned to ioye the daye, wherin the chosen people shoulde haue perished. Moreouer, amonge the hye solempne dayes that ye haue, ye shal holde this daye also wyth all gladnes: that now and in tyme to come, this daye may be a remembraunce to good, for al such as loue the prosperyte of the Persians: but a remembraunce of destruction, to those that be sedityous vnto vs. Al cyties & landes that do not this, shall horybly perish & be destroyed with the swerd and fire, & shal not onely be no more inhabited of mē, but be abhorred also of the wilde beastes and foules.

A Dilect your affection vpō righteousnes, ye that be iudges of the erth. Haue a good opinō of the lorde, & seke hī in the singlenes of hert.

1.pa.15.a * For he wil be founde of thē that tēpt him not, & appeareth vnto such as put their trust in hī. As for the frowarde thoughtes, they seperate from God, but vertue (yf it be alowed) refourmeth the vnwise. And wyle wysedome shall not entre into a frowarde soule, nor dwell in the bodye that is subdued vnto synne. For the holy goost abhorreth fained mourtour, and withdraweth him selfe frō the thoughtes that are wythout vnderstandyng, and where wickednes hath the vpper hande, he flieth from thēce.

Gala.b. * For the spirit of wisdom is louing, gētle and gracious, and will haue no pleasure in him that speaketh euell with his lyppes.

For GOD is a wytuesse of hys reynes, a true searcher out of his herte, and an hearer of his tōg. * For the spyrte of the Lorde filleth the rounde compasse of the worlde: and the same that vpholdeth all thynges, hathe knowledge also of the voyce. Therfore, he that speaketh vnryghteous thynges cannot be hid, * neither maye he escape the iudgement of reprofe. And wyle inquisitiō shalbe made for the thoughtes of the vngodlye, and the reporte of hys wordes shall come vnto God, so that his wickednes shalbe punished. For the eare of gelousye heareth all thynges, and the noyse of the grudgynges shal not be hyd. Therfore, beware of murmurynge, wherbe is nothyng worthe, and refrayne youre tonge frome sclaunder. * For there is no worde so darcke and secrete, that it shall goe for naughte: and the mouth that speaketh lyes, slayeth the soule. O seke not youre owne death in the errour of your life, * destroye not youre selues thorowe the workes of youre owne handes. For God hathe not made death, neither hath he pleasure in the destruction of the lyuynge. For he created all thinges, that they myghte haue their beynge: yea, all the people of the earthe hathe he made that they shoulde haue healthe, that there shoulde be no destruction in them, and that the kyngdome of hell shoulde not be vpon earth (for ryghteousnes is euerlastyng and immortall, but vnryghteousnesse bryngeth death.) Neuertheles, the vngodlye call her vnto theym, bothe wyth woordes and workes: and whyle they thynche to haue a frende of her, they come to noughter for the vngodly that are confederate wyth her, and take her parte, are worthye of death.

Righteous. BVt the * soules of the righteous are in the hād of God, & the paine of death shal not touche them. * In the sighte of the vnwise they appeared to dye, & their ende is taken for very destructiō. The way of the righteous is iudged to be bitter destructiō, but they are in rest. And thoughe they suffre payne before men, * yet is their hope full of immortalitie. They are punished but in few thinges, neuertheles, in many thinges shal they be wel rewarded. For God proueth thē, & findeth the mete for him selfe: yea, as the gold in the fornace, doeth he trye them, and receaueth them as a diet offerynge, and when the tyme commeth, they shalbe looked vpon. * The righteous shall shine as the sparkes that renne throwe the redde busche. * They shall iudge the nacyons, and haue dominion ouer the people, and their Lorde shall raygne for euer. They that put their truste in hym, shall vnderstande the trueth, and suche as be faythfull, wyll agree vnto hym in loue: for his chosen shall haue giftes and peace. * But the vngodly shalbe punished according to their owne ymaginacyons, for they haue despysed the righteous, and forsaken the Lorde. Who so despyseth wysedome and nurtoure, he is vnhappye, and as for the hope of suche, it is but vayne, their labours vnfrutefull, and their workes vnprofytable. Their wyues are vndiscrete, and their chyldren most vngodlye. Their creature is cursed. Blessed is rather the baren and vndefyled, whiche hathe not knowen the synfull bedde: she shall haue frute in the rewarde of the holy soules. * And blessed is the gelded, which with his handes hath wrought no vnrighteousnes, nor ymagyned wycked thynges agaynste God. For vnto hym shalbe gyuen the specyall gyfte of fayth, and the moste acceptable porcion in the temple of God. For glorynge is the frute of good labourē, and the roote of wisedome shall neuer fade awaye. As for the childre of aduouterers, they shal come to an ende, and the sede of an vnrighteous bed shalbe rooted oute. And thoughe they lyue longe, yet shall they be nothyng regarded, & their last age shalbe withoute honoure. Chaste. OHow fayre is a chaste generacyon with vertue! The memorial thereof is immortal, for it is knowen wyth God & with mē. Whē it is present, mē take example therat, & if it go away, yet they desyre it. It is alway crowned & holdē in honoure, and winneth the reward of the vndefyled battayle. But the multitude of vngodlye chyldren is vnprofytable: and the thynges that are planted with whoredome shall take no depe roote, nor laye any faste foundacyō. * Though they be grene in the braunches for a tyme, yet they shalbe shaken with the winde: for they stand not fast and throwe the behemencie of the wynde they shall be roted out. For the vnperfecte braūches shalbe broken, their frute shalbe vnprofytable and sowre to eate: yea, mete for nothyng. And whyr al the children that are borne of the wycked, must beare recorde of the wyckednesse agaynste theyr fathers and mothers when they be axed. But though the ryghteous be ouertaken with deth, yet shal he be in rest. Age is an honorable thynge: neuertheles, it standeth not only in the legth of tyme, nor in the multitude of yeres, but a mās wisdō is the graie heere, & an vnspotted life is the olde age. He pleased God, & was beloued of him; so that whereas where as he lyued amõg sinners, he trãslated him. * yea, sodenly was he take away, to the intent that wickednes should not alter his vnderstandynge, and that hypocrisie should begile his soule. For the craftie bewitchyng of lyes make good thinges darcke, the vnstedfastnesse also of wickednesse of volupteous desyre, turne alter the vnderstanding of the symple. Thoughe he was soone dead, yet fulfilled he muche tyme. For his soule pleased GOD: therefore hasted he to take him awaye from among the wicked. This the people se, and vnderstande it not: they laye not vp suche thinges in their heartes: how that the louynge fauour and mercy of God is vpõ his sayntes, and that he hathe respecte vnto his chosen. Thus the righteous that is deade, condempneth the vngodlye whiche are liuinge: and the youth that is soone brought to an ende, the long lyfe of the vnrygheteous. For they se the ende of the wyse, but they vnderstande not what God hath deuysed for hym, and wherefore the Lorde hathe taken hym awaye. And why: they se him and dyspyse him, therfore shall God also laughe them to scorne: So that they them selues shall dye heareafter (but without honour) yea, in shame amõg the deade for euermore. For without anye boyce shall he burst those that be pufft vp, and remoue them frome the foundacyons, so that they shall be layed waste vnto the vyghest. They shall mourne, and their memorial shall perish. So they beyng afrayed, shall remẽbre their sinnes: & they owne wickednes shal bewraye them.

Mat. 19. c

Then shal the righteous stãd in great stedfastnes against such as haue dealt extremely with them, and take away theyr labours. When they se it, they shall be vexed with horyble feare, and shall wondre at the hastynesse of the sodayne health: groynge for very dyssresse of mynde, and shall saye within them selues, hauynge inwarde sorowe, and mournynge for very angwysshe of mynde. These are they, whome we sometyme had in derysion, and tessed vpon. * We foles thoughte theyr lyfe very madnes: & their ende to be wythout honour. But lo, howe they are coũted amonge the children of God, and their porcyon is amonge the sayntes. Therfore we haue erred frõ the waye of truth, the light of yghteousnes hath not shyned vnto vs, and Sunne of vnderstandynge rose not vp vpon vs. We haue werped oure selues in the way of wyckednesse and destruction. Tedyous wayes haue we gone: but as for the waye of the Lorde we haue not known. What good hathe oure pryde done vnto vs? Or what profyte hathe the pompe of richesse brought vs? * All those thinges are passed awaye lyke a shadow, and as a messenger rennynge before: as a shippe that passeth ouer the waues of the water, * whiche whẽ it is gone by, the trace therof cannot be founde, neyther the path of it in the floudes. Or as a birde that flyeth thorow in the ayre, and no man can se anye token where she is flowen, but onely heareth the noyse of her wynges, beatynge the lyghte wynde, partynge the ayre thorowe the vehemencye of her goynge, and flyeth on, thynge her wynges, where as afterwarde no token of her waye can be founde. Or lyke as when an arowe is shot at a mark, it parteth the ayre, which immediatlye commeth together againe, so that a mã cannot know where it went thorowe. Euen so we in like maner, as soone as we wer borne, beganne immedyatly to drawe to our ende, and haue shewed no token of vertue, but are consumed in our owne wyckednesse. Such wordes shall they that haue synned speake in the hel: * for the hope of the vngodly is like a drye thistell floure (or dust) that is blowē away wyth the wynd: lyke a thinne scome that is scatred abrode with the storme: like as the smoke whiche is dyspersed here and there wyth the wynde, and as the remembraunce of a straunger, that taryeth for a daye, and then departeth. * But the righteous shal liue for euermore: their rewarde also is wyth the Lorde: and their remembraunce wyth the hiest. Therfore shal they receiue a gloryous kingdome, and a beautiful crowne of the Lordes hande: for with hys ryghte hande shall he couer them: and with his owne holy arme, shall he defende them. Hys geloufie also shall take awaye the harnesse, and he shall weapon the creature to be auẽged of the enemies. * He shal put on righteousnesse for a brestplate, and take sure iudgement in stede of an helmet, The inuincible sheelde of equitie shall he take, his cruel wrath shal he sharpen for a speare, and the whole cõpasse of the world, shal fight wyth him agaynst the vnwyse. Then shall the thonder bolttes go oute of the lyghtninges, and come out of the raine bow of the clouds to the place appoynted: oute of the harde stony indignacyon, there shall fall thicke hayles, and the water of the sea shalbe wroth agaynst thẽ, and the floudes shall runne roughly together: yea, a mighty wind shal stãde vp against thẽ, & a storme shal scatre them abrode. Thus the vnrighteous dealing of thẽ shal lyeng al the lande to a wildernesse, & wickednesse shall ouerthrowe the dwellynges of the myghtie. The. vi. Chapter.

dinge and knowledge of all oure workes: For he hathe geuen me the true science of these thynges: so that I knowe, howe the worlde was made, and the powers of the elementes: the beginnynge, endynge, and middest of the tymes: how the tymes alter, howe

howe one goeth after an other, & how they are fulfilled, the course of the yere: the ordynaūces of the starres: the nature & kyndes of beastes: the furiousnes of beastes: the power of the wyndes: the ymaginacyons of men: the diuersities of yonge plantes: the vertues of rotes, & al suche thinges as are secrete & not loked for, haue I learned: For the workmaster of al thinges hath taughte me wisedō. In her is the spirite of vnderstāding, which is holy, manyfolde, one onelye, subtil, curteous, discreete, quicke, vnspotted, plaine, swete, loning of the thig that is good, sharpe, whiche forbiddeth not to do well, gentle, kinde, stedfast, sure, free, hauing all vertues, circumspecte in all thinges: receyuing al spirites of vnderstanding, beyng cleane & sharpe. For wisedō is nimbler thā all nymble thynges: she goeth thorow and attaineth to al thiges, because of her clennes. For she is the breath of the power of God, & a pure cleane exprelling of the clearnes of almyghty God. Therfore can no vnspotted thing come vnto her: * for she is the brightnes of the euerlasting light, the vnspotted mirrour of the maiesty of God, & the ymage of his goodnes. And for so muche as she is one, she may do all thinges, & beyng stedfast her selfe, she renneth all: & amonge the people conueieth she her selfe into the holy soules. She maketh Gods frendes, & prophetes: For God loueth no mā, but him in whom wisedō dwelleth. For she is more beautifull then the Sunne, & gyueth more lyghte then the starres, and the day is not to be compared vnto her: for vpon the naye commeth nyghte. But wickednesse cannot ouercome wisedome: and foolish pelle maye not be with her.

WIsedome reacheth from one ende to an other myghtely, & louingly doeth she ordre all thynges, I haue loued her, & laboured for her, euē fro my youthe vp: I did my diligēce to marry my self with her, such loue had I vnto her beautie. Who so hathe the companye of God, commeth her nobilitie: yea, the Lorde of all thinges, hym selfe loueth her. For she is the scholemaistresse of the nurtour of God, and the chofer oute of hys worckes. If a man wolde vse richesse in this life, what is rycher then wisedome, that worketh al thinges? Thou wilt say: vnderstandynge worketh. What is it amonge all thynges, that worketh more then wisedome? If a mā loue vertue and righteousnesse, let him labour for wisedō, for the hath great vertues. And why? she teacheth sobernesse & prudence, righteousnes and strength, which are such thinges as mē can haue nothyng more profitable in theire lyfe. If a man desyre muche knowledge, she can tel the thiges that are paste, and discerne thinges for to come: she knoweth the subtelties of wordes, and can expounde darcke sentences. She can tell of tokens, & wonderous thynges, or euer they come to passe, and the endes of all tymes, & ages. So I purposed after thys maner: I wyll take her vnto my company, & cōmune louingly with her: no doubt, she shal gene me good counsaile, & speake confortablye vnto me in my carefulnesse and greefe. For her sake shall I be wel & honestly taken amonge the cōmens & lordes of the coūsayle. Though I be yong, yet shal I haue sharpe vnderstandinge, so that I shalbe marueylous in the sight of great men, & the faces of princes shal wōder at me. * Whē I holde my tong, they shal abide my leysure when I speake, they shall loke vpon me, and yf I talke much, they shal lay their handes vpō their mouthe. Moreouer, by the meanes of her I shal obtayne immortalitie, and leaue behind me an euerlasting memorial among them that come after me. I shal set the people in ordre, & the nacyons shalbe subdued vnto me. Horrible tiraūntes shalbe afraied when they do but heare of me: amonge the multytude I shall be counted good, and myghtie in battayle. When I come home, I shall find rest with her: for her company hathe no bytternesse, and her felowshyppe hath no tedyousnesse, but myrth and ioye. Nowe when I consydred these thinges by my selfe, and pondered them in my herte, howe that to be ioyned vnto wysedome is immortalitie, and great pleasure to haue her frendshyp, howe that in the worckes of her handes are infinite rychesse: howe that who so hopeth companye with her, shal be wise: and that he which talketh with her, shall come to honour: I went about seking to gather her vnto me: For I was a lad of a yeppe witte, and had a good vnderstanding. But whē I grew to more vnderstandinge, I came to an vndefiled body. Neuertheles, whē I perceiued that I coulde not kepe my selfe chast, * except God gaue it me, (& that was a point of wisedō also) to knowe whose gift it was) I stepped vnto the Lorde, & besought him, and with my whole hert, I said after this maner.

VAyne are al men, whyche haue not A knowledge of God: * as were they Rom.i.b that out of the good thinges which are ſene: knew not him, that of him ſelfe is euerlastinge. Nether toke they ſo much regarde of the workes that are made, as to know, who was the craftesman of them but ſome toke the fyre, ſome the wynde or ayre, ſome the courſe of the ſtarres, ſome the water, ſome toke Sunne and Moone, or the lyghtes of heauen whyche rule the earthe, for goddes. But thoughe they had ſuche pleaſure in their beuye, that they thoughte them to haue bene Goddes: yet ſhould they haue knowen, how much more fayrer is he that made them. For the maker of beawte hath ordeyned al theſe thynges. Or if thei marueled at the power & workes of thē, they ſhould haue perceaued therby, that he which made theſe thinges, is mightier then they. For by the greatneſſe & beu- B tye of the creature, the maker thereof maye playnly be knowē. Notwithſtanding they are the leſſe to be blamed, that ſeke God, & would fynde him, and yet myſſe. And why? for ſo muche as they go aboute in his workes and ſeke after them, it is a token, that they regarde and holde muche of hys workes that are ſene, howebeit they are not wholy to be excuſed. For if their vnderſtādynge and knowledge be ſo greate, that they can diſcerne the worlde and the creatures, why do they not rather fynde oute the Lorde therof? fashioneth it after the similitude of a man, or maketh it like some beast, or else he wrappeth it over with red, and paynteth it, and looke what foule spot is in it, he casteth some colour upon it. Then maketh he a convenient tabernacle for it, setteth it in the wal, & maketh it fast with yron, prouydynge so for it, lest it happen to fal: for it is well knowen, that it cannot helpe it selfe: And why? it is but an ymage, & must of necessite be helped. The goeth he & offreth of his goodes vnto it, for his children, & for his wyfe: he seketh helpe at it, he asketh counceil at it: he is not ashamed to speake vnto it that hathe no soule: for healthe, he maketh his peticiō vnto him that is sicke, for lyfe, he prayeth vnto him that is dead: he calleth vpon him for helpe, that is not able to helpe him selfe: & to lend him a good iourney, he prayeth hym that maye not go. And in all the thynges that he taketh in hande (whether it be to optayne any thynge, or to worcke) he prayeth vnto him, that can do no maner of good.

¶ The. xiiij. Chapter.

A Gayne, another man purposynge to saile, and beginning to take his iourney thorowe the ragynge sea, calleth for helpe vnto a stocke, that is farre weaker then the tree that beareth him. For as for it, couetousnes of money hathe founde it out, & the craftesman made it with his conynge: But thy prouydēce (O father, gouerneth al thynges from the begynnyng:

Ec.14.b * For thou hast made a waye in the sea, and a sure pathe in the myddest of the waues: declarynge thereby, that thou hast power to helpe in all thynges: yea, thoughe a man wente to the sea wythoute chyppe.

Gen.6.b Neuertheles, that the worckes of thy wisdome shoulde not be dayne, * thou hast caused an arche to be made: and therefore do menne committe their lyues to a smale pece of wodde, passynge ouer the sea in a chyppe, and are saued. * For in the olde tyme also when the proude Gyauntes perysshed, he (in whome the hope was left to increase the worlde) wente into the chyppe, whyche was gouerned thorowe thy hand, and so lefte seede behynde hym vnto the worlde. For happye is the tree, where thorowe ryghteousnesse commeth: but cursed is the pdol that is made with hādes: * yea, both it, and he that made it. Ye, because he made it: and if, because it was called God, where as it is but a frayle thynge. * For thy vngodlye and his vngodlynes are both like abhominable vnto God. Euen so the worcke and he that made it also, shalbe punished together. Therefore shall there a plage come vpon the Idoles of the heathen: for out of the creatures of GOD, they are become an abhominacion, & temptaciō vnto the soules of men, and a snare for the fete of the vnwyse. And why? the sedyng oute of Idoles is the begynnynge of whordome, and the inuentyng vp of them is the destruction of lyfe. For they were not from the begynnyng, neither shall they contynue for euer. The welthy ydelnes of men hath founde them out vpon earth, therefore shall they come shortely to an ende. (When a father mourned for his sonne that was taken awaye fro him, he made him an ymage (in all the haste) of hys deade sonne: and so beganne to worshyppe him as God, which was but a dead man, and ordened hys seruauntes to offre vnto hym. Thus by processe of tyme, and thorowe an vngracyous custome, this errour was kept: as a law, & tyrauntes compelled men by violence to honour ymages. As for those that were so farre of, that men might not worship them presently, they pyctured brought fro farre (yhe the ymage of a kynge whome they would honour) to the intēt that with great diligence they mighte worshyp hym which was farre of, as though he had bene present. Agayne, the synguler connynge of the craftesman gaue the ygnorannte also a great occasion to worship ymages. For the worckeman wyllynge to do him a pleasure that set him a worcke, laboured withal his connynge to make the ymage of the beste fashiō. And so (thorowe the bewtye of the worcke) the comō people was disceaued, in so muche that they toke hym nowe for a God, which a litle afore was but honoured as a manne. And thys was the errour of mans life, whē mē (eyther for to serue their owne affection, or to do some pleasure vnto kynges) ascribed vnto stones & stockes, the name of God, whiche ought to be geuē vnto no manne. Moreouer, thys was not ynough for them that they erred in the knowledge of God: but where as they lyuedin the greate warres of ygnorannce, those many and greate plages called they peace. For either they slue their owne children, and offred them, or did sacrifice in the night seasō, or els helde vnreasonable watches: so that they kepte neither life nor mariage cleane: but ether one slewe another to death maliciously, or els grened his neighboure with aduoutrye. And thus were all thynges myxte together, blond, mānaugh ter, theft, dissimulaciō, corruption, vnfaithfulnesse, sedicion, periurye, disquietynge of good men, vnthākfulnes, vnclynge of soules, chaungynge of byrthe, vnstedfastnesse of maryage, mysorder of aduoutrye and vncleannesse. And why? the honourynge of abhominable ymages is the cause, the be-tyming & ende of all euel. For they that worshyp Idols, ether they are mad when they be merp, or prophecie lies, or lyue vngodly, or els lightely forsweare thē selues. For in so muche as their truste is in the Idols (whiche haue neither soule nor vnderstandyng) though they sweare falsely, yet they thinke it shall not hurt them. Therefore cōmeth a great plage vpon them, and that worthely: for they haue an euel opinion of God, geuing hede vnto Idols, swearing vnustly to disceaue, & despising righteousnes. For theyr swearing is no vertue, but a plage of thē that sin, and goeth euer with the offence of the vngodly.

¶ The. xv. Chapter.

A BVt thou (O our God) art swete, longe sufferynge, & true, & in mercye ordrest thou al thynges. Though we synne, yet are we thine, for we know thy stregth. If we sinne not, thē are we sure, that thou regardest vs. For to know thee, is perfecte righteousnes: yea, to knowe thy righteousnes & power, is the roote of immortalite.

As for the thing that men haue founde out thorow their euel sciēce, it hath not disceaued vs: as the paynting of the pycture (an vnprofitable labour) & earned ymage, with diuerse colours, whose sight entiseth one ig norant: so that he honoureth, & loueth the

B picture of a dead ymage that hath no soule. Neuertheles, they that loue such euil thinges, are worthy of death: they that trust in thē, they that make thē, they that loue thē, and they that honoure theym. The potter also taketh and tempereth softe earthe, labowreth it, and geueth it the fashyon of a vessell, whatsoeuer serueth for oure vse: and so of one pece of claye he maketh some clene vessel for seruice, and some contrary.

But whereto euerye vessell serueth, that knoweth the potter him selfe. So with his vaine laboure he maketh a god of the same claye: this doth euen he, which a litle afore was made of earth him selfe, and within a litle while after (when he dyeth) turneth to

C earth agayne. Notwithstādyng, he careth not the more because he shall laboure, nor because his life is short: but striueth to excell goldsmythes: the siluer smithes and coppersmithes, and taketh it for an honour to make vayne thynges. For hys hearte is ashes, his hope is but vayne earth, and his lyfe is more vile then claye, for so muche as he knoweth not his own maker, that gaue him hys soule to worche, & breathed in him the breth of lyfe. They counte oure lyfe but a pastyme, and oure conuersacion to be, but a market, and that men shonld euer be getynge, and that by euell meanes. Mowre he that of earth maketh frayle vessels & ymages, knoweth him selfe to offende aboue all other. All the enemyes of thy people, and that holde them in subiection, are vnwyse, vnhappye, & exceadynge proude vnto theyr owne soules, for they iudge all the Idols of the heathen to be goddes, which neither haue eye sighte to se, nor noses to smell, nor eares to heare, nor fingers or handes for to grope: & as for their fete, they are to slowe to goe. For man made theym, and he that hathe but a borowed spirite, fashioned thē. But no man cā make a God like vnto him: for seynge he is but mortall hym selfe, it is but mortall that he maketh with vnrighteous handes. He hym selfe is better then they whome he worshypped, for he lyued thoughe he was mortal, so dyd neuer they. yea, they worshyp beastes also, whiche are moste miserable: for compare thynges that can not fele vnto them, and they are worse then those. Yet is there not one of these beastes, that with his sight cā behold any good thyng, nether haue they geuen prayse nor thanckes vnto God.

A FOr these and such other thynges haue they suffred worthy punishment, and thorowe the multytude of beastes are they roted out. In steade of the whiche punishementes thou haste graciously ordred thyne own people, & geuen thē their desire that they longed for: a new & straūge tast, Nu. xi. g

* preparing thē quailes to eat their meate: to thintent that (by the thinges which were shewed and sent vnto them) they that were so gredy of meate, myghte be withdrawen euen from the desire that was necessarye. But these within shorte tyme were brought vnto ponerte, and tasted a new meate. For it was requisite that (with out any excuse) destruction shoulde come vpon those which bled tyranny, and to shewe onely vnto the other, howe their enemyes were destroyed.

* For when the cruel woodenes of the beastes came vpon thē, they perysshed thorow Nu. xxi. b

B the stynges of the cruell serpentes. Not withstanding, thy wrath endured not perpetually, but they were put in feare for a lytle season, that they might be reformed, hauinge a token of saluacion, to remembre the cōmaundement of thy law. For he that conuerted, was not healed by the thynge that he sawe, but by the, O sauioure of al. So in this thou shewedst thyne enemyes, that it is thou, whiche deliuerest from all euell. As for them * when they were bitten Exo. x. b with gre hoppers and flyes, they died, for the were worthy to perishe by suche: But nether the teeth of dragons, nor of venymous wormes ouercame thy children, for thy mercy was euer by them and helped them.

Therefore

Therfore were they punished to remembre ¶ thy wordes, but hastelye were they healed agayne, lest they shoulde fall into so depe forgetfulnes, that they mighte not ble thy helpe. It was neither herbe nor plaister that restored them to healeth, but thy worde (O Lorde) whiche healeth all thynges. It is thou (O Lorde) that hast the power of lyfe and death: * thou ledest vnto deathes dore, Deut.32.b and bryngest vp againe. But man thorow 1.Re,2.b. wyckednes slaieth his own soule, and whē his spirit goth forth, it turneth not againe, neyther maye he call agayne the soule that is taken away. It is not possyble to escape thy hande. For the vngodly that would not knowe the, were punished by the strength of thyne arme: with straunge waters, hay-les and raynes were they persecuted, and thorowe fyre were they consumed. For it Fier. was a wonderous thynge that fyre might do more then water whyche quencheth al thynges: but the worlde is the auenger of the righteous. Some tyme was the fire so tame, that the beastes whiche were sent to punissche the vngodlye, burnt not: and that because they shoulde se, and knowe, that they were persecuted with the punishemēt b of God. And some time burnte the fire in the gayne, thou hast fed thyne own people with Aungels fode, and sent them breade readye from heauen (without their labour) hepng verye pleasaunt and of good taste. And to shewe thy swetenesse and kyndenesse vnto thy childrē, thou gauest euery one their desire, so that euery man myght take what lyked him best. But the snowe and yse abode the violence of the fyre, and melted not: that they myght knowe, that the fire burnyng in the hayle and rayne, destroyed the fruite of the enemyes: the fyre also forgatte hys strength againe: that the righteous might be nourished. For the creature that serueth the (whiche arte the maker) is fearce in punishynge the vnrighteous, but is easy and gentle to do good, vnto suche as put theyr trust in the. Therfore did all thinges alter ¶ at the same tyme, and were all obedient vnto thy grace, which is the nose of all thyn-ges, according to the desyre of them that Deut.8.a. had nede therof: that thy children (O lord) Wisd 4.a whom thou louest, might knowe, * that it is not nature and the growynge of fruites that fedeth menne, but that it is thy word, which preserueth them that put their trust in thee. For lorde what myghte not be destroied with the fire, as sone as it was warmed with a little Sunne beame, it mel-teth: that all men might knowe, that thākges ought to be geuen vnto the before the Sunne ryse, and that thou ought est to be worshypped before the daye spryng. For the hope of the vnthanckefull shall melte away as the winter yse, and perishe as water, that is not necessarie.

and thy councels cānot be expressed: Rom.xi.e therfore men do erre, that wyl not be vnrighteous thought to haue thy holy peo ple in subiection, they were bounde with the bandes of darknes & long night, shut vnder the roofe, thynckynge to escape the euerlastynge wysedome. And while they thought to be hyd in the darckenes of their synnes, they were scattered abrode in the very middest of the darcke couerynge of forgetfulnes, put to horrible feare and wonderously vexed: for they had no corner where they b myghte kepe them frome feare (because the sounde came downe and vexed them): yea, manye terrypble and straunge bilions made them afrayed. No power of the fire might gene them lyghte, nether myght the cleare flammes of the starres lyghten that horryble nyghte. For there appeared vnto them a sodayne fire, very dredful: At the whiche (when they sawe nothynge) they were so afrayed, that they thoughte the thynge whiche they sawe, to be the more fearfull.

* As for the sorcerye and enchauntemente Exo.7.b that they vsed, it came to derision, and the prande wysedome was brought to shame.
For they that promysed to dryue awaye the fearefulnesse and drede from the weake soules, were sycke for feare of them selues, and that with scorne. And thoughe none of the wonders feared them, yet were they a-frayed at the beastes whyche came vpon theym, and at the hyssinge of the serpentes. In so muche that wyth tremblynge they sowned, and sayde: they sawe not the ayze, whiche no man yet maye escape. For C it is an heuye thynge, when a mans owne conscience beareth recorde of hys wycked-nes and condempneth hi. And whych a bered and wounded conscyence, taketh euer cruell thynges in hande. * Fearfulnes is Pſa.47.a nothynge els, but a declarynge that a man seeketh helpe and defence, to aunswere for hym selfe. And looke howe muche lesse the hope is within, the more is the vnceretente of the mater, for the whyche he is punyshed. But they that came in the mighty nyght: slepte the slepe that fell vpon theym frome vnder, and frome aboue: some tyme were they afrayed thorowe the feare of the wonders, and some tyme they were so weake that they sowned wyth all: for an hastye and sodayne fearfulnesse came vpon

them. Afterwarde, yf anye of them had fallen, he was kept and shut in prisonne, but without chaines. But yf any dwelt in a village, if he had not ben an hearde or hulbād mā, he suffred intollerable necessitie: for they wer al bounde with one chaine of darknes. Whether it wer a blasing winde, or a swete songe of the birdes, amonge the thycke braūches of the trees, or the vehemencye of hasty running water, or greate noyse of the falling downe of stones or the playing and running of beastes, whome they saw not, or the mightye noyse of rorying beastes, or the soūde that answereth againe i the hie mountaines: it made thē sowne for very feare. For al the erth shined with clearelight, & no mā was hyndred in his laboure. Onelye vpon thē ther fel an heny night, an ymage of darknes that was to come vpon thē: yea, they were vnto them selues, the moste heuye and horrible darknes.

¶ The. xviii. Chapter.

A NEuertheles, thy sainctes had a verye great lighte, and the enemies hearde their voyce, but they saw not the figure of thē.) And because they suffered not the same thinges, they magnified thē: and they that wer vexed afore (because they wer not hurte nowe) thanched the, & besought the, O God, that ther might be a difference.

Ex.14.b * Therfore, had they a burning piller of fire to lede them into the vnknowen waye, and thou gauest them the Sunne, for a free gifte withoute anye hurte. Reason it was that they shoulde wante light, and be put in the prison of darknes, which kept thy children in captiuite, by whome the vncorrupte light of the lawe of the worlde was for to be geuen. * When they thoughte to slaye the babes of the vngodlye (one being layed oute, and preserued to be leader Ex.14.c. vnto the other) * thou broughtest oute the whole multitude of thy childrē, & destroydst these in the myghty water. Of that myghte were oure fathers certified afore that they knowynge vnto what othes they hadde geuen credēce, might be of good cheare. Thus thy people receaued the healthe of the righteous, but the vngodly wer destroyed. For like as thou hast hurte oure enemyes, so hast thou promoted vs whome thou calledest afore. For the righteous children of the good men offered secretlye, and ordered the lawe of righteousnes vnto vnite: That the iuste shoulde receaue good and euyll in like maner, singing praises vnto the father of al men. Againe, there was hearde an vncōueniente voyce of the enemyes, and a pitcous crie for the childrē that wer bewailed.

C The maister & the seruaunt were punished in lyke maner. For they altogether had innumerable that dyed one deathe. * Neither were the lyuinge sufficiente to burye the Ex.12.c. deade, for in the twynclynge of an eye, the noblest nacion of them was destroyed. As oft as God helped them afore, yet wouldest not make thē beleue: but in the destruccion of the firste borne, they knowledged, that it was the people of God. For while all thinges were styl, and when the nyghte was in the middest of her course, thy Almightye woorde (O Lorde) leapte downe from heauen oute of thy royall trone, as a rough mā of warre, in the middest of the lande that was destroyed: and the charpe swearde performed thy strayte cōmaundement, standinge and fillinge all thynges with death: yea, it stode vpon the earth and reached vnto the heauen. Then the syghte of the euell dreames vexed them sodaynlye, and fearefulnes came vpon them vnwares. Then laye there one here, another there, halfe dead, halfe quicke, & shewed the cause of his death. For the visions that vexed thē shewed them these thynges afore: So that they were not ignorāunte, wherefore they perysshed. The tentacion of deathe touched the righteous also, and amonge the multitude in the wyldernesse ther was insurrecciō, but thy wrath endured not longe. For the blameles man wente in al the haste, and toke the battayle vpon him, broughte forth the weapen of his ministracion: euen prayer, and the censours of reconcilynge: fearte hym selfe agaynste the wrathe, and so brought the miserye to an ende: declarynge thereby that he was thy seruaunte. For he ouercame not the multitude with bodelye power, nor with weapens of myghte: But with the worde he subdued him that vexed him, puttinge them in remembraunce of the othe and couenāute made vnto the fathers. For when the deade were fallen downe by heapes one vpon another, he stode in the middest, pacified the wrath, and parted the way vnto liuinge. * And why? in his longe garmēt was all the dewtie, and in the foure Ex.28.b. rowes of the stones was the glorye of the fathers grauen, and thy maiestie was written in the crowne of hys heade. Vnto these the destroyer gaue place, and was afrayed of them: For it was onelye a temptacion worthy of wrathe.

AS for the vngodlye, the wrath came vpō them without mercye vnto the ende. For he knew before what shuld happē vnto thē: how that (whē they had cōsēted to let thē go, & had sēt out with great diligence) they wold repent, & followe vpon thē. * For when they were yet mournyng & makyng lamentacion by the graues of the Exo.14.a
